Trawler Fires at Russian Steamer, Gibraltar Report Asserts.

Insurgents Raise Flag of Bourbons

Plane Bombs, Machine Guns Rake Socialists' Lines at Madrid.

Gibraltar, Nov. 25 (AP).—A Spanish insurgent trawler fired on a Russian steamer crossing the Gibraltar straits westward, it was reported here today. The Russian ship was not hit. The trawler was believed one of several patrolling the straits for the insurgents.

2 Ships Held Searched.

Gibraltar (Thursday) Nov. 26 (U.P.). Four armed Spanish nationalist trawlers, accompanied by a rebel gunboat, were reported today to have halted and searched two neutral ships in the Straits of Gibraltar. The trawlers, from the insurgent base at Ceuta, were said to have searched a Latvian vessel and a Danish ship.

It was reported the trawlers were observed from Gibraltar as they searched several other unidentified craft. The trawlers were said to be making a constant patrol of the straits.

Royalist Flag Raised.

Madrid, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Gen. Francisco Franco's rebels raised the red and gold flag of the monarchy above the Casa de Velasquez on Madrid's northern outskirts tonight after failing in an attempt to rescue 2,000 trapped comrades in the Hospital Clinico.

The rebels were hurled back from University City by loyalists who had surrounded the hospital. The defenders, soldiers of fortune of all nations, fought off the assault against murderous machine gun and artillery fire in a two-hour battle.

Meanwhile, government officials charged that Spaniards and Germans now residing in the German embassy have organized "in a military fashion to attack the legal government."

In Valencia, Minister of Interior Angel Galarza charged that the German consul there "disappeared" and that a search of the consulate revealed "documents of great interest." He also said 200 gas masks and signaling apparatus were found.

Planes Bomb Madrid.
By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 25.—Four insurgent bombing planes darted over Madrid today, spat machine-gun bullets on Socialist lines, bombed the model prison, and soared away before Madrid planes had time to give combat.

Bombs were dumped on the military hygiene and sanitation building.

Many were wounded when one of the aerial bombs wrecked a two-story house in Gusman el Bueno street.

Other explosive bombs hit the Lozoya water reservoir, between Bravo Murillo and Santa Engracia streets, and the North Station.

Another house on Francisco Ricci street was blasted.

Twelve government planes took the air after the raid and patrolled the skies against a return visit of the enemy ships, which concentrated their machine-gun fire on Socialist troops manning barricades on the northwestern and western edges of Madrid.

An empty cartridge case crashed through the glass roof of a passageway between the garage and chauffeurs' quarters of the American embassy.

Assault Is Vigorous.

The Madrid defenders threw every available ounce of manpower into their struggle to clean the Fascists out of the University City area as the siege of Madrid continued after three weeks of inconclusive fighting.

Tonight a heavily guarded motor caravan was being assembled to carry the 55 Americans scheduled to leave the American Embassy before daybreak tomorrow for Valencia.

The Americans included Mrs. Bessie Castle Fernandez, Miss Antonia Castle Fernandez, Col. Stephen O. Fuqua, U. S. Military Attache; Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Succar and William Carney, New York Times correspondent, all of Washington, D. C.

While the embassy staff completed last-minute preparations for the evacuation, Madrid officials voiced suspicions some other embassies were "abusing the right of asylum."

A close, if courteous, watch was set on most missions, including the British, where residents were "invited" to show their identification papers before entering the grounds after dark.

The embassy guard watches were established after semiofficial allegations that the German Embassy Building seized and sealed, with the Italian Embassy the day before, had been a "veritable fortress."

These officials said militia had seized in the German building 21 revolvers, 12 shotguns, 1 anti-aircraft piece, 7 rifles, 1 bomb thrower, 3 cases of hand grenades, 1 case of shell fuses and 4 cutlasses.

Subsequent investigation, it was

Last Feudal State Is a Utopia, Tiny Island's Rulers Say Here

Seigneur and Dame de Serk, Here to Visit Former's Kin in Bethesda, Have No Crime, Jobless or Social Problems—and No Automobiles.

A modern Utopia where peaceful prosperity functions under sixteenth century laws was described yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Hathaway, the Seigneur and Dame de Serk, overlords of the last feudal state in the world.

In Washington "to do a bit of sight-seeing" and to visit the seigneur's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hathaway, of 5016 Moorland lane, Bethesda, Md., the monarchs told something of their miniature state, which flourishes without any threat or intrusion of crime, unemployment or social unrest.

The Island of Serk is in the English Channel and has been a feudal municipality since Queen Elizabeth decreed it so in 1565, when she granted the island conditionally to Sir Helier de Carteret on condition that he colonize it with 40 families. In 1732 it passed out of the hands of the De Carteret family, and eventually came to Mrs. Hathaway's great-grandmother in 1852. Today, the Hathaways are overlords just as Seigneur de Carteret was. They take orders only from the King of England in council.

But though they rule Sark by sixteenth century laws, they live in a house built 200 years before Mount Vernon, and retain an ancient quietude on their island by prohibiting automobiles, they are both strictly twentieth century in appearance. Mrs. Hathaway, who was Seigneu rde Serk until her marriage in 1929, is a queenly woman with a distinguished crown of graying hair. Her husband was born in New Jersey and educated at Yale.

Fourth Largest Island.

"Sark is the fourth largest of England's channel islands," Mrs. Hathaway said. "It is 3½ miles long and 1½ miles wide, but because of its numerous coves and bays, it has 35 miles of coast.

"Despite its minute size, it has a remarkable history. Its written record begins in 565 A. D. when St. Magliore, Bishop of Dol, in

A.F.L. Spurns Plan to Form Labor Party

Session Also Rejects Move to Support Farmer-Laborites.

Use of One-Man Trolleys Here Is Condemned at Tampa Parley.

By the United Press.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 25.—The American Federation of Labor convention tonight refused to start or support a new Labor party or a Farmer-Labor Party in the United States after leaders warned that such action would lead to the complete destruction of the trade union movement.

The decision to reaffirm the federation's traditional nonpartisan policy came after its chieftains were assailed from the floor for following a 'do-nothing" program and further emphasized the cleavage among leaders which already has resulted in the indefinite suspension of ten powerful international unions.

Use of one-man street cars in Washington, D. C., was condemned in an approved resolution offered by Frank J. Coleman, of the Washington Central Labor Union.

Peacemakers at Work.

Resolutions pertaining to the Government service, as adopted, carried these provisions:

That non-civil service employes be used in the postal service only in emergencies.

That the fair labor policy of the postal service be extended to all Government service.

That the civil service retirement law be placed in the hands of an independent administrative agency.

That the United States Employes Compensation Commission be commended for its administration of the law.

That 30-year optional retirement and widows' annuities be authorized in law.

That the executive council cooperate in pressing all legislation for higher Government employment standards.

That custodial employes be removed from purview of the classification act of 1923 and be placed under prevailing schedule of wages.

Arrests Bring Protests.

Arrest of four persons, one a union official, near the convention hall, tonight brought a sharp protest and demands for an investigation from President William Green.

Two men and a woman, who were not booked, were taken into custody for distributing literature prepared by the International Labor Defense, at the doors of the convention hall.

P. M. Austin, local official of the Cannery Workers' Union, the convention was told today by Roy Hawthorne, of New Jersey, delegate of the cannery union, had been arrested late today as he left the convention hall, carrying a copy of yesterday's proceedings.

"This is most reprehensible that such a thing could occur in a free American city," said Green. "And in behalf of the convention, I protest. I shall ask representatives of this convention to investigate."

"Seized for Own Safety."

Chief of Police C. J. Woodruff said Austin was arrested at request of his (Austin's) own brother for safety at a cannery near convention hall, where workers are on strike.

The arrests today brought to more than two score the number of persons apprehended in labor disputes since the federation opened its convention here nearly two weeks ago.

The convention today indorsed resolutions bitterly attacking the flogging here last November 30 of three Socialists and of other anti-union labor activities of Tampa citizens.

Meanwhile, peace makers worked behind the scenes in an effort to spur restoration of harmony between the federation and the suspended C. I. O. unionists headed by John L. Lewis, mine leader. Little progress was made, however, and tonight peace hopes were at a low ebb.

Charles P. Howard, head of the Typographical Union and secretary of the C. I. O., conferred today with George M. Harrison, head of the Jury Convicts Peace Officer In 'Slave Case'

Town Marshal Can Avoid 2-Year Sentence by Paying $3,500 Fine.

Verdict in Arkansas Is First Ever Returned Under 1866 Act.

By the Associated Press.

Jonesboro, Ark., Nov. 25.—A Federal court jury convicted Paul D. Peacher, planter-peace officer, today on charges of violating an ancient anti-slavery statute, and he was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $3,500.

Judge John E. Martineau imposed the sentence immediately, despite a jury recommendation of clemency and a request that the 42-year-old Earle, Ark., town marshal not be imprisoned.

The court, however, said he would place Peacher on probation if he paid the fine, making it unnecessary for him to serve the sentence. Judge Martineau fixed bond at $4,000 and gave the defense three days to decide whether to appeal.

The jury convicted Peacher on all of seven counts of an indictment which accused him of falsely arresting a group of colored men and forcing them to work on his farm.

Defendant Calm.

Without comment, Peacher smiled broadly when the verdict was read, after the jury deliberated 2½ hours.

An hour earlier, the jurors asked for instructions from the judge who told them, "Every circumstance in this case points to the guilt of this man in my opinion."

Peacher was said by United States Attorney Fred Isrig to be the first person indicted under the Federal anti-slavery statute passed in 1866.

The defense completed its arguments in the case with a declaration the charges against Peacher were the result of politics, saying the Southern Tenant Farmers Union "is back of this whole situation."

Politics Charged.

"I thought when the election was over this lawsuit would be allowed to die out," Attorney N. S. Lamb told the jury of 11 business men and one farmer.

"There had to be an investigation with the tenant union sending messages to the President and to Gov. Futrell, and the election coming on."

Gordon Dean, special attorney for the Department of Justice who conducted a peonage investigation in the east Arkansas cotton country earlier this year, countered:

"The Government insists Peacher aided in causing these men to be held in involuntary servitude."

The colored men were arrested on charges of vagrancy during a cotton choppers' strike last May. Peacher, who claimed he had a contract with the county to work prisoners, said the eight were known to him as vagrants.

2 Candidates For House Tie In N.H. Contest

Congress May Have to Rule on First Such Deadlock in 110 Years.

By the Associated Press.

The only tied Congressional election in 110 years was studied with keen interest yesterday by House parliamentarians.

Facing a problem which has arisen only twice before in American history, they scanned reports that Arthur B. Jenks (Republican), and Alphonse Roy (Democrat), had run a dead heat in their race for Representative from the first New Hampshire Congressional district. Each candidate received 51,679 votes.

Although he had scant precedent to guide him, House Parliamentarian Louis Deschler suggested that a special election would be the only legal method of breaking the deadlock.

His records show that the last tie occurred in 1826, when John Sargeant and Henry Horn tied in Pennsylvania. The Governor ordered a new election, which Sargeant won by a safe majority.

A decision by lot was declared invalid in Maryland in 1822 when a candidate named Causden was chosen to fill a contested seat. The ballots were re-examined and Causden's opponent won by one vote.

Deschler said the House could take no action in the New Hampshire case until the Secretary of State issued a certificate of election to one of the candidates.

If his opponent still contested the decision, the House would be called upon for a ruling. It has the sole right to pass upon the qualifications of its members.

Thanksgiving To Mix Jollity, ReverenceHere

Brilliant, Crisp Weather Is Promised; Throngs of Visitors Expected.

A mingling of the jovial and reverent spirit will invest Washington today as its citizens settle down to the traditional business of observing Thanksgiving.

To help things along, the weather man has promised a brilliant sun and a touch of autumn crispness in the air. From hovel to mansion, many Washingtonians are remaining at home to celebrate the day with proper trimmings.

In churches throughout the city special services are scheduled. A true theme of Thanksgiving will prevail at various communities, organizations and family groups join to observe the day in a manner unequaled in recent years.

To many it will be "Turkey Day." To others it will be a day of gratitude—a day of religious worship and prayers of thanksgiving for blessings of the past year.

Business, Federal and private, will be at a standstill. Public schools will not open again until Monday.

No one will be forgotten. The less fortunate will be provided for at special ceremonies in the city's missions and welfare homes.

Many Visitors Expected.

Railroads, airlines and bus companies reported but little increase in outgoing traffic. On the other hand, Washington's population will be swelled by visitors from all sections of the country.

Far from the Warm Spring Foundation, where it has been his custom to spend Thanksgiving in recent years, President Roosevelt will observe the day aboard the U. S. S. Indianapolis en route to Buenos Aires.

His official and private families also will be scattered widely. Mrs. Roosevelt plans to spend the holiday at Hyde Park, N. Y., with some of her children and grand children. James Roosevelt is with his father, and Elliott and his family are in Texas.

Secretary of State Hull is in South America, and Postmaster James Farley is in London. Secretary of Labor Perkins will go to New York City, and Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau will be at his home in Dutchess County, N. Y.

Officials Busy Here.

Officials remaining in Washington plan to sandwich their turkey dinners between long hours at their desks. R. Walton Moore, Acting Secretary of State, will spend a busy day studying the Spanish situation. Attorney General Cummings said he would have a "busy

STALIN SPEEDS ARMS OUTPUT; PARIS SEES U. S. CO-OPERATION

Berlin, Explaining Accord for Fight on Communism, Denies Treaty Is of Militaristic Nature.

Fascism Vs. Communism.

Fighting in the Far East yesterday marked the intensified conflict between fascism and communism, which has been brought to the boiling point by the civil war in Spain. The day's developments follow:

Russia reported a Soviet-Japanese military clash in which several Japanese and Manchukuoan soldiers were killed by Soviet frontier guards.

Germany and Japan, revealing details of a secret treaty, declared open warfare on communism.

Joseph Stalin approved speeding up of Russian armament in preparation for war.

Russia spared the life of a German engineer who had been sentenced to death for plotting against the Soviet regime.

France predicted the German-Japanese pact would result in closer co-operation between the United States and France in international affairs.

Italy said the accord against communism does not imply "aggressive action against Moscow."

Clash Reported.

Moscow, Nov. 25 (AP).—The first Soviet-Japanese military clash since conclusion of the Japanese-German alliance against communism was reported today in an official Russian communique.

Several Japanese and Manchukuoan soldiers were allied yesterday in a Far Eastern border clash with Soviet frontier guards, the communique stated.

The Soviet government announced vigorous protest to Japan.

"A Japanese-Manchukuoan detachment of 50 men crossed the Soviet border near Marker and penetrated one mile into Soviet territory," the government said.

"Upon approach of frontier guards, the invaders opened fire, but soon were driven back into their own territory, having abandoned several bodies and numerous articles of Japanese military equipment."

Speeds War Munitions.

Moscow, Nov. 25 (AP).—The usually taciturn Joseph Stalin today approved a new and separate military industry commissariat, which led informed observers to believe he wished to accelerate Russian armament in preparation for war.

The idea was the only one accepted of the 100,000 suggestions offered for the new constitution which Stalin formally presented for ratification by the Eighth All-Union Congress of Soviets.

Stalin, in opening the congress in the Kremlin, delivered his second public address in history, speaking for 2 hours and 15 minutes.

The new ministry, Stalin said, would be evolved from the heavy industry commissariats which have been in charge of armaments.

The major part of Stalin's speech, as secretary-general of the Communist Party, was devoted to an attack on Fascism and assurance that the Communist Party would continue to be the only party in Russia.

Speaking on the day when an anti-Communist agreement between Germany and Japan was announced in Berlin, Stalin told the Congress the new constitution gave moral support to all those fighting Fascism.

Stalin made it plain that the new constitution would in no way change

Treaty Signed.

Berlin, Nov. 25 (AP).—Japan and Germany today signed a pact directed against communism throughout the world and pointed specifically to the Communist Internationale.

Japan thus was brought into the European bloc of authoritarian powers lined up against the spread of bolshevism. (Austria, Hungary and Italy also are supporting anti-Communist campaigns.)

The Japanese-German agreement signed today charged directly that the activities of the Communist Internationale from Moscow "threatened world peace," and asserted future Communist proselyting would not be tolerated by either of the signatories.

The alliance, long reported to have been in effect, bound Japan and Germany for five years to:

1. Consult on co-operative anti-Communist moves.
2. Invite third parties to join them.
3. Exchange police data on the subject.
4. Invoke stiff penalties for internal agitators, and
5. Set up a permanent Japanese-German commission.

Diplomats Witness Signing.

Representatives of all diplomatic missions in Moscow were invited to witness the signing of the agreement by Japanese Ambassador Kintomo Mushakoje and by Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to Great Britain, the right-hand man of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler on foreign affairs.

The document contains a preamble, three articles and a supplementary protocol binding the signatory nations to exchange recommendations to combat communism.

The preamble says:

"Recognizing that the aim of the Communist Internationale known as the Komintern is directed at disrupting and violating existing states with all the means at its command and convinced that to tolerate the Communist Internationale's interference with the internal affairs not only endangers their internal peace and social well-being, but threatens world peace at large; animated by a desire to work in common against Communist disruptive influences, (we) have arrived at the following agreement."

The supplementary protocol dealt with provisions for the interexchange of police data on Communists and called for "strict meas-

G. U. Teacher's Bride of Year Killed in Crash

Mrs. Beatrice Baker, 25, Victim; Husband Faints in Hospital at News.

Mrs. Beatrice Baker, 25, wife of Dr. Charles J. Baker, Dupont Circle Apartments, an instructor at Georgetown University, was killed instantly early today when an automobile in which she was riding collided with a taxicab and overturned at Connecticut avenue and I street, pinning her beneath it.

She was taken to the District Morgue, while her husband, was taken to Emergency Hospital. There he asked for his wife.

When attendants told him they had learned she had been taken to the Morgue, he fainted.

Police said the driver of the automobile was James T. Lowe, 23, of 1309 Floral street northwest, an assistant instructor at the university. Lowe was slightly hurt.

In Evening Clothes.

Mrs. Baker was dressed in evening clothes and black shoes. On her fingers she wore a wedding ring and an amethyst dinner ring.

The car in which Lowe and the Bakers were riding was a heavy touring car. It was going east, and collided with the cab as it turned onto Connecticut avenue. The impact turned it completely over, and spun it so that the upturned hood faced west.

Police said the taxi was driven by Malcolm Crockett, 32, of the 1100 block northwest. Crockett was uninjured.

The Bakers, it was said, had been married a little more than a year.

Major Hesse, Ex-Police Head Of D. C., Dies

Chief of Force in Stormy Days From 1925 to 1929 Succumbs at 64.

Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, 64, who rose from a clerkship to command of Washington's police force in 1925, died last night at his home, 506 A street southeast.

Maj. Hesse, who was retired from the force in 1929 because of physical disabilities, had been seriously ill since February. At his bedside when he died were his brother, Henry Hesse, of the United States Civil Service Commission, and two nieces.

Mild mannered, scholarly and retiring in public, Maj. Hesse was chief clerk of the police department when Maj. Daniel Sullivan died in 1925. He had never walked a beat, swung a nightstick or made an arrest and his appointment as major and superintendent startled him almost as much as it did the city and his fellow officers.

Marked by Disputes.

His administration was a stormy one marked by bickering and jealousies among his administrative officers; attacks from Capitol Hill, led by Representative Thomas Blanton, of Texas, and the sensational trial of Capt. Guy Burlingame.

Blanton attempted to drive Maj. Hesse from office in 1928 when he charged the police chief with tolerating lax enforcement of laws against liquor and gambling. The Texan said he had smelled liquor on the chief's breath when he visited his office.

Rep. Hoeppel, Son Jailed Here; Elder Is First Gay, Then Angry

Cell doors of the District jail last night clanged shut behind Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles J. Hoeppel, as their 11-month-old fight to escape imprisonment on charges of conspiring to sell a West Point appointment ended.

Carrying their own prison uniforms in grips covered with foreign baggage labels, father and son expressed satisfaction over the apparent cleanliness of the jail and asked to be allowed to bathe before they were locked in a cell in the north wing.

"You'll have to bathe whether you want to or not," a jail guard declared.

The Representative and his son were brought here by automobile from Richmond by Deputy Marshal B. A. Delano after they dropped their appeal from a dismissal of a writ of habeas corpus before the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Representative Hoeppel was brimming with indignation over conditions in Richmond's Henrico County Jail, where he had been held since November 7, when Federal agents captured him and his son as fugitives from justice.

"It took Grant four years to capture Richmond, but it only took me 15 minutes after my incarceration in Henrico County Jail to know that rats, bedbugs and other vermin had captured my son and myself," the elder Hoeppel informed reporters in a prepared statement.

Robert Stewart, 16, Is Ground to Death By Trains' Wheels

Knocked from the observation platform of a Central Railroad of New Jersey express, which was bearing him to New York for a gay Thanksgiving party, Robert P. Stewart, 16-year-old son of Dr. Paul M. Stewart, of the Public Health Service, was ground to death beneath the wheels of three trains last night.

Police at Bayonne, N. J., where the accident occurred, said they believed the youth had leaned too far from the platform, and that his head had been struck by a steel girder. He was identified by an automobile license card in his pockets.

Young Stewart was a student at George Preparatory School, at Swarthmore, Pa., where he had played on the football team and distinguished himself as a scholar. He made his home with his parents here, at 2210 Wyoming avenue.

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 25 (AP).—William K. Vanderbilt announces tonight his daughter, Consuelo, the former Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith, would marry Henry Gassaway Davis 3d, Friday at the Vanderbilt's Terminal Island estate here.

Davis, mining fortune heir and grandson of Henry Gassaway Davis, one-time Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, was divorced several months ago from the former Grace Vanderbilt.

Rangers Search For Two Hunters Missing on Ranch

San Perlita, Tex., Nov. 25 (AP).—The strange circumstances under which two hunters vanished a week ago in the fastnesses of the world's largest cattle ranch baffled Texas Rangers tonight.

Bill McMurray, Ranger captain, voiced a belief that the "bodies (of the hunters) have been carried off the ranch."

The Ranger captain, with Sheriff Howard Cragg and a party of 15 picked men, tonight began a systematic search of the million-acre fenced cattle domain, the King ranch. McMurray said already he had arrested two men—a Mexican and a game warden. He did not disclose what connection, if any, they were believed to have had with the disappearance of Luther Blanton, 57, and his son, John, 24.

Siamese Twin, Separated From Dead Brother, Given Good Chance for Recovery by Doctors

By Howard W. Blakeslee.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, Nov. 25.—Simlicio Godino, 29-year-old Siamese twin, lay in a hospital tonight recovering from one of the most unusual operations ever performed, a "detour" surgery which separated him from his dead brother, Lucio.

There was no apparent sign Simplicio had been infected with the rheumatic fever which caused his brother's death last night.

Within 45 minutes after the death of the one twin, four doctors had completed amputation of the dead body.

Barring effects of shock from which Simplicio suffered, his chances of recovery were announced as good.

The Medical Information Bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine described the operation.

The "detour" in these twins was originally made by nature. They were joined, it was explained, very low down, at the level of the last vertebra, by a patch of muscular and cartilagenous tissue, 6 to 7 inches in diameter.

This "cable" between them was about 2 inches long. Through it ran the lower tip of Simplicio's colon, into his brother's body.

In the operation, plastic surgeons first severed the flesh cable without disturbing the connecting vital organ. Then they detoured this end organ out of the body where nature had misplaced it.

It was replaced where it belonged to Simplicio, and by plastic surgery a new exit was fashioned for it.

The brothers' blood, circulatory and nervous systems were almost completely separate. This made it possible to perform an operation from which recovery could be expected.

The first medical records of operations separating Siamese twins are in 1690. Two girls, united by cartilage, front to front, lived after separation.

Medical history shows Siamese twins seldom are separated, and frequently the reason is not that separation would cause death, but that it would end the revenue from exhibitions.

The Godino twins were vaudeville actors, natives of the Philippine Islands. Several years ago they declined an operation which would have severed them then.

The brothers married two sisters, also Filipinos, in Manila in 1929.

Ronald Colman Paid $162,500 by Columbia

A report of Columbia Pictures Corporation to the Securitis Commission revealed yesterday that Ronald Colman, the actor, drew $162,500 for his cinematic services during Columbia's last fiscal year.

The report showed that Frank Capra, a director, received more money than the president of the corporation. Capra drew $208,000 while President Harry Cohn received $182,040.

Roper Denies He Will Leave Post in Cabinet

Commerce Head Visions Era of Understanding and Co-operation.

By Robert C. Albright.

Brushing aside rumors that he will leave the President's Cabinet, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper yesterday forecast a majority of business men will co-operate with Government in a "new era" of understanding, and affirmed his belief in "the objectives of NRA."

Flushing slightly, Roper denied he was "embarrassed" by questioning on his future status in the Cabinet.

"I am glad there are so many people interested in my future," he said.

"I am not going to resign."

As a number of private and semi-governmental organizations strove for leadership in the new move for cordial relations between industry and the Administration, Roper, whose business advisory council is playing a prominent role in the movement, declined to commit himself on rival efforts of Maj. George L. Berry's Council for Industrial Progress meeting here next month.

Agenda Undetermined.

"Who will get there first?" a reporter asked.

"Why should I be concerned with that?" Roper replied. "All roads lead to Rome, I suppose."

Asked if the two groups had the same general objective, he said:

"I do not know enough about the Berry conference. I do not know what their agenda is. I do not know what ours is."

Meantime, the office of Maj. Berry, "co-ordinator for industrial co-operation," answered reports that major trade groups in some of the strongest industries will not participate in the conference Berry has scheduled for December 10 and 11.

"The conference is yet more than two weeks away," the office said in a statement, "and it is impossible at this time to get an adequate picture of what the attendance will be."

The office said "the number and nature" of refusals to attend have been "trivial by comparison with those who have accepted and will attend." It was estimated that 300 individuals, labor groups and trade associations have answered Berry's call.

3,000 Bids Sent Out.

About 3,000 invitations were sent out. Acceptances have not been received from such large industrial groups as steel, automobile, cotton textiles and bituminous coal.

At his press conference yesterday, Secretary Roper said, in response to a question, that "we all are interested in the objective of a co-operative endeavor of all units of our society, economic and social."

Roper said they all should "come together with an understanding to stabilize our society and safeguard our future," but indicated he was not concerned with how they got together.

"Far be it from me," Roper continued, "to impeach the motives of anybody. I am not primarily concerned with anything except the objectives. Let us get together. Some will come in early and some will come in late.

"I believe, however, that we are studying at this time as we never studied before these fundamental problems and these fundamental objectives, which the President has announced. And I think that as the new year gets under way you will see a clearer knowledge being revealed. I believe that businessmen will sense that, and will come in and co-operate to that end.

"Now that does not mean every businessman, as we know. But the prevailing sentiment is that a majority will do so, and thus head into a new era and future."

In saying he favored "preserving the objectives of NRA," Roper said he merely reiterated a position he has held right along. He said he could not yet undertake to say how best to preserve those objectives, when asked if he favored "State NRA legislation."

Hailing economic gains, as reflected in business indices, Roper in a formal Thanksgiving statement issued at his conference said that the "spirit of the good neighbor" in international relations "is being effectively applied domestically by the various segments composing our national life in their consideration of the rights of others and their interest in the promotion of the welfare of others."

"At this Thanksgiving season," he said, "the horizon is an alluring challenge to a continuity of effort to enlarge upon the gains that stand out today in such bold relief."

Building Trades' Skilled Labor Shortage Held Statesmanship Opportunity for Unions.

By Franklyn Waltman

THE threatened shortage of skilled labor in the building trades—as well as in some other lines—presents organized labor with a great opportunity to lay aside politics and petty quarreling internally and to prove to the country that it can display statesmanship when the need arises. In this hour of triumph at the polls let labor remember it has responsibilities as well as rights.

WALTMAN.

The developing shortage of skilled labor, about which contractors and builders are beginning to complain, is due chiefly to the failure to train apprentices during the six years of the depression to fill the gaps left in the ranks of skilled mechanics by death and old age. Indeed, it has been said that the average age now of skilled carpenters is in excess of 50 years.

Suspension by organized labor of the training of apprentices when master mechanics were wearing their shoes out searching for work was understandable and justified, if it were not a necessary result of the low level of construction activity.

But now that the demand for skilled labor nearly equals the supply the task of training apprentices should be accelerated and become a special concern of labor leaders, for selfish as well as public reasons. Not only should labor take up the lag between the ratio of apprentices to journeymen under existing union rules, but the maximum number of apprentices permitted under those regulations should in some trades be revised upward for a year or two at least.

In the present situation labor leaders may lose sight of the future in contemplating the present. Those in the building trades suffered more severely than most skilled workers due to the virtual cessation of private construction for several years. Thus they are inclined to feel that they are entitled to reserve to themselves the fruits of the lush period now beginning. By keeping the supply of skilled labor restricted, the unions believe they are increasing their bargaining power for wage increases.

In a general sort of way, despite labor's reiterated contention that it is not a commodity to be subjected to the law of supply and demand, this flirting with the theory of scarcity economics has been the policy of the building trades unions in recent years and in large part is responsible for their present high state as the aristocrats—if not also the plutocrats—of the labor movement in this country.

Illustrative of labor's attitude is a story recently told by a Federal prison official. One of the Federal prisons needed badly a recreation hall. Irritable in their idleness, some of the inmates of the prison needed work. The Justice Department had a sum of money available for expenditure at this prison but not enough to build a recreation hall if the work were let to a contractor.

A happy solution all around seemed to be to build the recreation hall with prison labor—thus killing two birds with one stone, in addition to training the prisoners in a useful trade. It was decided to make the hall a brick structure and steps were taken to employ several union bricklayers to instruct the inmates in laying bricks and supervise their work, but union officials stepped in and forbid their members to participate in such a scheme, arguing that the structure should be erected entirely by union labor. The building was not erected; the prisoners remained idle and tradeless and several unemployed union members offered work on the project had to look elsewhere for jobs.

Such incidents are not conducive to inspiring public respect for and confidence in the statesmanship of labor leaders who now demand a place at the Nation's council table in the formulation of national policies and who in some instances aspire to high place in political life. The strength of the labor movement always will be the strength of the public opinion behind it and the latter will be dependent on the extent that organized labor serves the public welfare in serving its membership.

* * *

But that is not the chief reason why labor leaders should exercise foresight in squarely meeting the problem of the developing shortage in skilled labor. Economic laws bear down on labor as well as on commodities, even though labor should be treated as human beings and not as commodities.

The result of an acute shortage in skilled labor in the housing field will be higher wages and thus higher costs in an activity where the cost is already too high. The public will not—and in instances where the need is greatest can not—pay such costs and will turn to the prefabricated house. Already that threat to the building trades is looming on the horizon, and if labor lets the cost of housing reach the point where the prefabricated house can get a foothold, it will be the beginning of the end of the present glorified state of the building trades.

And in this matter of increasing housing costs, the manual workers of the Nation—both skilled and unskilled—are the chief sufferers. They are the inadequately housed portion of the population. Thus organized labor fails to serve its own class if it permits a situation to develop which increases the hardship of workers and prevents the unskilled among their number from becoming skilled mechanics.

Burns Admits Guards Armed In Rand Plants

Agency Head Gives NLRB Data on Strikebreaking Activities of Firm.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 25.—Raymond J. Burns, president of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency, testified to the National Labor Relations Board hearing today that the agency supplied armed, uniformed guards to protect Remington-Rand property during last summer's strikes at the company's Syracuse and Ilion, N. Y., and Middletown, Conn., plants.

Burns said 25 guards carrying revolvers furnished by the agency were sent to the Syracuse plant at the request of James H. Rand, jr., president of the company. Later the force was doubled, he said.

Fifty guards, half their number armed, served the company for one day at the Ilion plant in May, he continued, while five guards were employed in July at the Middletown plant. He said one or two Burns investigators were assigned to the Tonawanda, N. Y., plant.

Burns said the company paid his agency a total of $25,000 for its services.

He testified at the final hearing in New York of the board's investigation of methods used to cope with the strikes. The next session will be held in the Superior Courthouse at Hartford, Conn., on Monday.

Capt. Foster Testifies.

Preceding Burns, Capt. Robert J. Foster, head of the Foster Industrial and Protective Bureau of New Jersey, told of supplying guards to the plants at Middletown and Ilion. He said all were unarmed, with the exception of two at Ilion, who were deputized by the sheriff.

Foster testified that he received less than $30,000 from the company for services in 1936, and that the largest force he had working for the company was 40 men.

Another witness was Sam (Chowderhead) Cohen, 280-pound professional strikebreaker to whom police attributed a long criminal record. Cohen protested his right to "make an honest living" and declared that every time he was locked up on a vagrancy charge he was not receiving a "fair deal for my wife and children."

Cohen created a flurry almost at the outset when he refused to identify his employer on the Remington-Rand job.

He said he was hired as a night watchman at the company's Middletown, Conn., plant by one "Charley."

"Who," asked Federal Attorney Daniel B. Shortal, "is this Charley?"

Refuses to Name Employer.

"I'm not going to tell you or anyone else," the witness shouted. "You are just trying to pump me."

Cohen, asked to define his occupation, said it was "guarding at strikebreaking plants."

"How many strikes have you worked on?"

"Oh, I don't know, all of them," he said.

"Do you do any missionary work?"

"Very little."

Previous witnesses, including Pearl L. Bergoff, veteran self-styled strikebreaker, and Louis Cohn, his lieutenant, have told how "missionaries" were sent to the Remington-Rand plants at Syracuse and Tonawanda, N. Y., and Middletown to try to persuade strikers to return to work.

"Chowderhead" Cohen said he had worked for the Bergoff Detective Agency "off and on" for the last 17 or 20 years.

"Are you ever armed?" Shortal asked.

"No, sir," he replied.

"Did you ever hear the term 'fink'?" (strikebreaker).

"Only by you people here" Cohen replied.

"Did you ever hear the word 'escort'?"

"Oh, yes, that's when people want to work and we help them in and out of plants."

Prince Georges Bonds-Maker Sued 3d Time

District Motorist Asserts Money Paid Pumphrey Never Reached Court.

For the third time since investigators began their investigation of an alleged bonding racket in Prince Georges County, Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, of Suitland, Md., yesterday was named defendant in a suit filed by a Washington motorist.

Dorothy Bowers, 2000 Newton street northeast, alleges in the suit, filed at Upper Marlboro, Md., that she paid Pumphrey $151.70 purportedly for a bond fee, and fines and costs on several traffic charges.

The money, she avers, was never paid to the police court treasury and none of it was ever returned to her. She is suing the bondsman to recover the $151.70.

Mrs. Bowers has sworn to an affidavit for the Keystone Automobile Club, instigators of the bonding investigation.

Names Moffat.

In the statement she says she was arrested last April by two Prince Georges County policemen and arraigned before Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffat, Hyattsville, Md., who since has been named defendant in a suit filed by another Washington motorist.

At the time of her arrest, the affiant avers, bond was set at $1,200. Two days later, she says, she paid Pumphrey $151.70 on his assurance that the case would be disposed of without her going to court.

The suit charges there is no record in police court of a bond or of any fines or costs having been paid.

It is understood Pumphrey has consulted attorneys with a view toward filing answer to the suits shortly.

Boswell to Retire.

Perry Boswell, chairman of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners, announced yesterday he will not consent to serve again as chairman of the governing body. The board will make its annual selection of a chairman at its meeting next Tuesday. It has been customary for chairmen to be re-elected.

Boswell gave "personal business" as his reason for relinquishing the office. His decision, however, followed close on a stormy session of his board during which he and Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, police commissioner, engaged in heated debate over whether the commissioners should conduct an independent investigation of the county police.

Cockey, who has consistently fought for a commissioners' investigation, has branded the board's refusal to accept his proposal as condoning "open banditry on the highways."

Officer, 5 Seamen Cited for Heroism

Naval awards for heroism and commendations from Secretary Swanson were made yesterday to a Navy lieutenant and five enlisted men.

The Navy Cross was awarded to two enlisted men for "extraordinary heroism" on July 28 when a 6-inch gun breech on the cruiser Marblehead exploded. The men, Gunners Mate Charles H. Tondee, first class, of Ellaville, Ga., and Seaman Angelo M. Barulli, second class, of Hamden, Conn., succeeded in removing several cases of exposed powder which were in danger of being ignited. Three members of the gun crew were killed.

Rescues from drowning brought letters of commendation to Lieut. (j.g.) Lannie Conn, commanding VB Squadron 3-B, U. S. S. Lexington; Seaman James William Monahan, Receiving Ship New York; Jack Elmer Muller, water tender, first class, and Harold O'Haver, shipfitter, second class, both attached to the Litchfield. Lieut. Conn rescued a Navy flier after his plane crashed in the water. Seaman Monahan rescued a shipmate who leaped into the water from a burning launch. Muller and O'Haver saved a boy who had fallen from a dock.

Sea Island Alive With Otters Worth Weight in Gold

By the Associated Press.

Discovery that an almost unknown Alaskan island is alive with sea otters—said to be the only animals literally worth their weight in gold—was reported yesterday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

Long believed to be virtually extinct, sea otters produce the most valuable of all furs. Single pelts have sold for as much as $2,500.

Returning from a tour of Alaska, Thomas said the otter refuge had been discovered by Commander L. V. Kielhorn, of the Coast Guard cutter Chelan. Three thousand of the little streamlined animals were counted along the island's rocky shore, Kielhorn said in a report to the Senate.

Thomas asked that the island's name be kept secret until he could introduce legislation making it a permanent game preserve.

Minister Terms Woman's Wiles 'Jungle-Minded'

Woman's wiles were described yesterday by Dr. John A. Mackay, president of the Princeton Theological Seminary, as a form of "jungle-mindedness."

Speaking before University of Maryland students at College Park, Md., on "Religion in a Modern World," Dr. Mackay said:

"The first type or pattern of living or thinking is jungle-mindedness. This is the theory of using wile or force to eliminate each other.

"One phase of this jungle-mindedness is that of an individual using these same elements to attract others to himself for selfish or sinister purposes. This form is the peculiar temptation of the fair sex."

Comparing the modern philosophy of life to that of jungle days, Dr. Mackay declared no civilization that is going to last can be based on "jungle-mindedness or star-mindedness." The latter, he said, was typified by the philosophy responsible for the government in Germany.

A nation which hopes to survive, Dr. Mackay said, must be based on "Christ-mindedness," which, he explained, embodied a mutual respect and consideration for each other.

Dr. Mackay was the first of a series of speakers to be brought to the University of Maryland campus by the committee on religious affairs, which was appointed recently by President H. C. Byrd.

Burned his brother's hands with a red-hot poker.

Given the baby a key, which it swallowed.

Set fire to the household furniture.

Ripped the back off a sofa with a pair of scissors.

Turned on gas and water taps in the house.

Released brakes on automobiles so that they ran away in the street.

The boy, aged 9, was stated "completely out of his father's control," and sent to an institution.

Strike 'Break' Near on Coast, Officials Assert

Insurgent and Longshoreman Leaders Talk in East; Showdown Hinted.

Federal and civic authorities at San Francisco last night predicted a break in the Pacific Coast maritime strike within 48 hours, the United Press reported.

Mayor Angelo Rossi, of San Francisco, announced the impending change in the situation after he had conferred with Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor directing the Federal Government's efforts to settle the dispute, which during the day tied up the 221st ship in Pacific ports.

Meanwhile, a showdown in the East Coast strike was believed near as Joseph P. Ryan, president of the powerful International Longshoremen's Association, conferred for the first time with Joseph Curran, leader of the insurgent walkout, in New York.

Ryan, according to the United Press, was reported to have said the situation would have to be settled immediately or else his men would get out of hand and join the insurgent strike. No statement was issued as the conference progressed into the night.

Terms Reported Discussed.

Terms for possible settlement of the entire East Coast walkout were reported to have been discussed.

Simultaneously, Ryan declared war on French steamship lines in retaliation for refusal of French dock workers in Havre, France, to unload American vessels. Ryan said his men would refuse to load or unload any French vessels in New York, effective immediately.

Ryan, the Associated Press reported, also ordered 250 longshoremen to refuse to unload the Henry S. Grove in New York because its crew was nonunion—the first clear case of action by Eastern coast longshoremen against any ships.

Eight striking seamen delayed sailing of the President Harding for Europe and the liner Excalibur canceled its departure for Mediterranean ports.

Alaska Food Delayed.

In San Francisco, loading of emergency food supplies for Alaska, practically isolated by the maritime strike, was delayed as two unions sought agreement on apportioning the jobs. The Government had an oral promise from striking unions to man three ships at San Francisco and Seattle.

Hawaii, blockaded by the 27-day strike at all American ports which is most effective on the Pacific Coast was still without promise of aid.

The first two ships in active service were affected by the officers' strike in Boston as Mayor Mansfield appealed to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins for a settlement.

Deck and engine-room officers began leaving ships in Galveston.

Rome Honors Horthy With Troop Parade

Rome, Nov. 25 (AP).—Italy honored Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary, today with a gala military parade of 25,000 troops.

Admiral Horthy, who arrived in Rome yesterday, was reported to have brought with him recognition of the Italian empire in Ethiopia and a bid for Italy's support for Hungarian rearmament.

End to Private Banks Proposed in Michigan

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 25 (AP).—Gov. Frank D. D. C. Girl Gets Ringside Seat in Athens; Sees King, Mrs. Simpson Dine, Dance

Jeanne Butler Saw Couple at Night Club; Wally, Edward Behaved Like Any Pair Enjoying Romance.

Found!

Someone who has seen the King and Wally dancing and drinking and making love in the white moonlight of the Acropolis in Athens!

Miss Jeanne Butler, just back from the Mediterranean, was discovered at her home at 3323 Eighteenth street northwest, and there she yesterday told about an idyllic rendezvous between Wally and Edward in an Athens nightclub.

And she sat at the next table!

Unlike most of the fortunate who have envisioned the pair, she doesn't mind telling about it. Here's her story:

All the threads of which poets spin love dreams were present. Moonlight shining on the white ruins of the Acropolis. Round after round of scotches and soda. A tickle of the King's chin by Wally's fingers.

Dancing, dancing, dancing, to the mingled whispers of a titillated Athenian diplomatic set and the music of a Greek orchestra trying to out-do Eddie Duchin.

The King whispering in Wally's ear, her quick laughter, her suave toying with his majesty's heart. A royal yacht floating in a placid Aegean awaiting them . . . .

Athens throbbed with excitement, Miss Butler said, when it became known the King's party was going to leave the yacht on which his friends had been seen sunning for three days. They were coming ashore for a night.

Everyone was aquiver to find where they would be, where they could be seen. Few knew even the names of those on board. Indeed, it was widely believed that Ernest Simpson was in the party. It seems, he was not.

Miss Butler asked everyone who could speak English, and finally in that hatchery of gossip, the beauty shop, she accidentally found out where the King and Wally were supping.

An English woman in the adjoining hair-drier, not knowing an American girl was listening, spoke to her companion in English, saying "Don't breathe a word, but the King and Mrs. Simpson are dancing tonight at the Glifada Club. I'm speaking in English so no one will understand."

Miss Butler understood.

She dug up a young American diplomat as her escort. He professed boredom with royalty at first but soon he was as excited as she. They went early to the club and obtained a table easily. The place would have been packed if Athens had known where to find the pair.

After a while the King and Mrs. Simpson, accompanied by two American girls and several English people, appeared at the entrance. They had been dining and all were in a gay mood. The headwaiter, confronted with the greatest moment any headwaiter could ever know, almost burst with effusions of joy.

So did Miss Butler when the King was escorted to the table next to hers. She could see everything perfectly.

The King did not impress her at all, but Mrs. Simpson did.

"He is a small man," she said. "He wore a gray herringbone tweed suit, a blue shirt, a dark red tie and black and white shoes. If I hadn't seen his face in periodicals a hundred times I shouldn't have picked him out as a person of any great distinction. He seemed a little concerned.

"At his side was Mrs. Simpson, sleek and poised, in a white sports suit. The fact that she is not beautiful does not impress one at once. Your first thought is that she looks exactly as she should look—sophisticated, intelligent, experienced and thoroughly human. I liked her."

The King and his party had a round of whisky and sodas and then his majesty arose and asked Mrs. Simpson to dance. The dance pavilion, a raised platform, was flooded with iridescent lights which played on a fountain filled with water lilies in its center.

JEANNE BUTLER.

A full moon silvered the deep-blue Aegean. Quietly surging waters lapped the beach almost at the edge of the dance floor. In the distance the Parthenon of the Acropolis, brilliantly illuminated, stood out in gleaming white against the darkness of the sky.

The party, gay and light-hearted, exchanged quips and laughter, while waiters hurried up frequently. A number of highballs were quaffed and his majesty seemed to lose his expression of care.

He danced every dance with his lady, talking as he moved about the floor in what Miss Butler described as somewhat conventional steps, sometimes whispering in her ear, and often enjoying a happy laugh when she spoke one of her famed Simpson witticisms. Once when a dance ended she put her fingertips under his chin in a teasing caress.

"She is utterly fascinating," Miss Butler said. "Her great allure seems to be her vivacity, her lightness, her near yet distant warmth.

"The King was apparently deeply in love with her, and although he tried to keep on his dignity for the sake of appearances, you could see how enraptured he was."

Once they strolled out onto the beach and gazed through the clear warm night at the ruins of the glory that once was Greece. Here before the eyes of a little man who rules lands that Zeus never dreamed of, and before a bewitching American beauty whose charm, so they say, would make Aphrodite seem dull, the King and Mrs. Simpson stood and breathed deep Homeric breaths.

Then they came back to the dance party. His Majesty drinks very well, Miss Butler observed, and behaves with complete reserve and good manners. Mrs. Simpson joined him in a few highballs.

Whenever the orchestra played tangos his Majesty became irritated. He does not like the tango, but enjoys the foxtrot. His arm encircled her waist closely when he danced and there was none of the hand-in-hand Park avenue stroll which the younger set affects in this country.

He never missed a dance. No one else had a chance. And Mrs. Simpson did not seem to mind. At last, far after midnight, the King and his friend and their entourage departed in big motors for their sand-colored pacht, and the rest of the guests at the club regained their breaths. The party was in a joyful mood as it departed from the discords of a Greek danee band for the quietude of the yacht.

Chest Workers Continue Drive To Reach Quota

Units Conducting 'Clean-up' Campaign Until Final Report Tuesday.

Contributions to the Community Chest continued to be received yesterday and were forwarded to the Audit Unit for compilation in the final report, which is expected Tuesday. Both disappointment and appreciation were expressed by Chest officials—disappointment over the failure to reach the required goal, and appreciation of the loyalty of the 7,000 workers who gave unsparingly of their time and efforts, and of the more than 170,000 Washingtonians who gave to the Chest this year.

Although the campaign officially ended Tuesday night, workers in all units are still seeking contributions in order to make their quota, if possible. Persons missed during the drive will be reached by the Metropolitan Unit solicitors, it was declared yesterday, and in both Group Solicitation and Governmental units, a "clean-up" campaign is being conducted.

One of the heartening features of the campaign, according to Coleman Jennings, campaign chairman, was the number of increases in gifts reported. In the Special Assignments unit alone, these increases amounted to approximately $46,000. A number of people, after making their regular contribution and realizing that the campaign was not progressing at the rate it should, sent in additional gifts.

Among these was Lady Lindsay, wife of Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, who, after making a substantial contribution, sent a personal letter to Chairman Jennings, saying she had noticed that the Chest was lagging in its campaign, and inclosing an additional check for $100.

Chest officials went ahead yesterday making plans to do the utmost possible with the money received. Admitting that the work of the 65 agencies will be hampered to some extent by failure to reach the goal, they planned for better interpretation of the work of those agencies during the coming year, in order that Washingtonians, as a whole, will be more familiar with the use made of their gifts and more inclined to increase them next year.

Paroled Felon Asks, Gets Prison Job Back

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 25 (AP).—John Early, 52, paroled from the Joliet Penitentiary less than three weeks ago, begged Warden Joseph Ragen today to take him back. He said life outside prison walls was "too tough" for an ex-convict.

"People just don't want to hire a guy with a 'rap' record," he said. "Life on the outside for an ex-convict is too tough. I'll be glad to come back if you'll let me stay."

The warden told Early he could have his old job on the outside detail and serve four more years.

Juneau Landslide Toll Rises to 8; Hunt Pushed

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 25 (AP).—Avalanche debris today yielded the body of Pete Battelo, transfer company executive, bringing the known death toll of Sunday's slide to eight. Nine persons are in hospitals and eight others missing. Search for other possible victims continued.

Workers found 3-year-old Lorraine Vanali, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vanali in the ruins last night. She died without learning her mother was dead and her father missing.

The Hoeppels were sentenced to serve from four months to a year in the District Jail, in December, 1935. The sintence was held in abeyance while the Hoeppels carried their fight to the United States Supreme Court. Sentence will be reimposed tomorrow.

Hoeppel is the first member of Congress to be incarcerated at the District Jail within memory of the oldest guard, but he will receive no special privileges, Superintendent Thomas Rives declared.

"I have given orders that the Hoeppels are to be treated like any other prisoners," Rives said. "They'll have a cell to themselves tonight because we are not overcrowded, but later on they'll have cellmates."

Hoeppel was in a gay mood when he arrived at the courthouse, and told photographers, "Take all the pictures you want, boys; don't be in a hurry. Get a good one."

Wants Son Left Alone.

But when a photographer shouted for the younger Hoeppel to step into the foreground, the Congressman said:

"Leave him out of it. I'm the guilty one."

The Representative began to lose his good humor when Deputy Marshal Clayton Gasque told him he would have to stop at the police "Rogues Gallery" to be fingerprinted and photographed.

"They've already taken our fingerprints," the Congressman stormed. "It's a hell of a system of records if they are not there now."

The elder Hoeppel waxed indignant again when he was handcuffed to his son.

"We've been treated like gentlemen by the marshals everywhere but here," he declared.

The Representative's first words on entering the jail were:

"Well, it looks clean anyway."

The younger Hoeppel opened his grip and extracted a suit of blue denim overalls.

"Do you want your prison clothes now, Dad?" he asked.

The Representative said the uncleanliness of the Richmond jail prompted him to drop his court fight there. He plans to institute suit for a new trial in District Supreme Court on the grounds that Government employes served on the jury that convicted him, Hoeppel said.

Forfeiture Threatened.

Father and son were at their homes in California when their final plea was lost. Bench warrants were issued for their arrest and for a time forfeiture of their bond was threatened as Federal officers throughout the Nation were asked to be on the lookout for them.

Hoeppel, who had been held in jail in Richmond since his arrest with his son in a Richmond tourist home November 7 as fugitives from justice, declared in his statement that he went to Richmond in order to "report myself to the United States marshal at the proper time for surrender to the district court at Washington.

"My reasons for attempting delay," he said, "were to contact Mr. James W. Ives, the complaining witness, in order to discuss his testimony with a view to obtaining a correction from him in accordance with the facts."

Hoeppel asserted if a Congressional investigation were ordered, "some astounding revelations will come to the front to confirm the statements I have made here, and thus grant justice, instead of persecution."

He said he had incurred "the enmity of certain brass hats in the General Staff" and also charged the District of Columbia prosecutor had "a personal animus against me."

Lewis Sees Early Debt Settlements

By the Associated Press.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, predicted yesterday an early settlement of the war debts and urged amendment of the neutrality act to prevent shipment of American goods in foreign ships to blockaded belligerents.

Meanwhile, Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, said he would reopen his fight in Congress next January for a constitutional amendment to keep the United States out of foreign wars.

A member of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Lewis often has insisted on settlement of the war debts, contending their present status upsets world economics.

Turning to neutrality legislation, the Senator expressed concern "that our conutry is not properly measuring the effect of the blockade by insurgents against ships of foreign countries coming to Spanish ports."

Lords Approve Treaty.

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—The House of Lords today added final legislative approval to the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty providing for Egyptian independence in administration of internal affairs and for withdrawal of British troops over a period of years. The House of Commons ratified the pact yesterday and it previously had been accepted by the Egyptian Parliament. The King's signature will make the treaty effective.

Garnett Orders Police to Seize Pin Ball Games

Noon Today Set as Deadline for Machines; Company Rushes Appeal.

Acting on orders of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, police today were preparing to seize all pin ball machines found in operating condition when the deadline, established at noon, is reached. From that hour on all machines falling within the catagory of the types banned by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue will be confiscated and the proprietors of the store in which they are found, will be charged with violating the antigaming statutes.

In a letter to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, Col. Garnett last night instructed him to have his officers seize all machines known as "Paiooka," "Electric Eye," "Hurdle Hop" and others of a similar type.

Coming within the banned lists in addition are machines that pay off in slugs, coins, tickets, or merchandise, or where the proprietor pays off on the high score.

Review to Be Asked.

Meantime, Attorney W. R. Lichtenberg, representing the Pioneer Novelty Co., largest operator of pin machines in the city, prepared to rush a petition to the United States Court of Appeals asking for a review of Justice O'Donoghue's sweeping order. The formal order, signed early yesterday, embodied the oral statements of Justice O'Donoghue when he rendered the original decision outlawing the machines.

In his ruling, Justice O'Donoghue held the machines were truly gaming devices, where the skill of the player was but a small fraction of the chance of winning. Through placing of pins, springs, or other devices on the faces of the playing boards, it was shown, it was possible to control the pay-off to such an extent that but few had a chance.

In a last minute appeal to secure continued operation of the machines pending a final adjudication in the higher courts, Lichtenberg told Justice O'Donoghue the company would suffer a loss which it could never hope to recoup if the machines were ordered to the warehouse.

Jurist Denies Appeal.

The jurist said, "The court cannot shut its eyes to the fact that the complaint against these machines is that they are being used in violation of the criminal law. After hearing testimony presented here I came to the conclusion that operation was a violation of the criminal law.

"On the one hand we have the damage to the property rights of the plaintiff should I refuse this injunction, and on the other hand the public probably would have lost several million dollars playing the machines in the seven or eight months necessary to dispose of the appeal. I think the public interest should prevail."

It was brought out in testimony that more than 10,000 machines of the type declared unlawful were in operation here, with an annual "take" of some $30,000,000. The split between the store owners and the owners of the machines showed the former usually "paid his rent" through the profits made from the games.

John J. Wilson, assistant United States attorney who prosecuted the case, announced the fight to bar "claw" machines would probably reach the courts next week.

The Pioneer Company instituted court action to enjoin police from seizing their machines after Col. Garnett had held them to be gaming devices. A temporary injunction was granted and the machines have been in operation several months since the first attempt to put them out of business.

9 Women to Attend Buenos Aires Parley

A delegation of nine women will leave here Friday by Commercial Air Lines for the Buenos Aires Inter-American Peace Conference, where they will present a "people's mandate against war."

The delegation will be composed of Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the committee; Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York; Countess Alain Dedons de Pierrefeu, of Boston; Mrs. Albert Lytle Dean, of White Plains, N. Y.; Mrs. Cecil Ira McReynolds, of Washington; Mrs. E. W. Frost, of Arkansas; Mrs. Lionel Sutro, of New York; Mrs. P. J. Simmen, of Buffalo, and Miss Eve Garrette.

A Nation-wide broadcast of their departure will be made, with Franklyn Waltman, Washington Post columnist, interviewing members of the delegation.

Jurors Indict Three Youths In Holdup Case

Federal Agents Push Hunt for Band in Abduction of Ft. Myer Sentry.

Widely sought as a result of their suspected connection with a series of desperate robberies occurring here over the past week, three youths were indicted by the District grand Jury yesterday on a charge of ribjury yesterday on a charge of roba market at 1609 T street northwest, of $352.

They are William Nelson Beck, 21, and Paul Berger and Jack Joseph Kurz, 18 and 19, respectively. The trio is being sought by G-men in connection with the kidnaping and robbing of a Fort Myer, Va., sentry, and for alleged complicity in the hold-up of two men and their escorts on the Mount Vernon highway.

In true bills voted yesterday, the grand jury charged the three went to Armaly's store last Friday night. Kurz, according to testimony, grabbed the merchant and pinioned his arms, while Beck threatened him with a revolver. He was searched and the money in his trousers taken. One of the men started to hit him with the butt of a gun but desisted when the other suggested they had better go. They ran from the store to a waiting machine, the driver of which sped away before Armaly could get help. Beck, it was said, had worked for the former proprietor of the store.

In another indictment yesterday, the grand jury charged six colored men with grand larceny in connection with the alleged theft of merchadise valued at $10,000 from the freight depot at Fourth and E streets southwest. They are Edward Harris, Robert Williams, Benjamin Brown, Sibley Edwards, Charles E. Johnson and Richard McGriff. The six were employes of a trucking company.

Others indicted included Harry S. Ehrmantrout, Clyde S. Hayes, Mary Frances Nolan, Katherine Helsing, grand larceny; Leary Epps, Clyde M. Matthews and Harold Schwartz, receiving stolen property; Richard Jimmerson, Benny T. Lacks, Charles William Allen, Irving Parker, Albert T. Johnson, Woodson Hickerson, Charles Jackson and Charles Glasco, robbery.

Harold D. Reed, William Hill, Van W. Robinson, Wilson Bruce, Emanuel Gray, James Little, Henry L. Tinker, Pete Troy, Marie Harvey, joy-riding; Henry L. Tinker, Pete Troy, Marie Harvey, Joseph MacDonald, Wallace Ligon, Walter A. Hopkins, Andrew Standfield, Frederick Reamy, Wellington Jones, John Samuel Brown, Frank Smith, William H. Jones, Harold V. Jones, Tacie Green and Willie Tate, violation liquor-taxing act of 1934.

Edward Robinson, Frank Williams, Jr., William Whitaker, Walter McKenny and Benjamin Hoffman, gaming charges; Hester I. Smith and Mansour David, assault with a dangerous weapon; Charles Evans and Darwin B. Payne, embezzlement.

Prisoner Is Indicted In Threat to President

Philadelphia, Nov. 25 (AP).—The Federal grand jury indicted John A. Bartenback today on charges of threatening the life of President Roosevelt.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested Bartenback last August and accused him of sending three threatening letters to the President. He has been held in prison in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the National Symphony Orchestra, under Hans Kindler, in Constitution Hall Wednesday afternoon. Program: "Leonore" Overture No. 3 (Beethoven), Introduction and Passacaglia from "Dido and Aeneas" (Purcell), Four Polish Dances: Polka, Kujaviak, Dumka and Oberek (Tansman), Symphony No. 1 in E minor (Sibelius).

One regret lingers among the immediate memories of yesterday's concert, and that is that so many empty seats represented auditors who would have been present had they realized that their absence would deprive them of one of the most interesting programs which the season is likely to disclose. Not only had Hans Kindler taken the trouble to arrange two excerpts from Henry Purcell's seventeenth-century opera, and to prepare for introduction here the E minor symphony of Sibelius and the suite of Polish dances by Alexander Tansman, but he also inspired his willing musicians to an impressively eloquent reading of the Sibelius work. It is to be hoped that the four recalls he received after the symphony, from an audience that lingered expressly for that purpose, made him feel that his efforts were appreciated.

As the program was ordered, Beethoven could have been considered the master of ceremonies and sponsor for his English predecessor, Henry Purcell, and his great Finnish successor, Jean Sibelius. His medium of commendation was the splendid third Lenore overture that he wrote for the 1806 revival of "Fidelio." Of all operatic overtures, none surpasses this in the synoptic compression of the drama which it prefaces. It recapitulates all the moments of suspense in the romantic plot, and carries the protagonists to triumph in that rushing flight of stretto strings that is one of the most exciting moments in all music.

Each of us has a private Utopia wherein things are arranged as they ought to be. An advantage of being a dictator in such an imaginary state would be that one could command performances of whatever music one wanted to hear. No hesitancy would be mine in issuing at once an ukase for the production of "Dido and Aeneas," for nothing else would satisfy the expectations raised by the two selections that Dr. Kindler dovetailed together from the first act and the poignant scene of Dido's farewell to happiness and life. This is music of true classic loveliness—music in which emotional verities are cogently expressed without the sacrifice of dignity and nobility.

The nationalistic elements in Alexander Tansman, as far as his four Polish dances are concerned, have yet been salted with Persian wit. Preserving the native tang of the themes and the rhythmic peculiarities, he has spangled them with harmonic quips derived from his French contemporaries or from his own sympathy with dissonant counterpoint. Only in the Kujaviak and the Dumka has he allowed the melancholy of the Pole to pervade the atmosphere and subdue an amiable mockery. The Polka was the dance that caught the fancy of the audience so markedly that Dr. Kindler repeated it.

To speak adequately of the Sibelius symphony in a review written in a race with time and the next edition of the newspaper is impossible. Suffice it to say that the individuality of the composer stands out as dominatingly in his first symphony as in his seventh. Strangely, however, that individuality is the most impersonal force that modern music demonstrates. One feels not Sibelius the man, but Sibelius the embodiment of his people.

As I have remarked before, the best preparation for an understanding of Sibelius, of the essential elements out of which his musical idiom springs, is the reading of the Kalevala. For in his larger works, almost without exception, the spirit of the Finnish epic moves and has its being. It is a spirit that is close to and nearly at one with the powers of nature.

Japanese Officers Reported Captured

Kweisui, Suiyuan Province, China (Thursday), Nov. 26 (AP).—Suiyuan military officers declared today a number of Japanese army officers were seized in the capture of the strategic Mongolian stronghold of Pailingmiao by loyal Chinese government troops.

Chinese sources asserted 200 Japanese participated in the struggle. Gen. Fu Tso Yi announced seizure of the important town of Wuchuan. Chinese reports estimated between 100 and 200 were killed in bitter hand-to-hand fighting at the two points.

Aide Files Suit Against Aimee For $1,080,000

'Angel of Broadway' Says Evangelist Slandered Her in Dispute.

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.—Rheba Crawford Splivalo, once known as the "Angel of Broadway" and more recently associate pastor of Angelus Temple, today filed suit for $1,080,000 against Aimee Semple McPherson, charging slander.

The complaint contended Mrs. McPherson referred to the associate pastor as a Jezebel, mistress of a governor and a conspirator.

The action was based on remarks of Mrs. McPherson, assertedly uttered in the presence of her daughter, Roberta Semple, and others associated with the temple.

In a specific complaint, Miss Crawford charged the auburn-haired evangelist with intent to injure her as a minister of the gospel. She quoted Mrs. McPherson as saying in a loud voice before witnesses:

"I don't care how many detectives you hire, but get the goods on Rheba. Here she is trying to take my temple away from me and using my money to do it. If it is the last thing I do I will show her up, the hypocrite. A fine associate pastor she has turned out to be."

The fiery, red-haired former Salvation Army lassie who once gathered thousands nightly to hear her preach in Times Square, New York, charged the statements were intended by Mrs. McPherson to be understood by her listeners that she was a thief and a hypocrite, and was attempting to "steal the Temple."

"Mrs. McPherson knew such statements were untrue," contended Miss Crawford, who took over the Temple management in 1935 to pinch hit while Aimee carried on an evangelical tour that took her over most of the country. Since then she has been an associate pastor.

Daughter Assails Mother.

Los Angeles, Nov. 25 (AP).—Roberta Semple charged today that her mother, Aimee Semple McPherson, is seeking to "deprive me, her own daughter, of my rights and to oust me from the offices I hold" in Angelus Temple.

Miss Semple, estranged from her mother because of a Temple rift, referred to a special meeting of the Temple's directorate, called by Mrs. McPherson to make "a change in the officers of these boards." The directors meet tomorrow night.

Lloyd GeorgeHolds Haig Dodged Battle

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—David Lloyd George, Britain's wartime prime minister, in the sixth and last volume of his memoirs published today assailed Field Marshal Earl Haig for "ordering many bloody battles while only taking part in two."

"Field Marshal Sir William Robertson, Haig's chief adviser," Lloyd George wrote, "never even saw a battle.

"The solicitude with which generals in high places avoid personal jeopardy is one of the debatable novelties of modern warfare. * * * It has gone too far.

"It is a new thing for generals who have never set eyes on a position to command their soldiers to attack it without the slightest intention of placing themselves in any peril."

Roosevelt Son Made a Reserve Marine Colonel

Swanson Says Commission Is in Line With Usual Procedure.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Swanson yesterday issued a statement saying the appointment of James Roosevelt, son of the President, as a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve was "in accordance with standard procedure."

Young Roosevelt is accompanying his father to the Buenos Aires peace conference aboard the cruiser Indiapapolis. His appearance at Trinidad in uniform led to the disclosure that he had been commissioned a reserve officer.

Officers said he will act as Marine Corps aide to his father, who is accompanied by his regular Army and Navy aides.

"Mr. James Roosevelt was sworn in as a lieutenant colonel in the United States Marine Corps Reserve on Friday, November 13," Secretary Swanson said. "Lieut. Col. Roosevelt is now embarked on the U. S. S. Indianapolis, where he is receiving active training duty at sea.

"Lieut. Col. Roosevelt's induction into the Marine Corps Reserve was in accordance with standard procedure. He fulfilled all the professional and physical requirements for a commission.

"At the present time we are endeavoring to increase the Marine Corps Reserve and I am sure that Lieut. Col. Roosevelt will make an excellent officer and be zealous in the discharge of his duties.

"Like his father he has always been interested in the Navy and Marine Corps. I was very glad to appoint him and I wish the Marine Corps had many more like him."

Hull Confident As He Arrives At BuenosAires

Peace Conference Will Be an Example to World, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 25.—Optimistic predictions of the results of the inter-American peace conference came tonight from delegates of several nations who arrived today, among them United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Hull, heading the United States group which reached here with others aboard the steamer American Legion, asserted he was "confident the conference will achieve a marked success in removing obstacles to the future peace and prosperity of this hemisphere."

"We come determined to make the conference an example of unselfish co-operation," Hull said. "This will be a shining example to the rest of the world of the result that can be obtained when nations, joined as equals, collaborating in the sincere spirit of unselfishness, sympathetic understanding and mutual confidence, prepare a path of peace."

Delegates in Accord.

Pauleus Sannon, chairman of the Haitian group, said:

"My government and my people are thoroughly in accord with the noble views expressed by President Roosevelt in suggesting this extremely important gathering."

Dr. Francisco Castillo Majera, Mexican Ambassador to Washington, who is a delegate to the parley, announced his country hoped an agreement for arbitration and conciliation of American disputes would be reached. Mexico, he said, was determined to follow its traditional policy of noninterference in the internal affairs of other states.

Dr. Luis Manuel Debayle, foreign minister of Nicaragua, said he would advocate completion of the inter-American highway, which now runs from the United States through much of Mexico, as an artery to promote trade and good will.

A Salvadorean delegate, Castro Ramirez, expressed hope the conference would create an inter-American court of justice.

Roosevelt Greets Governor.

A dispatch from Recife, Brazil, said Mr. Roosevelt exchanged greetings from the cruiser Indianapolis with Carlos Lima Cavalcanti, Governor of the state of Pernambuco.

(The Indianapolis passed close to Pernambuco today on its way to Rio de Janeiro, where President Roosevelt will stop before continuing on to Buenos Aires. He is to arrive at the Argentine capital November 30.)

Cavalcanti, in English, told President Roosevelt:

"I have the honor of transmitting to your excellency the respectful greetings of Pernambuco's people, who much admire the spirit of American fraternity of the noble Nation over which your excellency presides."

Mr. Roosevelt replied:

"My sincere greetings and thanks and my regret that I cannot visit Pernambuco."

The United States Executive also messaged the United States consulate at Recife, acknowledging the greetings of 90 Americans who live there.

Juliana's Future Consort Wins Holland by Shocking Queen

Prince Salutes Wilhelmina First as Mother-in-Law, Then as Ruler; Delves in Nation's Industry and Finance.

By the Associated Press.

The Hague.—Smiling, heavily bespectacled Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld, the 25-year-old German prince who January 7 will become the concort of Holland's prospective Queen, has taken the Low Countries by storm.

A year out of college and unknown beyond a small circle, he began his campagin to make the people love him as they do Princess Juliana by shocking sedate Queen Wilhelmina.

When he came to The Hague for the first time after his engagement to the royal princess had been publicly announced he jumped from his American roadster, leaped up the royal palace's two steps onto the portico and kissed Queen Wilhelmina on the cheek. Then he kissed the royal hand.

Several hundred persons massed on the sidewalk a few yards away cheered themselves hoarse.

By kissing the cheek before the hand he embraced his future mother-in-law before he saluted the Queen of The Netherlands.

The people liked that tremendously. Word went around that their princess' choice was a "regular fellow" and now they refer to him as "our modern prince" and call him "Benno" for short.

"Benno" has spent most of his time in Holland since September 8, when the Queen announced the engagement. He immediately threw himself into learning about Holland's public problems, especially those concerned with industry and finance. He has visited factories, warships, and interested himself in colonial questions—a subject close to Juliana's heart.

A linguist, the Prince speaks Dutch it is said, better than many Germans who have lived years in Holland.

The Prince, whose full name is Bernhard Leopold Friedrich Eberhard Julius Kurt Karl Gottfried Peter von Lippe-Bierterfeld, was born in Jena, Germany, June 29, 1911. He has one brother, Archwin, three years his junior, who is now an officer in the German army.

Hunting and auto driving are the two principal sports in which he participates regularly. He plays a game of tennis that matches that of Juliana.

Britain's Chief Palestine Foe To Renew Fight

Arabs Whisper Fawzi Bey, Their Fugitive Leader, Is Planning Return.

By the Associated Press.

Nablus, Palestine, Nov. 25.—The early return to Palestine of Fawzi Bey Din Kaukji, hero of Arab nationalists and "public enemy No. 1" of British troops in the Holy Land, is predicted confidently by recalcitrant Arabs in this stronghold of their movement.

"The Great One soon will be here with 500 Iraqi warriors and 100 Druze," they whisper. "Already he has made his plans to slip over the border with men and arms. And he will succeed. He is so clever a man, the Great One, the British cannot catch him. He will make for us the independence."

Although the Arab strike in protest against Jewish immigration and land purchases was called off October 12 by the Arab higher committee, leaders here profess to be eager to take to the hills again to resume their guerilla warfare with the British expeditionary force.

And in the "Great One," they declare they have a chieftain whose daring and skill more than offset the power of British arms.

Fawzi Bey, whose title "Great One" came into general use in the Arabic press after the Palestine government issued an order forbidding publication of his name, escaped into Trans-Jordan not long after the strike ended. Subsequently he made his way to Baghdad, where he was feted by the populace and received by King Ghazi and other notables of Iraq, as well as by Emir Tallal, son of Emir Abdullah, ruler of Trans-Jordan.

The British remain vigilant, but are skeptical of the "Great One's" early resumption of the struggle.

Emily Lytton Leroy, Long Stage Star, Dies

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Emily Lytton Leroy, 68, long a star in the legitimate and vaudeville theaters, died in a hospital today. She had been a member of the vaudeville team of Leroy and Lytton, played in "Brewster's Millions" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and had played leading roles with J. K. Emmet.

Her mother and a sister, Mrs. Jessie Barnes, survive in Galt, Calif.

Van Sweringen Buried With Simple Services

Cleveland, Nov. 25 (AP).—Nearly a thousand friends and business associates of O. P. Van Sweringen attended simple funeral services today for the railroad magnate who died Monday while on a trip to New York.

Bendix Workers Vote To Return Tomorrow

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Employes of the Bendix Products Corporation, who for six days held a "sit-down siege" and forced closing of the plant, tonight voted to accept a sealed settlement proposal offered by the company and return to work Friday morning.

Burglars Get Turkeys And Hams FromGrocery

Burglars carried off enough loot from a grocery store in the 1400 block of Euclid street northwest early yesterday to supply several families with Thanksgiving feasts.

Vernon Iden, operator of the store, told police the place was entered through a rear window, and two turkeys, two hams, 5 pounds of cheese, 40 pounds of walnuts and ten cartons of cigarettes were taken.

2 Police 'Wards' In Gang Shooting Stage 'Walk Out'

When their legal attempt to rid themselves of an unwelcome police "guard" failed, two Government witnesses in the racket shooting of Joseph Edward O'Brien walked out on police that night.

The witnesses, Harry (Spike) Behrle and William R. (Country) Carpenter, left Washington for an unannounced destination in Maryland. Detectives followed them to the District line, but were left behind because they had no authority to go farther.

Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson ordered the six-man guard detail for the two after he received information "from the underworld" a large sum of money had been offered gunmen to "do away with the men."

Behrle and Carpenter resented their police "shadows" and filed suit in District Court last week for an injunction to stop the detectives following them. The suit was dismissed by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue.

Behrle and Carpenter are the principle witnesses against six men who allegedly shot down Joseph O'Brien while he stood in the 200 block Second street southeast, July 21.

Coed's Killer to Die In Lethal Chamber

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 25 (AP).—The North Carolina Supreme Court today affirmed the death sentence of Martin Moore, giant Negro, who was convicted of slaying Helen Clevenger, 19-year-old Staten Island girl, in her room in an Asheville hotel last July 16.

Under the State's laws, the ruling automatically fixed December 11 as the date for execution of Moore in the prison gas chamber.

8 Bodies Removed From Burned Ship

New Orleans, Nov. 25 (AP).—The bodies of eight workmen were removed today from the smoldering interior of the big freighter Scantic, swept by fire on a drydock here. A ninth man was missing.

The men, installing a refrigeration system in the 7,600-ton coastwise steamer of the Mooremack Line, were trapped by flames which broke out late last night, cutting off their only avenue of escape.

"Poisoned by the Permeating Fraud"

—And some of the "free lot" letters and sales talks being used to promote the sale of real estate under the guise of giving you something for nothing are poisoned thru and thru with permeating fraud.

When a letter infers you're getting a lot free—when a salesman promises you the monthly payments are for certain improvements (and yet the improvements are not listed in the contract) . . . then undoubtedly there is a strong element of fraud that should warn you to

TO NEWSDEALERS FROM LIFE

We expected a sell-out on the first issue of LIFE—knowing well, as you do, that the first issue of a magazine has a strong "curiosity" appeal. But we did not expect the big increased orders for the second and following issues which have come to us from newsdealers all over the country. And, much to our regret, we are unable to fill these orders.

The new, special type of presses installed recently to print LIFE have already reached their capacity.

It will take time to build more of these presses.

Meanwhile we are using every possible make-shift to fill as many of your orders as we can, for we are just as anxious to get copies to you as you are to have them.

To give newsdealers further idea of the nation-wide demand for LIFE, herewith some reports to the American News Company from its local Branch Managers.

10¢ EVERY WEEK

ROCHESTER, N. Y.:
The first issue of "LIFE" is now a sellout. There isn't a copy available today in the city of Rochester. It is many years since we have had such a tremendous demand for a magazine. Reorders by phone and mail are still mounting up. We suppose your life is being made miserable by branches asking for more copies.

PORTLAND, OREGON:
LIFE complete sellout. Impossible to estimate number of sales lost. One dealer sold two hundred thirty first four hours. Must have five thousand copies next issue if possible.

PORTLAND, ME.:
LIFE completely sold out.

GREENSBORO, N. CAROLINA:
Reorders continue to pour in for LIFE.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.:
Clean sale LIFE. Certain could have sold fifteen hundred more.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.:
The first issue of LIFE caused the heaviest demand in Hollywood and Los Angeles of any publication ever known. A clean sell out in very short while including reorders. Still a heavy demand. We lost thousands of sales. Please, please increase draws.

LOUISVILLE, KY.:
Clean sale on LIFE. Could sell two thousand extra copies.

DES MOINES, IOWA:
LIFE completely sold out. Could have used a thousand more.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.:
It is really a shame that we were so underdistributed on LIFE. I certainly would like to know if we are going to get more copies. This is a real magazine and it looks as though we could use two or three times what we received.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.:
Could have sold six thousand additional LIFE easily.

LYNN, MASS.:
LIFE sold out Friday. Could have sold five times as many.

DAVENPORT, IOWA:
In view of the complete sellout on LIFE we experienced by noon today, just five hours after it was placed on sale, may I suggest that our order on the November 30th issue be doubled.

DETROIT, MICH.:
LIFE completely sold out. Could have sold five thousand more.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.:
Complete sellout LIFE magazine. Make order three thousand copies.

BUFFALO, N. Y.:
Clean sale on LIFE. Could have handled five thousand safely.

MIAMI, FLA.:
Personally I think it is the most we have been able to ever offer the reading public for 10c, and I do not see how it can miss. Practically all our large dealers have sold out this morning and we are in a bad spot in connection with recovery work.

BOSTON, MASS.:
There were practically no copies around last night, and the copies we received this morning for recovery purposes proved a life-saver among some of the larger dealers. Be a good fellow and see what you can do for us.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.:
LIFE placed on sale Saturday. Dealers sold out and clamoring for more copies which we cannot produce. To hold good will dealers must have increased order.

WASHINGTON, D. C.:
LIFE complete sellout. Could have sold three thousand more.

RENO, NEVADA:
LIFE sensation. Make order one thousand copies.

DENVER, COLO.:
LIFE complete sell out. Could have used five thousand.

ST. LOUIS, MO.:
We got our copies this morning and made distribution to the dealers immediately and then the telephone started. Every single dealer along the line apparently had sold his copies as soon as he received them and we were just literally swamped with telephone calls of dealers who had sold all of the copies as soon as they were received. Quite a few of them were peeved because we could not supply them with a reorder. The fact remains we had no copies in the house to accomplish this, we were so to speak behind the eight ball.

OMAHA, NEBR.:
LIFE complete sellout. Could have sold three thousand extra.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA:
Our allotment of LIFE was sold out in approximately 8 hours after reaching the newsstands. Please double our original order. "The best ten cent magazine value ever placed on the newsstand." "A magazine that will make money for the dealers because of the volume sale." These are some of the reactions received from dealers who were fortunate enough to secure copies.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.:
LIFE complete sellout. Need three thousand more copies.

SCRANTON, PA.:
We have a complete sellout. The dealers are very much put out because we cannot supply the demand for this magazine. I have tried to explain that we will be unable to supply the demand for at least the next two or three issues but this does not seem to go over very well.

WICHITA, KANS.:
LIFE completely sold out. Could have sold twelve hundred extras.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.:
Can't you possibly give us at least 1500 next week, if you are unable to give us the 2500 copies asked for?

* * *

Every branch of the American News Company has reported a complete sellout of LIFE's first issue and is asking for thousands more copies than we can print of the second.

ures," direct or indirect, foreign or domestic, against Communist agitators.

Foreign diplomats poring over the text of the agreement tonight attached greatest significance to the lack of geographical limitations of the pact.

If the Komintern should carry activities into China or into Spain or anywhere, it was asserted, under the terms of the document Japan and Germany would feel themselves free to act jointly.

Immediately after signing the agreement, Von Ribbentrop, who will be a member of the permanent commission, left to talk things over with Chancellor Hitler in Berchtesgaden.

Denies Aimed at Soviet.

Tokyo, Nov. 25 (AP).—The Japanese foreign office tonight declared the Japanese-German agreement to combat communism was "not directed against the Soviet Union or any other specific power."

Rather, the announcement asserted, Japan entered the pact solely to fight Komintern activities "in support of Chinese communist armies in order to fight Japan."

At the same time, the Japanese statement held the door open for Poland to join the alliance and declared Poland was the next step "in the further objectives of Komintern activities."

The text of the foreign office statement said, in part:

"At its (the Komintern's) seventh congress, held in the summer of last year, the Komintern decided on a policy of organizing a united front with the Second Internationale to oppose fascism and imperialism, and at the same time it made plain that the future objectives of the Komintern activities were to be Japan, Germany and Poland.

"It further resolved to support the Chinese Communist armies in order to fight Japan."

The statement went on to charge the "Communist invasion hitherto had been more marked in the Orient especially in China" and had increased "in vigor since the seventh congress."

Now Invading China.

"Outer Mongolia," it continued, "and Sinkiang already have suffered from its calamitous effects, while China proper is now being subjected to the depredations of Communist armies.

"The Komintern has been surreptitiously endeavoring, through the district Manchoukuan committee of the Chinese Communist Party, to organize cells to instigate bandits and direct raids by partisan troops all over the country.

"In Japan the extreme Leftists movement temporarily showed signs of decline after the Manchoukuoan incident, but since the seventh congress of the Komintern, the movement has again become more energetic."

Declaring that Germany, under Hitler, had put into operation drastic anti-Communist policies, the foreign office said:

"* * * At the congress, Germany was selected a special objective for Komintern operations. Thus Japan and Germany were placed in similar circumstances visa-vis the Komintern."

"It should be pointed out that in that connection with or behind this agreement exists no other agreement whatsoever, and the Japanese government has no intention of forming or joining in any special international bloc for any purpose, and, finally, the present agreement is not directed against the Soviet Union or against any other specific country."

At the same time, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita was attacked in the privy council for his failure to conclude the fishing concession renewal with Russia before the anti-Communist agreement became known.

(Just as Japanese diplomats were to go to the Soviet foreign office to sign the fishing agreement after a year's patient negotiations, the Russians announced they would not sign because they knew of the Japanese-German alliance.

(The fishing concession, off the Siberian Coast, Japan holds is vital to the Japanese Empire. The present agreement expires in 1937.)

Arita said the signing had merely been postponed because of "Soviet internal procedures," and that in the event the concession was not renewed before its present expiration date, "Japan intended to continue operating as at present by all means at its command."

Siamese Twin Separated From Dead Brother

Brittany, established a monastery, the ruins of which still stand behind our house."

She further explained it was at one time a haunt of pirates and later was occupied for an interval by the French. "But the future of Sark was established when Elizabeth granted it to Sir Helier de Carteret with almost unlimited powers. When, obeying the condition in the grant, he colonized the island with 40 families, it was understood each man was to be equipped with a musket for the defense of the island. Even now, it is frequently referred to as 'the island of forty,' and when a farm changes hands, it still is cited as one of the conditions that a man with a musket shall stay on the farm."

Built of Granite.

The Hathaway home, called the Seigneurie, lies in a sheltered part of the island, and, like the other houses of the 600 inhabitants of Sark, is built of gray granite.

Hathaway pointed out that while the old Norman law still governs Sark, the government is, nevertheless, more democratic than one might expect. The ancient feudal plan has been liberalized to the extent that the Seigneurie now has a parliamentary body called the Chief Pleas.

"It sits three times a year unless an emergency requires a special meeting. Over the chief pleas, the Hathaways preside. The members are the 40 holders of the farms allotted originally in 1565 and 12 deputies elected among other inhabitants.

"In our Parliament we make all laws and regulations and are subject to no imperial taxation at all, and only to such special legislation as may be enacted by order of His Majesty the King in council," Mrs. Hathaway said.

King Is Feudal Lord.

"Therefore, the King is our feudal lord, the Duke of Normandy. Our state has from time immemorial been part of the Duchy of Normandy. As you know, William the Conqueror invaded and took England, thereby winning recognition as King of England; but to the people of Sark he remained, even after that, the Duke of Normandy."

What did the Hathaways think of the current romance of their Duke of Normandy? "That," replied the Seigneur de Serk, 'is one thing we will not discuss, though all Americans seem to be curious about it. We will talk about almost anything else."

And that "anything else" continued to be the Island of Sark, where virtually every man is either a farmer or a fisherman, making a satisfactory living out of his chosen occupation; where the women help to tend the cattle (every cow in Sark is a pedigreed Guernsey) and look after the dairies; where there is no town—only a church, a chapel, the homes and four hotels (one of these, the Dixcart, was publicized by Swinburne in his "Ballad of Sark"); where belief in witchcraft is still noticeable; where everybody is well fed and peaceful, and where the two-cell jail has been tenantless for more than four years.

Despite his American birth, Hathaway was eligible to become the Seigneur de Serk when he married the present Dame de Serk seven years ago. He served in the British Royal Flying Corps during the World War, then settled in London and became a naturalized British subject.

Yesterday the two were guests at tea of Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce and were entertained at luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hathaway. They are staying at the Mayflower and will remain until December 1, when they will go to New York to leave there by plane for California.

The daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hathaway, Miss Helen, who attends Webber College in Boston, and Miss Cynthia, a student at Vassar, are both home for Thanksgiving and to greet their uncle and aunt.

Pension Act Spurs Citizen Requests

By the Associated Press.

Aliens within America's gates are clamoring for citizenship in increasing numbers.

Col. Daniel W. MacCormack, commissioner of immigration, believes the social security act has been one factor spurring aliens to become citizens. Under Federal law it is possible for States to exclue aliens from certain social security benefits, such as aid to the blind and noncontributory pensions to the needy aged.

Mrs. Harry Costello Dies in Hospital

Mrs. Harry Costello, 45, wife of the famous Georgetown football player, died late yesterday afternoon in Georgetown Hospital, after having been stricken suddenly in her Dupont circle apartment a few hours earlier.

Mrs. Costello, formerly Mary Kitchen, married the one-time all-American gridiron star in Detroit in 1917. Costello distinguished himself at Georgetown from 1909 until 1912.

She was a native of Ortonville, Mich. The couple had no children. Costello now is a sports writer for the Washington Times and publicity director for Louisiana State University.

Policeman Wife-Slayer Sentenced to Prison

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—A judge sentenced Frank X. Donnelly, a former police sergeant, today to five to ten years in prison for killing his wife, with the side comment that "a flippant, tantalizing female may drive a man to desperate limits."

Judge Thomas Downs, who pronounced sentence in Queens County court, said "the death of Mrs. Donnelly was the consummation of a tragedy of hatred developed from a series of circumstances, and the hatred was mutual. But the woman is dead, and the man must be punished."

Elevated Crash Toll Now Ten; Driver Is Held

'Human Element' Blamed in Chicago Crash; 57 Still in City's Hospitals.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Motorman Van R. Grooms was held in technical custody tonight while representatives of city, State and Federal governments investigated the most disastrous wreck in the history of Chicago's elevated railroad.

Grooms was at the control of a North Shore flier last night when it plunged into the rear end of a crowded Evanston express train—killing 10 persons and scattering 65 injured passengers along the right of way. Two officers were detailed to his hospital room. His physicians said shock and injuries made it impossible for him to tell his story today at an inquest. The inquest was continued until December 15.

Fifty-seven persons were confined to hospitals, three in critical condition.

Bernard J. Fallon, general manager of the elevated lines, blamed the tragedy on "man failure, or the human element."

State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney said if his inquiry showed criminal negligence on the part of any employes, he would bring manslaughter charges against them.

The death of George Fulton, 59, increased the fatalities to ten this afternoon. The other victims were Miss Mary Mullen, 27; Miss Vera Le Febure, 35; J. C. Diffendal, 64; R. F. Larson, 39; Quinn L. Morrison, 37; Jacob J. Borchardt, 56; Samuel Schwartz, 45; Raymond Winberg, 45, and Miss Nell Wilson, 44. Mrs. Margaret Golde, Frank Heffernan and James Heckman were in grave condition.

the one-party system of soviet government.

"Parties can exist only when there are antagonisms between classes," he said. "There are no class distinctions in the U. S. S. R., and no grounds for other parties. Only one party—that is the Communist Party."

Meanwhile, Russia tonight spared the life of a German engineer, Emil I. Stickling, who was sentenced to death for plotting against the Soviet regime and killing 14 miners in acts of sabotage.

The central executive committee in terse announcement disclosed that Stickling's sentence had been commuted to 10 years' imprisonment after the German embassy had made repeated, violent protests in the case.

Stickling and eight Russians were sentenced to death November 22 after all admitted total or partial guilt in plotting to wreck the great Kamerova Coal Mines in western Siberia.

The sentences of two or the Russians also were commuted to 10 years.

The C. E. C. also disclosed that the other condemned men had been shot by firing squads.

"THANKS A MILLION"
FOR MORE THAN A MILLION

America has bought 1,130,000 Chevrolets during the past twelve months, thereby giving Chevrolet the greatest year in its history and the greatest measure of buyer preference it has ever enjoyed.

CHEVROLET The builders of Chevrolet are thankful for many things, but most of all for the warm friendship of the American people.

And so again at this Thanksgiving season we say, "Thank you, America," for you have given Chevrolet a measure of good-will without parallel in the annals of modern industry.

Consider, for a moment, all that you have done to inspire Chevrolet's appreciation during the past twelve months:

You have purchased 1,130,000 Chevrolets; you have made Chevrolet your favorite car for the seventh time in the past ten years; you have given Chevrolet strong preference in every section of the country; you have conferred this same high honor upon Chevrolet trucks by purchasing more than 205,000 commercial units; you have made 1936 the most successful year in all Chevrolet history.

And now, to climax these expressions of friendship, you are displaying even more marked preference for the new Chevrolet for 1937.

It is difficult to express adequate appreciation for gifts so great and so generous as these.

All we can say is, "Thanks a million" for more than a million cars in 1936; and all we can do is offer you the still finer Chevrolet of 1937 in return for the finest friendship ever bestowed upon any motor car manufacturer.

The A. F. of L. Debacle.

The resolutions adopted by the American Federation of Labor hold comparatively little interest this year. Public attention has concentrated on the far more dramatic aspect of the Tampa convention. For that gathering has driven a wedge in the split between the old-line craft unions and the Committee for Industrial Organization that will not be easily dislodged.

In the concluding phase of the dispute within the convention the questions at issue were submerged beneath one dominant fact. Organized labor has lost the strength of unity. In the tragic words of Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, the convention "started the federation toward its own destruction." With this heritage of antagonism, there will be an inevitable tendency for one group to oppose objectives of the other merely for the sake of opposition.

The A. F. of L. must now realize that its policies have the support of far fewer workers than were lined up behind them a year ago. Moreover, some of the unions still within the federation are intensely dissatisfied with the course that has been followed. And the prospects for settlement of the controversy seem to be more remote than they were before the convention began.

It is true, of course, that the convention made a gesture of leaving the door open for a compromise. At the same time, however, it made compromise more difficult. The latest talk centers about lifting the suspension imposed upon the C. I. O. unions and establishing a special department in the A. F. of L. to carry on the industrial organization drive under the direction of John L. Lewis. Apparently this plan is advanced on the theory that Mr. Lewis, having been ineffectively spanked, will now submit to discipline and follow the policy outlined for him by the executive council. Somehow it doesn't sound in character.

Even if the federation were holding out an olive branch, the C. I. O. leaders would properly regard it with suspicion. For the convention has granted the executive council authority to revoke the charters and certificates of affiliation of the suspended unions, or any other unions which may incur its displeasure. With this club at its command, the A. F. of L. leadership will be able completely to dominate any organizing activities. Unless they have experienced a real change of heart, the establishment of a department for industrial organization might merely be a signal to start the row all over again.

What is needed is not the pretense but the essence of compromise. Before any real solution can be worked out the dominant forces within the A. F. of L. must be willing to live and let live. That objective can scarcely be promoted by concentrating still more arbitrary power in the majority of the executive council.

A Popular Mandate?

The executive board of the United Mine Workers urges passage of a constitutional amendment, if the labor legislation which they sponsor cannot otherwise be effectively enforced. But John L. Lewis, president of the union, believes that Congress "now has a mandate from the people," which makes constitutional amendments unnecessary. A large number of persons evidently share his belief that the huge majority vote for President Roosevelt in some unexplained way constitutes an indorsement of certain legislative acts invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Political analysts are still trying to decide what meaning to draw from the size of the popular vote for Mr. Roosevelt. It is obvious that he received a general vote of confidence, but that can scarcely be interpreted as an indorsement of any specific policies. Certainly it was not an injunction to re-enact legislation declared unconstitutional by the courts. In an election contest in which so many important issues were at stake the public was given few opportunities to register a clean-cut choice between this or that policy.

To talk, therefore, of a popular mandate being given to Congress to revive dubious regulatory laws is an unrealistic approach. Even if we could assume that the election did convey a clear message to Congress as to what the present majority wants, it would not follow that the Constitution can be ignored in response to such demands. The election has not removed a single constitutional limitation upon legislative action. Neither has it affected the validity of the arguments advanced by the justices of the Supreme Court in outlawing the NRA, the AAA, and other New Deal measures.

If the Administration has any intention of sponsoring social and economic legislation that is not within the power of Congress to pass, the only legitimate way to give effect to its plans is to press for a constitutional amendment.

Thanksgiving And Democracy.

Thanksgiving Day, which finds so much in this country for which Americans can be sincerely grateful, also emphasizes the contrast in the current picture of European civilization. Not since the early celebrations of this national festival has the gulf between conditions in the New World and the Old seemed so wide. While three centuries ago hardship and insecurity were the lot of every American, today it is the Europeans who have reasons to know the terrors of uncertainty and instability. The wheel has come full circle, and the privileges and responsibilities of saving the fruits of Western civilization are passing to this side of the Atlantic.

Most Americans realize that these responsibilities cannot be met by assuming a purely negative attitude toward events in Europe. The scroll which is unrolling there presents a picture which is much more complex and much more dangerous to the isolationist position than were any of the traditional nationalistic rivalries of the past. Day by day it becomes more clear that the civil war in Spain is far from being merely a domestic problem of that country. This once great colonizing empire is now itself being treated as a colonial battleground in which the rival systems of communism and fascism are having their first great trial of strength.

During the fighting in Spain, concepts of national sovereignty have been flouted as never before in history. The assistance, at first surreptitious and now brazenly open, which Germany, Italy and Portugal have given to the rebels, sets at naught the cardinal principles of international law. We would have a rough parallel if during our Civil War Great Britain and France, sympathizing with the South, had recognized the Richmond government not as an independent power but as the only legitimate authority for the whole United States. A policy which was not even envisaged then was actually established last week when Rome and Berlin accepted the Burgos junta as the accredited government of Spain.

Doubtless the Spanish rebels have liberally pledged the resources of the Spanish people to secure this aid. But while Italy may expect to receive the Balearic Islands, and Germany special concessions in Spanish Morocco, such bribes would not of themselves explain the Fascist and Nazi intervention. Mussolini and Hitler are more interested in a new theory of colonization, the establishment of satellite states, which will begin by applying their philosophy of government and which will end by enlarging the sphere of influence of Berlin and Rome.

Already the Italo-German accord to this end has worked successfully in making Austria and Hungary complete dependents of the combine. The effort to take over Spain is well advanced. Czechoslovakia may be the next small state to feel the pressure. And the new German-Japanese agreement directed against Soviet Russia, to which Italy is expected to adhere, shows that the movement is by no means purely European in scope. Indeed it is no secret that the Pan American Conference, shortly to be opened by President Roosevelt at Buenos Aires, has in the background fear of the possible spread of international fascism to Latin America.

The Communist Internationale, with its abortive efforts to direct world revolution from Moscow, has provided some incentive and an excellent excuse for the at least equally dangerous fascist internationale now getting into full swing. And the growing antagonism of these two bitterly hostile social systems is making the position of the democratic nations, which seek to avoid extremism of either right or left, exceedingly difficult. This can be seen in the fact that neither Great Britain, France nor the United States, for all their stability, wealth and power, are really influencing the course of the present world crisis. The lead has passed to more aggressive hands.

It is unlikely that this will continue to be the case. As great powers, neither Great Britain, France nor even the United States can pretend indifference to any reorientation which seriously menaces the present balance of power. And as democracies, neither Great Britain, France nor the United States can be unconcerned about an organized effort by either fascist or communist powers to spread their doctrine by force throughout the world. The democracies hold no brief for either of those systems. But obviously the one which is the more flagrantly aggressive is the one which will be eyed more askance in democratic capitals.

So this Thanksgiving Day finds the American people not merely grateful for their present immunity from the hideous class war psychology of Europe, but also determined that this immunity, dependent upon the perpetuation of the democratic ideal, shall be maintained. It is well that on a holiday so traditionally democratic in nature the strength of the rising tide of anti-democratic forces should be realized at its full significance.

Enlarged But Still Secret.

The adherence of Belgium, Holland and Switzerland to the tripartite currency pact has been momentarily expected ever since that agreement was announced. Consequently, news of its formal extension to these countries comes as no surprise.

Hopes for eventual world-wide currency stabilization are greatly strengthened by the inclusion of these three small but important democracies in an arrangement which presumably has as its objective the ultimate restoration of an international gold standard. Before that goal is reached, however, a great many obstacles will have to be cleared away. Furthermore, progress toward stability of world currencies depends to a great extent upon the wisdom with which the stabilization funds are administered.

With the withdrawal of the regulations permitting private gold exports to foreign central banks whenever our exchange rates with gold-standard countries reached the gold export point, the last vestige of an automatic adjustment of the exchange value of the dollar to the price of gold has disappeared. Since only Belgium had remained eligible to receive gold sent by private bankers, prohibition of all private shipments may not be particularly significant. Nevertheless, in the absence of any clear statement of the aims of the Treasury, or the extent of its commitments under the currency pacts, its assumption of complete control over gold exports has a disturbing side.

A transfer of gold between stabilization funds, or for agencies acting for public treasuries, may provide an imperfect, provisional stabilization of currencies infinitely to be preferred to the chaos from which we are slowly emerging. But political management is a poor substitute for the largely automatic adjustments that prevented erratic exchange fluctuations under the old-type gold standard. That is the goal at which we should aim, while conceding the impossibility of an immediate return to a system permitting free shipment of gold from country to country. And the public is entitled to more specific assurance that we are headed in the desirable direction.

The Treasury, acting in conjunction with Great Britain and France, has undertaken an extremely difficult task. If mistakes are made, the people of the United States, not private bankers, will be the ones who will have to pay for official miscalculations. Under the circumstances, the extreme secrecy that surrounds the operations of the stabilization fund and the scanty information available as to the character and objectives of the arrangements made inevitably give rise to anxiety.

In the long run, exchange relationships can not be controlled or determined by any kind of management. The value of a currency has to be adjusted to the economic and financial condition of each country, although temporary fluctuations may be "ironed out" by employment of stabilization funds.

For that reason eternal vigilance is necessary to prevent public funds from being wasted in vain attempts to stabilize exchanges at levels that do not provide a basis for a permanent balance in international accounts.

From Zbyszko To Nabisco.

The Terrible Turk, and Stanislaus Zbyszko would both have denied that a wrestler by any other name would sound as tough. They adopted their noms de guerre in the old days when wrestling was a sedentary profession. In those days customers bought tickets mainly out of morbid curiosity, to see whether a referee-announcer with a limited vocabulary could handle Slavic consonants without choking.

Then the situation changed. Gus Sonnenberg and Jim McMillen condensed the tactics of football into the roped square. All but the oldest customers liked the change and accepted a college degree as a valuable qualification for mayhem, especially if the graduate's major study had been the flying block. An all-American, instead of an all-foreign name became a business asset. Still no one thought that wrestlers, like that heavyweight boxing champion who lectured on Shakespeare, would ever go highbrow, even to gain publicity.

But now Washington has seen a wrestler who was advertised in advance as an English lord. It was bad enough to draft wrestlers from the lists of B. A.'s. It is even worse, those interested in the traditions of wrestling will think, to think that ringmasters like Jack Curley may even now be combing Burke's Peerage for recruits.

Still it is good publicity. In England a title in the ring would attract an audience sure that the gentleman would defeat the bully, and well satisfied about it. In the United States such contests are more likely to draw a crowd with less simple faith in Norman blood, anxiously urging the plebeian poundage to break his lordship's neck.

There are two circumstances under which it is hard to leave a gambling game: When you're winning—and when you're losing.

A telegraph company now allows you to add "love" to a message without charge, even when you mean it.

A careless pedestrian usually gets hit in the end.

Parks And Abattoirs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to the proposed meat-packing plant at Benning I would like to say that there has never been but one plant at the stock yards in the 40 years of their existence and this one plant has handled a part of the products for the smaller meat concerns in Washington. It is ridiculous to compare or think of Washington as being like Chicago.

People that have lived in Washington for a lifetime well know that such a thing as odors coming from this plant have been unknown. There has been so much talk of this plant being a nuisance that proves to be nothing more than imagination.

It is a shame for a city of 600,000 to be governed by the personal sentiments and prejudices of a few officials and Government agencies. Must everything be sacrificed for parks? No one wants swamps but I believe that if the people of the northeast and southeast sections thought they had to sacrifice everything to have their swamps reclaimed they would rather have the swamps. Variety is the spice of life and so variety is the spice of a city, and what Washington needs is more variety. Everyone can't work for the Government, and Washington is in need of more sources of employment.

There is at present no meat-packing plant in the city, and doesn't it seem only right that a city as large as Washington should have at least one such plant to supply its stores with this essential necessity and where its own people could be employed and its money remain and be distributed, instead of having out-of-town packers bring their products into Washington and then take Washington money and distribute it in their cities?

This company is not a newcomer to Washington; it has already been established here, but wishes to rebuild and again become a part of the city and give of its benefits.

Is it logical to keep the unemployed depending on relief or allow a modern plant to be built where some of them could go to work?

Surviving Congressmen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The general repudiation of below-the-belt tactics, corrupt use of money and attempts at coercion in the election was widespread and significant. The voters indicated quite clearly that such methods are not as effective as they once were. True, Representatives Driscoll and Sisson were beaten, obviously because of lavish expenditures by power-trust agents, but these were isolated exceptions. In practically every other instance, progressive legislators were re-elected. Sometimes their majorities were reduced, which is not surprising when we consider how much money was spent to defeat them. But they did come back!

Congressman Hildebrandt, of South Dakota, is another square-jawed liberal who won in the face of bitter personal attacks and a vicious campaign of misrepresentation. He and Senator Bulow are the only victors on the Democratic side in the State. All the way from the Governor down, the Democrats lost out otherwise, and the other South Dakota Congressman, Werner, went down in the fray. Hildebrandt has taken a pronounced stand for human rights against property domination, and in this, his third term, he will undoubtedly accomplish more for the people than ever before. He is one of the dependable, consistent kind of men who "wear well." The talk that he may succeed Senator Norbeck in 1938 in the other House is not idle gossip. He is a strong prospect.

Society Buds?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have heard rumors of the decay of the cavalry arm of the United States military service since the advent of motor equipment, but my impression was that it did not particularly apply to cavalry personnel.

The article I read in this morning's paper about a couple of neophyte gunmen taking away from a cavalry sentry his gun convinces me that it must be true that the cavalry has become more or less of a society organization, and that even its enlisted men have become society buds like their countless high officers now congregated around Fort Myer for the edification of the debutantes! I hear that high ranking officers are so thick over at Fort Myer that it takes a writ of habeas corpus to find a commissioned officer lower than a captain.

The idea of a gunman taking a sentry's gun away from him while on post makes me wonder about the so-called preparedness that Chief of Staff Craig in his annual report tells us about!

There ought to be an investigation, Mr. Nye!

The Mellow Mood.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Twice Mr. Morley has received due recognition for distinguished editorial writing. I wish to give my acclaim to him, whosoever he be, who furnishes those tidbits to the editorial section which do delight my soul. My attention was called to him in the sea-serpent period and I sadly miss its trail over your pages.

I totally disagree with his stand on the correct pronunciation of tomato, promugated several years ago. I consider his view of corn on the cob incorrect, but lately he has done nicely by oysters; and in general, whatever his theme, he manages to giv it just the right twist and to put at least one reader in a mellow mood, at peace with things as they are. I look to him to mitigate the rigors of what may be a hard winter.

The Loyalist Viewpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the first page of today's Post—to my regret—I read a summation of the Spanish trouble under the heading: "Fascism vs. Communism." A more appropriate heading would have been: "Fascism vs. Democracy."

The dispatches make it very clear that the vast majority of the people—and democracy means rule of the people—are loyalists, fighting to preserve a government which they elected to office. It is equally plain that they are fighting a gang of mercenaries, imported by desperadoes. It is exactly as if in this country the die-hards had hired gangsters to set aside the results of the recent election. I seem to remember that even the opposition papers, the morning after the Roosevelt landslide, were unanimous in their acceptance of the decision, extolling it as a vindication of democratic principles. The vanguished would abide by the decision.

The present Madrid government is an elected government, in which Communists were very much in the minority. Therefore, to call all defenders of the government Communists seriously beclouds the issue and plays into the hands of the world's Fascist forces. For propaganda purposes, Hitler and Mussolini could not have written a better head than the one The Post used.

However, there is a corollary to your headline: if the defenders of democracy are Communists, then there has been a lot of lying about communism in the last nineteen years. Perhaps that is the impression The Post really wishes to convey. However, we might wish for less subtle methods of handling the news in such dangerous times.

Another Philippine View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The relatively calm sailing of the new government of the Philippines may yet be wrecked if the same blunder of the last 40 years is again committed. This is the appointment of representatives of the United States to those islands of persons who were unfit to govern because of their lack of sympathy.

Mr. De Nolasco, in his recent letter to The Post, advocates the restoration of the type of man with a stubborn will. I do not see why Mr. de Nolasco should favor a "negative" character over persons of the type of former Govs. Harrison or Murphy, both highly esteemed and trusted in the Philippines. He asserts, for instance, that their willingness to co-operate and their readiness to say "yes" to the natives' demand for a larger share in their own government constitute a weakness in principle. May I remind him, since we both belong to the same country and since we both, I presume, aim at giving a better account of our people, that there are not many things which could be more harmful to the Filipino cause than to use our freedom of opinion to misrepresent the unanimous wish of our countrymen.

Individuals of the very type he advocates have had their chances to administer America's mission among the Filipinos. I do not need to go into details as to the indifference with which the Filipinos worked side by side with these men, nor need I mention the widespread indignation with which the islanders responded to their vanities except to say that they were failures.

As to the danger of President Quezon going too far, let us be fair and give the other two instituted branches of the Commonwealth government due regard.

If Gen. Johnson fits Mr. de Nolasco's standards, I say without reservation that the former NRA administrator is not the desired man for the Phipippine post at this concluding period.

An American League?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt's apparent efforts to involve this country in South American affairs reminds me of an epitaph I once saw on a gravestone which read, "I was well off but wanted to be better off so here I am."

The United States is on good terms and in no danger of war with its smaller southern neighbors. However, that apparently isn't enough. So, the Roosevelt Administration is seemingly taking steps to create an American League of Nations to keep peace among quarrelsome Latin-American countries. If this program is carried out, it may or may not be necessary to call forth United States troops to enforce the league's decisions in behalf of peace, thereby involving us in minor but bloody wars which would have been no concern of ours if we had followed our prior policy of non-intermeddling.

Anti-Fascist Nuns.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To further substantiate my claim that all Catholics are not on the side of Gen. Franco's marauding rebels, permit me to quote from a news dispatch from Barcelona, Spain, November 13.

Two elderly Roman Catholic nuns raised their fists in an anti-Fascist salute and cried, "Viva Republica!"

The two nuns were Mother Ana Roca Aller, 73 years old, the mother superior in a Carmelite convent at Talavera, and Sister Teresa, 69.

The truth will out, even in a world of dissension and dictatorship.

REV. E. J. IRVINE.

Washington, Nov. 18.

The Voteless District

THE Constitution says that the Congress "shall have power . . . to exercise exclusive jurisdiction over such district . . . as may become the seat of government." This language probably means that only a constitutional amendment could give the District of Columbia the status of a State. Statehood would be necessary to let the inhabitants vote for President and Vice President.

Historians agree that the Constitutional Convention wanted Congress to control the seat of government because of an unfortunate occurrence in 1783. The Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, was invaded by a detachment of soldiers who demanded back pay. Members of the Congress were subjected to verbal abuse, and for a time seriously feared bodily injury. No protection was available from the local police force. The convention four years later wanted to make sure that the Government would always be able to command forces to protect itself.

Under the Articles of Confederation, Congress passed a resolution to fix the seat of government at or near Trenton, N. J. But the Congress had no funds with which to carry out the resolution, and perhaps lacked the authority to pass it in the first place. So nothing further was done about it.

After the Union was organized, the decision on the seat of government was reached by a compromise. In return for a capital on the Potomac, the Southern States agreed to Federal assumption of the State debts. Maryland and Virginia both ceded land for the District of Columbia. But no Federal buildings were erected on the Virginia site, and it was retroceded to the Old Dominion in 1846, after a favorable referendum of the inhabitants of the section.

In 1871 dissatisfaction among the citizens with local conditions led Congress to give the District much the status of a Territory. A Governor was appointed by the President, who named also the upper house of the Legislature. The lower house was elected, as was a voteless Delegate to the House of Representatives. But the new regime proved financially extravagant, and far exceeded the debt limit which had been set by Congress. So in 1874 Congress withdrew the local autonomy which had been granted.

The District of Columbia is now governed by three Commissioners appointed by the President. Laws governing the District are enacted by Congress after consideration by committees of the Senate and the House on District affairs. Congress appropriates toward the expenses of government, because much of the property in the District is Government-owned.

Recently a movement has arisen in the District to restore local autonomy, on the ground that taxation without representation is tyranny. The opposition holds that the District is really not so much the residence of the inhabitants as the property of all the people of the United States, to be managed for their benefit. Also, that many residents of the District maintain legal residence elsewhere and vote outside the District, especially now that States are beginning to allow voting and even registration by mail.

The District of Columbia has a population of 615,000, of which number some 430,000 are citizens 21 years of age or older. The number of Federal civil employes in the District is around 115,000, some of whom live in adjacent Maryland and Virginia.

A Century Of Gilbert.

A hundred years have passed since the birth of William Schwenk Gilbert, a quarter of a century since his death, yet his lyrics are still fresh and familiar. In a sense, his works are dated. The aestheticism of Swinburne and Wilde that he satirized in "Patience" needs explaining to many a modern audience. The mockery of the British Admiralty in "Pinafore" no longer causes political complications. Some of the lines are almost incomprehensible today. Only those with long memories can place accurately such names as Paget, Jullien, D'Orsay, the Bishop of Soder and Man and Doctor Sacheverell, to mention only six of the names ripped off in the first verse of the receipt for a Heavy Dragoon in "Patience." The Major General, in "The Pirates of Penzance," admitted that his military knowledge had only been brought down to the beginning of the century, meaning the beginning of the nineteenth century, while today Frederic's awful sentence in the same play to serve the pirates until 1940 is not as shocking as it was when the play was first produced in 1880.

Much of the point of the irony of which Gilbert was so much the master has passed, but, like "Gulliver's Travels," the operettas remain accidental classics. Sullivan may have hoped he was writing for posterity when he supplied the music, though one of the causes of his break with his partner was his desire to write music that would last. But Gilbert, with his apprenticeship in music hall ballads and magazine verse, would probably have laughed sardonically at anyone who predicted that his operettas would remain popular long after many of the persons and situations he satirized were forgotten. And to know how popular they still are, it is not necessary to go to New York, where the British D'Oyley Carte company is for the second season playing to packed houses. Few records enjoy as steady a sale as do those of Gilbert and Sullivan. And, as Mr. Deems Taylor pointed out some years ago, those who know the tunes know the words.

Invisible War

By Barnet Nover.

Strategy Of The Dictatorships.

IS THAT "next world war" which has loomed so forbiddingly on the international horizon during these last years already upon us?

From a common-sense point of view such a question appears to be meaningless. A general conflict in the conventional sense, in the sense that term was understood in the past and exemplified most recently in the years following August, 1914, is certainly not the reality of the moment. All of the seven great powers of the world are at peace with one another. Insofar as the world is actually plagued by war, it is so in a limited sense.

Fighting is going on at the moment at three points: On the Mongolian border; in the remoter parts of Ethiopia, where scattered resistance to Italian domination continues to be manifested; and in Spain. Of these three, two—the fighting in Mongolia and the fighting in Spain—come under the classification of civil wars, while the third—Italy's mopping operations in East Africa—constitutes, on the basis of recognized historical precedents, a form of colonial warfare.

• • • •

BUT THE SIGNIFICANT thing is that neither the fighting on the frontiers of Suiyan Province in Inner Mongolia, nor the fighting in Spain, can in any real sense be regarded purely as civil wars. On the contrary, they are illuminating manifestations of a new technique of warmaking employed by certain of the great powers to achieve all the gains they believe can be derived from the use of force, without at the same time involving themselves with other powers equal or superior to them in strength.

The Chahar invaders, against whom the provincial authorities of Suiyan, with the aid of the Nanking government, are hurling their armies are, openly, employing Japanese planes manned, it may be, by Japanese fliers loaned for the purpose.

In Spain Gen. Franco represents less and less the Spanish elements that want the Popular Front regime overthrown and more and more the spearpoint of German and Italian ambitions. Without the cannon, airplanes, munitions these nations have supplied him; without the fliers and advisers who have helped give him a preponderance of offensive power, Franco would probably have got nowhere. And, on the other side, the resistance which the Madrid government is putting up represents to an increasing degree the resistance of anti-Fascist Europe, headed by Russia, to Mussolini and Hitler. In a very real sense, therefore, has Spain become the cockpit of Europe.

• • • •

IT WAS BECAUSE Japan was unprepared, in 1931 and 1932, directly to challenge the signatories of the nine-power treaty and the Covenant of the League of Nations that it was compelled to invent the myth of a war that was only a policing operation. This strategy worked to delay an alignment of powers against Japan. And when at long last such an alignment did come into existence, Japan invented the myth of a Manchurian nationalist movement to provide the stage setting for an "independent" Manchukuo.

Now, still unprepared to wage war directly on China, Tokyo is using its Mongolian and Manchukuoan "allies" to win that control over Suiyan Province which it has been unable to secure through other forms of pressure on the Chinese.

Exactly the same technique is being employed by Germany and Italy in Spain. Indeed, if Walter Duranty is to be believed, the Spanish uprising was in part the actual creation of one of these Fascist powers. It was after a visit to Berlin, where he was promised the direct support of the Third Reich, says [illegible] Sanjurjo, the original leader of the Spanish uprising, raised the banner of revolt. As it happened, Sanjurjo was killed while flying from Portugal to Spain. But the pledges made to him by the Berlin government were carried out [illegible] respect to his successor, Gen. Franco.

• • • •

THE INTERESTS of the two Fascist dictatorships appear to be, so far as the Spanish crisis is concerned, wholly harmonious. But, in the past, their interests have not infrequently been divergent and sometimes in direct conflict. It is interesting to note, however, that the same technique they are now employing against other powers in Spain they employed against each other in Austria two years ago.

Through his puppet, Starhemberg, whose private army, the Heimwehr, was in no small degree financed by Italy, Musolini put considerable pressure on the Austrian government to eliminate the Austrian Socialists—the chief obstacle to Italian domination over Austria. The criminally brutal assault on the Socialist municipality of Vienna in February, 1934, which shocked the civilized world, was undertaken on direct orders from Rome. Mussolini had his way. But when the Socialists were driven underground there still remained the Austrian Nazis, Hitler's spearpoint in the Danubian republic.

With the international situation being what it was in 1934, Hitler did not dare undertake a direct invasion of Austria for the purpose of annexing it to the Third Reich. He hoped to accomplish it through the device of an internal rebellion leading to the establishment of a Nazi regime in Vienna.

• • • •

HOWEVER, the Austrian Nazis proved, when the test came in the summer of 1914, unequal to the occasion. They murdered Dollfuss but found it impossible to seize the government. Had they, at that moment, received aid from Berlin the story might have been quite different from what it was. But Hitler fought shy of giving that needed aid. In unmistakable fashion Mussolini, by mobilizing a large number of troops along the Brenner, made it clear to him that such action on the part of Der Fuehrer would mean war. Thus Austria's "independence" was saved. But it is clear that Mussolini, even as Hitler, did not care a fig for Austria's sovereignty. The two dictators are equally contemptuous of Spain's sovereignty.

It is, indeed, an extremely disturbing fact that while the agencies of war—and in particular the Fascist dictatorships and Japan—are no respecters of frontiers or sovereignty, and are acting in deliberate disregard of the sovereign rights of nations, the peace agencies of the world are in a real sense halted by considerations of international law. The League of Nations, for instance, cannot act in the Spanish crisis, even if it would, because that problem is technically a domestic one. Had it come to a showdown in Austria in 1934 it would have been equally helpless.

Thus it is that following Manchuria and Austria and Danzig, where Germany is also employing the same technique of invisible or vicarious war, the Spanish situation casts an extremely disturbing light on the future.

What has been done in Spain can be done elsewhere—in Czechoslovakia, for instance; or the Ukraine, or Rumania. The dictatorships have learned to make war without getting themselves in the fight by supplying arms to willing agents in the lands they would conquer. And the democracies, hogtied by devotion to legal forms, by humanitarian considerations and, above all, by fear of war, stand by helplessly.

The world of nations has become a gangster's world.

On Naming States.

Abolishing the present boundary lines of the States and redistricting the country has always been a tempting pastime for those who believe that national ills can be removed by changing the map.

The map of the United States is redrawn again, this time for purposes of administrative efficiency, by Arthur Pound in the Review of Reviews magazine. The country is cut up into 12 districts, the new boundaries boldly disregarding old States lines.

What strikes the reader is that Mr. Pound does not supply more imaginative names for his grand scheme. Names like "Northwest," "Atlantic," "Midland" and "Gulf" are too commonplace for such a grandiose idea. Only "Appalachia" is in character. Certainly Thomas Jefferson would not have let an opportunity like this slip by. In 1784 he proposed the following names for the States to be carved out of the old Northwest Territory: Chersonesus, Assenisipia, Sylvania, Pelisipia, Illinoia, Polytoamis, Mesopotamia, and Michigania.

Jefferson believed in letting himself go in the christening of his brain children. There is no harm playing the game for all it is worth.

Japan Sheathes Her Sword?

Tokyo Correspondent Detects Friendlier Note In Air.

By Frank H. Hedges,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

DESPITE Japan's insistence for five years past that the nation must rely upon itself alone and must be guided solely by the "national spirit," or Yamato Damashii, in all that it does, few nations in the world are more dependent on their foreign relations than is the empire of Japan. This is true economically in a constructive way; it is quite as true politically and militarily in what might be termed a non-constructive way; that is, the empire's peace, security and general well-being rest largely upon the terms on which it is living with its neighbors.

When Japan launched its Manchurian campaign, followed by withdrawal from the League of Nations, it definitely reoriented its whole foreign policy, with the emphasis put upon its position in Eastern Asia.

It has been necessary, therefore, in attempting to read and evaluate Japa..ese foreign policy to look primarily at its relations with the nations of the neighboring continents, principally China, Soviet Russia and now, since its creation, Manchukuo. Since August 24, when two Japanese journalists were mobbed to death at the interior Chinese city of Chengtu, Japan's relations with China have been its principal concern in foreign affairs.

Relations With China Strained By Murders.

THE CHENGTU murders were followed by others and by additional anti-Japanese incidents in China of less important nature. Relations between the two nations became gravely strained, and it was well within the realm of possibility that war, whether officially given that name or not, would break out. The Chinese people had nearly reached the limit of their endurance, and there was and still is an increasingly powerful faction in China that favors challenging Japan on the field of battle. Even if he had been so inclined, which is most doubtful, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek could not have acceded to Japan's demands without internal rebellion on his hands.

The two most objectionable of those demands are joint Sino-Japanese military co-operation against the "Red menace" in China, and the granting of an autonomy to the northern provinces of the republic that would amount in practice to their independence from the Nanking government and their definite passing under the control of Tokyo. All of China, even including the province affected, is adamant against this step, and it will never be taken unless forced by the might of Japanese arms.

The world was treated to the seeming paradox of Japan's refusing to enforce its demands through the strength of its military machine. Instead, a policy of conciliation was adopted and is still being pursued. The demands have not been withdrawn and probably will never be, but on the other hand it is likely that they still never be granted. Some face-saving formula may be worked out whereby both governments and both peoples will be, if not entirely satisfied, sufficiently placated to let the situation go by the board automatically and without further action.

In the meantime Japan is actually obtaining the substance of what it wants, at least in the important North China province of Hopei, with its two cities of Peiping and Tientsin, and in the adoining but less important province of Chahar. Political control is still vested in Nanking, but the Chinese council governing those twin provinces dares not go too greatly against Japanese wishes nor counter to Japanese demands.

Chiang Kai-shek Profits From Sino-Japanese Clash.

CHINA, too, is profiting hugely from the present Sino-Japanese conflict. Chiang Kai-shek in particular is profiting. Only this summer he succeeded in bringing the southwestern provinces back under the direct control of Nanking, and he is now extending Nanking's authority in a most effective way into all of North China except Hopei and Chahar. He is even making psychological gains there.

Although his policy is far from pleasing to Chinese extremists, to the great masses of the Chinese the position he has adopted and to which he is now adhering vis-a-vis Japan permits him to pose as a strong national hero in opposing Japanese aggression. This brings with it a rallying of popular support to him throughout the republic.

Han Fu-chu, head of the Shantung government and a man whom Japan believed a year ago to be favorable to this empire, is definitely in the Nanking camp. Yen Hsi-shan, the "model governor" of Shansi, who has played a lone band during the greater part of his career, has likewise gone over to Nanking. More important in this instance, Yen has really been eliminated as a major factor, so that henceforth it will not make much difference where he stands. Chiang Kai-shek has poured troops personally loyal to himself into Yen's province of Shansi and is unquestionably in control there.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

China Called Winner Thus Far In Struggle.

WHEN the Sino-Japanese situation of the past few months is reviewed, it becomes clear that China has come off best so far. Japan has not suffered a major defeat, but it has unquestionably lost heavily, despite the tangible gains in the north in an economic way. The tension is not yet ended, but it is appreciably relaxed. The outbreak of war is not an impossibility, but it has ceased to be the probability that it was some weeks ago.

It is barely possible that the ultimate result will be a change in Japan's policy toward China, a substitution for the military pressure of the past few years of a saner and more rational policy, a policy based on something approaching equality and of genuine benefit to both nations. What that would mean to the whole eastern Asia, and, potentially, to the world, is tremendous. It cannot be regarded as a certainty, but it has at last become a possibility.

The atmosphere as regards Soviet Russia has cleared greatly since the end of last March, when the last really serious clash on the Manchukuo - Mongolian border took place. Moscow attributes this to the fact that Soviet military strength in the Russian Far East has been so greatly increased that it has earned the respect of the Japanese military and civilian governments. Japan attributes it to other causes more flattering to itself. Whatever the cause, the fact of improved Soviet Russian-Japanese relations is undeniable.

Japan's new ambassador to Moscow, Mamoru Shigemitsu, on the eve of his departure for his post, summarized this improved relationship in a press interview. The xevatious oil question in northern Saghalin had been at least temporarily solved. He expected the fishery convention to be signed by the Japanese charge d'affaires even before he himself reached Moscow. Border commissions had been appointed and were at work on this cause of trouble, and delegates of Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia were meeting in conference at the border town of Monchouli.

Creation of an atmosphere favorable to the conclusion of a Moscow-Tokyo-Hsinking nonaggression pact was more important than the pact itself, Mr. Shigemitsu said, and he dedicated himself to this task. That atmosphere is believed to exist already within the Soviet Union, so that the real problem is to create it in Japan and Manchukuo. All in all, the clouds which lowered so ominously over Russian-Japanese relations a year and more ago have lifted materially and give promise of lifting still more.

[Since this was written, relations between Moscow and Tokyo have cooled again, due principally to the announcement of a German-Japanese anticommunism agreement which stirred Russia to withhold signature from the fisheries convention.—Editor.]

Relations With Britain Viewed With Pessimism.

NO SUCH OPTIMISM is warranted as regards Japan's relations with the British Empire. Fortunately, there does not now nor has there ever existed any cause for war between these two empires. But British and Japan trade interests clash fundamentally in many parts of the world.

Australia and Japan are virtually boycotting one another at the moment. At Simla, an Anglo-Japanese conference is under way but is encountering snags in an attempt to partition the Indian market, especially as regards cotton piece goods. Japan is seeking to extend its trade into South America and into other parts of the world that Britain considers peculiarly its own economic territories.

It is in China that this clash of economic interests is most dramatic and most provocative. Japan considers China its own particular sphere, and not only resents the inroads of other powers there but would like to drive them out from the position they have already established. Naturally England, with heavily vested interests in that republic, resents and contests this.

The smuggling in North China on the part of Japan, the reformation of the Chinese currency which Japan believes (albeit inaccurately) to be a British-engineered scheme, rouse indignation in both countries. There is very keen competition for markets, and there is potentially keen competition for the privilege of financing various Chinese enterprises, especially railways and other public works. The presence of Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, high economic adviser to the London government, in China for many months caused an outbreak of anti-British attacks in Japan.

Attitude Of Roosevelt Makes For Harmony.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S passive policy toward the Far East has greatly improved American-Japanese relations. There is no doubt that the conditional notes from Col. Stimson when he was Secretary of State were more than annoying to the Japanese government and people; they were inflammatory. There have been no such protests under the present Washington Administration, and Japan is humbly greatful therefor.

The questions of a naval building race, of fortifications of the Pacific islands and of the approaching independence of the Philippines are still to be settled, but they do not threaten to develop any rancor or bitterness as viewed at this moment. The American immigration law remains always as a wound to Japanese pride, but it is an issue that stays in the background rather than on the carpet.

By severing Manchuria from China proper and creating it as an empire allied to Japan, that country in reality advanced its frontiers to the borders of Russia, Outer Mongolia and the Great Wall. Gen. Jiro Minami, governor general of Korea and prior to that Japan's No. 1 man in Manchukuo, stated this graphically when he said the frontier of the Japanese empire no longer rested on the Yalu and Tomon rivers, but on the banks of the Amur. He added a warning that Japan would fight for the defense of that border against any and all comers.

Except for trade relations, Japan has no important pending problems with other nations. Talk of a German-Japanese military alliance against Soviet Russia will not down, but it is merely idle talk. The tangible facts of the situation make such an alliance not only unnecessary but potentially dangerous. Neither Germany nor Japan wishes to bind itself to come to the aid of the other in the event of war with Russia until the conditions of that war are known. If such a war comes, Tokyo or Berlin will jump in, provided—but only provided—it seems advantageous to itself to do so. In the meantime, neither government is going to bind itself in advance to take such a step which it may later have cause to regret. The rumors of a German-Italian-Japanese alliance are even sillier.

Position Of Tokyo Improved Diplomatically.

EXCEPT FOR the friction with Great Britain and the still problematical outcome of the present Sino-Japanese negotiations, Japan is in a better position today diplomatically than it has been at any time since it launched is aggressive continental policy.. Danger of war has been greatly reduced, although not entirely eliminated. In the realm of foreign trade, reverses have been suffered and others loom ahead. Many nations are determined to keep their markets, both domestic and abroad, from being flooded by cheap Japanese goods if at all possible. From the standpoint of Tokyo, Japan must have expanding markets in other lands or else perish as a great power. It is impossible to forsee how this very genuine problem will be solved by Tokyo.

The Japanese press is filled at the moment with reports of an "epoch marking" change in the empire's foreign policy. The foreign office spokesman pooh-poohs all such reports. It is the old story of being able to see plenty of smoke and so setting about to look for the fire whence it comes. The fire would seem to be the Tokyo government's determination to abandon, at least to an appreciable degree, force and threat of military force as its chief instrument of diplomacy, substituting therefore one of genuine friendliness and co-operation. This will entail considerable sacrifice on the part of Japan, and the question rears its head as to whether the Japanese people—whether the Japanese army and navy, to be more specific—will tolerate such sacrifices. The Japanese are not an easy people to handle, and the defense services in this empire are powerful indeed, and are capable of being very stubborn and almost unbelievably short-sighted when it comes to economic problems.

The present trend is all away from blustering and militarism in relations with foreign powers. Unless interrupted by some event from outside Japan, it may be counted upon to continue for at least the immediate future, but it is ever faced with the danger that the military mind in Japan (which is not confined to the army and which does not embrace all Japanese army officers) may revolt against this policy and seek to alter it, even if it become necessary to precipitate a foreign war in order to achieve this end.

Cigar Strike Ended.

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Four hundred employes of the A. Schulte cigar stores were ordered back to work today when a "truce" was declared pending negotiations between the company and Local 609 of the Retail Cigar Salesmen's Union on the demands of the union protesting a $25 wage for an average 52-hour week.

Comments On The Capital Gains Tax.

IN CONNECTION with current stock market activity, the financial world is devoting close attention to the capital gains tax as a factor in rapid fluctuations.

The Post presents below three comments on the tax from nationally recognized authorities, drawing attention to certain of its effects.

F. Cyril James, professor of finance and chairman of the graduate faculty in the social sciences at the University of Pennsylvania, writes:

The capital gains tax is completely unsatisfactory from several angles. In the first place it tends to exaggerate stock market booms and liquidations, since when security prices are rising the owners of securities are reluctant to sell and will tend to hold on to their securities as long as possible in order to postpone the necessity for paying the tax. Conversely, when the market is declining there is a tendency to sell securities for the express purpose of "taking a loss" that can be used for the purpose of reducing the amount of taxable income.

From the angle of the Government itself a capital gains tax, if equitably administered, is unsatisfactory, since it creates an abnormal expansion of the tax base during periods of rising prices and prosperity and contracts the tax base when prices are falling and conditions of depression exist. In view of the fact that governmental expenses are usually highest during periods of depression, such a method of taxation is an obvious anachronism.

In the majority of foreign countries taxation is imposed, usually at higher rates than in this country, on income. Capital gains do not count as income, nor are capital losses deductible from it insofar as these gains or losses arise out of investment or speculation on the part of individuals not professionally associated with the securities market. All income pays tax at all times, and the total income of the community measured in this fashion fluctuates very much less than the tax base under existing American legislation.

Both from the angle of an efficiently operating securities market and from that of stability in governmental revenue, the abolition of the capital gains tax is much to be desired.

• • •

FROM H. PARKER WILLIS, professor of banking at Columbia University, comes the following:

The stock market situation again brings to the front the question of the capital gains tax and, particularly, the problem whether the existence of such a tax does, or does not, exert a bad effect upon the stock market conditions. I think there could be no question that the influence of the capital gains tax upon the stock market is exceedingly bad. It tends to make those who have a book profit refrain from selling because of the consequent loss of profits which they will necessarily incur, and in so doing it prevents the market from performing its true function of currently estimating with a certain degree of correctness the changing values of securities.

There is no warrant for the tax, as is shown by the attitude of other countries which discriminate in their taxation between income and capital, taxing either the one or the other but recognizing that the two are in definite economic categories and should not be regarded as subject to the same kind of treatment. The rumor which has been in circulation to the effect that the present national Administration is inclined to repeal or greatly modify the capital gains tax indicates a correct appreciation of what is in the interest of the public welfare, and it is devoutly to be hoped that some such change in present legislation actually will be made.

In the long run, such a change would in no way impair the net revenue of the Government but in the final analysis would probably, if anything, increase it. Careful reviews of revenue from various sources during the past ten years or more show that the additions to Treasury receipts made during periods of rising stock market are fully offset by reductions due to subsequent recession. The effort to tax gains but to abstain from relieving the taxpayer from losses is a piece of injustice and unfairness which the community, when it reaches the point of thinking carefully about the whole situation, will not be inclined to sanction.

• • • •

LIONEL D. EDIE, president of Edie-Davidson, Inc., of New York, comments:

As a result of daily contact with a cross-section of representative investors, I am constantly impressed by the enforced reluctance of security holders to sell an individual security even though they may have the opinion that the security is selling unreasonably high in relation to earnings and dividends. The capital gains tax seems to be the obstacle to freedom of action in nearly all cases. I believe there can be little doubt that modification of this tax would be conducive to a more orderly stock market.

The New Europe

Russia's Variety Of Continental Jitters Shown To Visitor In Ceaseless Inspection Of Travelers' Passports.

By Walter Millis.

This article by Walter Millis, author of "The Road to War," is the second of a series of five close-up views of Europe today. The next article will appear tomorrow.

WHEN one of the big and only slightly dilapidated Lincolns in which Intourist clients are shown the sights of Moscow dropped us at the Hotel Metropole, my companion student of sociology plucked me aside by the sleeve. I am afraid I had been teasing our little Intourist guide, asking her improper questions about the tyranny of the party dictatorship and trying to make her admit that all was not absolute perfection in the Communist state. "You mustn't talk that way," said my companion solemnly, in a low voice. He was in the clothing business in Wisconsin, he had told me; a native of Russia, he was returning to it for the first time in many years, and a convinced Socialist—with the fine and serious sense of social responsibility which distinguishes so many Jews—he had nothing but sympathy for what he saw around him.

But he said I oughtn't to talk that way. I ought to look out. I would find myself in trouble. "They can do things to you, you know. I don't care who you are, or what sort of letters you've got. You can have letters from the Secretary of State and Franklin D. Roosevelt himself, and it won't do you any good. I got letters from my Congressman and two Senators, but——." I think my friend was exaggerating. Perhaps so close to the grim wall of the Kremlin, unconscious memories of the Czarist police were stirring in him—I confess I found myself thinking about the Czarist police more than once in the new Russia—or perhaps he was just suffering that kind of slight political shell shock that affects the ignorant visitor from benighted capitalistic democracies on his first entry upon the soil of the workers' commonwealth.

Political Shell Shock Wears Off In Few Weeks.

I BELIEVE it wears off very quickly with a few weeks' residence. You see through most of it and forget about the rest. But the first impact is strong. It begins at the hotel upon your arrival. I was taken to the old Metropole. I had been advised to get into the magnificent new Moskva, but I was taken to the Metropole, with my ideas not consulted. Nor did it make much difference. The Moskva has a splendid exterior, but like so much else in Moscow it isn't really finished yet; only a few floors are occupied, and since the restaurant hasn't been installed, the guests go out for meals. The Metropole is clean and comfortable; it is filled with the same dingy shades of past and precarious luxury from Czarist times that still hang about modern Moscow, but that makes it only the more interesting. And the first thing that happens as you walk into the lobby is that the official politely collects your passport.

They are always taking up your passport in Russia. It is an old pre-revolutionary custom. They hold it and therefore you, suspended in the hollow of the bureaucratic hand until you begin to doubt whether you possess any existence distinct from that precious document. When I stated that I wished to leave Moscow in five days, the Intourist clerk said brightly that if I would have three passport photos taken immediately, the passport ought to be ready for me within that time. And so it was. The Intourist service, standing patiently between the unreasoning irascibility (in half a dozen languages) of its traveling public and the vast, immovable and inexhaustible red tape of the Soviet system, does—one must grant—very well. Only distantly is the Intourist traveler brushed by the massive difficulties of merely living and moving under the hammer and sickle. But the touch is strong enough to give him a silent wonder and admiration for those, native and foreign, who do not have Intourist tickets.

Permission Required For Every Move In Russia.

IN RUSSIA you cannot do anything without getting permission, and you cannot get permission without waiting for minutes, hours or days at a window. These are always about 18 inches square and so low in the wall that you have to stoop down to see the mysterious being behind them. You have to have permission to buy and sell things. You cannot move, whether you are Russian or foreign, without your passport. You have to get visas to get in and visas to get out and visas to go from one city to another; and to get a visa takes five or ten days in the normal course of things. I found no one who could tell me why, or what vast and secret processes, consuming these endless hours of waiting, were applied to one's documents behind these little windows. They were "checking up." It was the most any one seemed to know, though now and then one was given instances of the apparent thoroughness of the checking.

Everything has been tightened greatly, it is said, since the Kirov murder. Every peasant must now carry and show his papers, as he used to do for the Czar's officers. To call upon a public official of any prominence, it is not enough simply to ring up and make an appointment. You do that, of course. Then, armed with appointment and letters, you go to another office in a different building, stand in line at a window and get a ticket admitting you to the building where your man is to be found. You carry the ticket around and present it there in order to get in; you present it to your man, who stamps it on the termination of your interview as proof that you have seen him; you surrender it at the door again to get out.

People are always writing down your name, nationality and profession on flimsy little bits of printed forms, and you wonder in what labyrinthine archives those tons of paper ultimately accumulate. If, in writing a telegram, you make a mistake and cross out the word, you must add a written and signed statement on the telegraph blank to the effect that one word has been crossed out by you. If you take pictures in the Soviet Union you must have the films developed before you leave the country—and you will find that snaps of blind beggars, say, or of bridges, or of remotely strategic points, have been conveniently spoiled in the process. When you check out of your hotel, the bellboy has to get a slip from the desk authorizing him to carry so many pieces of luggage down the front steps, and must surrender it to the doorman as he does so.

WHEN I ultimately took ship from Leningrad for London, I found that about four hours had been allotted for waiting on the pier while the leisurely business of collecting, stamping and distributing passports (they were instantly collected again as we stepped on board), of passing the customs and counting the money was carried out. The examination is as thorough going out as coming in. The officer hesitated over one of my books in a flaming red jacket (it had nothing to do with Russia or socialism), but passed it because it was "in English;" he was more dubious of a Russian-English phrase book I had along. "Please pass the butter" and "What time is it?" in the two languages seemed to look subversive to him. Or maybe he suspected code.

At any rate, we sailed at last, and the lights of Leningrad dwindled in the night behind us. But beyond the black bulk of Kronstadt fortress the fingers of great searchlights were ceaselessly sweeping the channel and along what appeared to be a submarine boom; and in the Gulf of Finland next morning we passed two submarines solemnly on patrol, back and forth, waiting for the Germans, presumably, whom many expect to come that way. Or perhaps they were waiting only against that vague impalpable danger of something—nobody knows just what—which all Europe looks for; patrolling less against flesh-and-blood Germans than against the corroding fear which no patrols can turn back.

It was a not inappropriate farewell to the new Europe—a Europe afraid of its money, afraid of its goods, afraid of its thoughts—a Europe divided and fissured and strangled by the expedients of its nervous authoritarianisms, as they struggle to rebuild a tolerable continental life on the hopeless basis of fanatically particularist nationalism. The small irritations of the tourists are of no consequence in themselves. But they leave their impression, and it is an impression of a Europe unreasonably enmeshed in fears of many things—but of a Europe most afraid, in the end, of war.

A. F. L. Rejects Plan to Form A Labor Party

Two Seeking Accord.

"In view of the fact that the council has taken to itself this grant of power by which it suspended 10 unions," Howard said, "I will now go out to convince other national unions that their future is jeopardized by this unwarranted centralization of power."

Working quietly among those seeking an accord were Max Zaritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, and the Rev. Francis Haas, of Washington, a labor expert and a friend of both factions. Zaritsky said he still hoped for an agreement.

It was agreed generally among the leaders, however, that actual peace moves would not be made until the convention concludes its work on Friday. An adjournment was taken late today over Thanksgiving Day.

Minor Clash on Floor.

The delegates heard Harry W. Colmery, national commander of the American Legion. He called for a strong neutrality program and the elimination of exorbitant profits in time of war.

A minor clash occurred on the floor over a recommendation by the resolutions committee that the convention refrain from acting in the Scottsboro case until "it becomes evident that the defendants' legal and constitutional rights are being invaded."

A. Philip Randolph, of the Sleeping Car Porters, accused the committee of failing to meet the issue, shouting:

"I hope the federation will not soil its hands by pandering to a spirit that would crush the colored man."

Peasants Block Removing Chapel For Rockefeller

By the Associated Press

Vesoul, France, Nov. 25.—French peasants set a guard today over historic St. Hubert's Chapel at Chauvirey le Chatel to prevent its demolition and removal to America as a gift to John D. Rockefeller, jr.

The government has proposed the gift in gratitude for the United States capitalist's donations toward the restoration of French monuments.

Farmers, saying petitions asking that Rockefeller refuse the gift have brought no response, declared they would take turns as sentinels, ready to summon their fellow countrymen if any attempt is made to raze the fifteenth century structure.

6-Year Peak For Wholesale Prices Reached

Foods, Hides and Leather, Textile Groups Lead, U. S. Reports.

Wholesale commodity prices have reached the highest level in six years, Commissioner Isador Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, reported yesterday.

For the week ended November 21 sharp increases were recorded in prices of foods, hides and leather products, and textile products groups, his report said, and smaller increases for fuel and lighting materials, metals and metal products, building materials, chemicals and drugs, and miscellaneous commodities.

With exception of farm products and housefurnishings all major groups shared in the general increase of 0.5 per cent in the week. The composite index rose 1.6 per cent in the past month and was 2.2 per cent above the corresponding week of last year. The farm products group declined slightly and housefurnishings remained at the previous week's level.

Largely due to pronounced increases in prices of meats, fruits and vegetables, the wholesale food group advancel 1.2 per cent in the week, the commissioner said. Individual food items for which higher prices were reported included oatmeal, flour, fresh beef, fresh and cured pork, dressed poultry, coffee, lard and vegetable oils.

Dairy and cereal products declined fractionally, due to lower prices for butter, hominy grits and corn meal. Lamb, veal, cured salmon and raw sugar showed declines.

As a result of a 4.7 per cent decrease in livestock and poultry costs, primarily cattle, hogs, lambs and live poultry, and falling prices for corn, lemons, oranges, hops and flaxseed, the farm products index fell 0.4 per cent during the week. Higher prices were reported for barley, oats, rye, wheat, sheep, cotton, eggs, alfalfa hay, clover and timothy seeds, sweet potatoes, white potatoes in the Portland, Oreg., market, and wool. Notwithstanding the recent decline, the current farm products index is 1.2 per cent above a month ago and 9 per cent above a year ago.

The report made no predictions as to future trends.

Justice Bureau Defends Social Security Law

Stockholder Seeks to Keep Railroad From Paying 3 Per Cent Tax.

By the United Press.

The Department of Justice yesterday defended constitutionality of the unemployment insurance provisions of the social security act in a brief filed in Boston district court.

The Government was given leave November 9 to intervene in a suit filed by George P. Davis, a stockholder of the Boston & Maine Railroad, seeking to enjoin the railroad from paying taxes under the act. Starting January 1, a Federal pay roll tax of 3 per cent will go into effect to create a fund out of which money will be allocated to States having unemployment insurance laws for payment of benefits to workers thrown out of employment.

The Government brief contended this was "a proper exercise by Congress of its taxing power." It denied Davis' contention that the levy is discriminatory, stating that "there is no taking of property from one class for the benefit of another because no Federal system of unemployment insurance is set up."

The brief cited several Supreme Court decisions to support the argument that a revenue law is not invalid merely because, in addition to raising revenue, Congress may have in mind the nonfiscal purpose of encouraging States to adopt unemployment compensation laws.

Validity of this phase of the Federal social security act has been questioned in only one other pending suit. Receivers for the Newark (N. J.) Milk Co. have asked Federal Judge Guy L. Fake for instructions on their procedure under the law. The Government has asked dismissal of their suit as "inappropriate." Judge Fake has not rendered decision.

Navy to Build Giant Drydock In Coast Yards

Apparently unsatisfied with private bids for construction of the Navy's proposed floating drydock at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii—designed as the world's largest—Secretary Claude A. Swanson indicated at his press conference yesterday that the Navy would undertake to build the dock at its own yards on the Pacific Coast.

The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., of New York, with six alternate proposals ranging from $16,604,000 to $21,312,000, was sole bidder on the dock.

Explaining that the bids "seemed pretty high," Secretary Swanson said the Navy had power to accept, reject, or call for new bids and added he would await recommendations of Rear Admiral Norman Smith, chief of yards and docks, before taking definite action.

The proposed drydock, 1,016 feet long, will accommodate any naval vessel, including the aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga. It will be steel structure, weighing approximately 45,000 tons.

The Bethlehem bids, based on alternate specifications, were $21,312,000, $20,588,000, $19,637,000, $18,173,000, $17,227,000 and $16,604,000. Specifications permit approximately three years or 1,100 days for completion.

Former Chief Dies

EDWIN B. HESSE.

Major Hesse, Ex-Police Head Of D. C., Dies

Chief of Force in Stormy Days From 1925 to 1929 Succumbs at 64.

mittee Maj. Hesse fought back at Blanton and was exonerated. Inspector Albert J. Headley was one of those who testified against his chief at the time.

Backed by Officials.

The District Commissioners and local trade and civic organizations stood solidly behind the police chief but Blanton continued to hammer away.

Maj. Hesse said he wanted to retire at that time, but added: "I'll be damned if I'll retire under fire."

He did not submit his retirement until Blanton lost his seat in the House when he unsuccessfully ran for the Senate.

A few days after Maj. Hesse submitted his resignation the Board of Trade denounced the "character assassins" in Congress.

When he retired members of his command raised a fund and presented him with an automobile.

Maj. Hesse was born in Washington on May 27, 1873. He was educated in the local public schools and went to work for Myron M. Parker, real estate broker, who later became a District Commissioner.

Hesse was identified with the organization of the Board of Trade, serving as the first assistant secretary and subsequently as the second assistant secretary in 1892 and 1893. In 1894 he became a clerk in the Fire Department and in 1907 was appointed chief and property clerk of the Police Department.

Maj. Hesse accepted the post of police chief despite the pleadings of his wife, who feared his health would be broken by vicious criticism which had been leveled at his superiors.

Maj. Hesse was succeeded by his chief of detectives, Henry G. Pratt, who was retired under fire a few years later to make way for Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, a close friend of Maj. Hesse, ordered all police department flags to be flown at half staff today.

Fog and Storm Hinder Search For Lost Plane

13 Aboard Alaskan Liner Being Sought Now by Lone Flier.

By the Associated Press.

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 25.—A lone flier defied northern storm and fog today to search coastal waters for an air liner missing with 13 persons aboard.

While bad weather held other searching planes to the ground, Pilot Sheldon Simmons hopped through a thick fog from Juneau to Chicago Island, 40 miles west of here, to determine whether an object sighted by fishermen was the trimotored plane of Pilot Chet Brown, unreported since Monday.

With a co-pilot and 11 passengers, Brown left Cordova Monday for a 500-mile flight over the Gulf of Alaska to Juneau.

A corrected passenger list today listed the missing travelers as follows: Pilot Brown, of Anchorage; Co-pilot Hank Miller, of Noe; W. W. Stoll, Seattle, of the Alaska Pacific mine; Dr. J. E. Slate, R. C. Kerr and Martin Skauge, Los Angeles, and Jack Allen, Long Beach, Calif., all of the Iniskin Drilling Co.; Bill Sellars and Bud Anderson, Portland, Oreg.; Miss Alice Leep, Anchorage; Wally Forest, Juneau; J. D. McDonald, Fairbanks division superintendent, and his assistant, Walter Brown, all of the Alaska Road Commission.

Brown's colleagues said that with three motors he should have been able to make a safe forced landing.

G.O.P. Warned Party May Go Way of Whigs

Fish Scores Hamilton as Reactionary While Nye Predicts New Party.

By the Associated Press.

Demands for new and liberal Republican leadership arose from two sources yesterday, with warnings that otherwise the party would go the way of the Whigs.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, predicted to newspapermen the formation of a new party, enrolling such former Republicans as Senators La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Norris (Independent), Nebraska, "unless the Republican organization is rebuilt from the ground up."

In a broadcast, Representative Fish (Republican), New York, said John D. M. Hamilton had made a "dismal failure" of the Landon campaign "by attacking the social security act and charging Roosevelt with being a Communist." He called the national chairman a representative of "the reactionary wing" and said continuation of his leadership was "a political impossibility."

Hamilton is on vacation in the South. At Republican headquarters his attitude was said to be that all party members should speak their mind, that policies will evolve through the rank and file and not be imposed from above. He plans a series of trips this winter to promote a revitalization of the State and local units.

Senator Nye said it may be difficult to carry out Hamilton's suggestion that immediate Republican policy be decided in Congressional caucus, due to differences between such Westerners as Senators McNary, of Oregon, and Borah, of Idaho, and Eastern Senators like Hale, of Maine, and Austin, of Vermont.

"If the Old Guard insists on dominating the party machinery," he added, "it will force lots of folks into a new party. We must decide early this winter whether the organization can become truly liberal."

Indiana Police Kill 3 Bandits In Holdup Duel

Fourth Is Captured in Spectacular Battle in Gambling Resort.

By the Associated Press.

Gary, Ind., Nov. 25.—Three bandits were killed and a fourth captured tonight as police foiled a holdup of 60 patrons in a downtown gambling place.

The dead were identified tentatively as Herschel Stephens, Robert Irwin and Raymond Tucker, all of Gary.

Gus Kokenes, 25, of Chicago, who police said was an accomplice of the trio, was seized in a rear room.

The holdup men met death at the hands of Al Lichtenfeld, veteran detective, who returned their fire with a shotgun as they attempted to escape from a second-floor rear window.

Stephens and Irwin met instant death. Tucker died on the way to a hospital.

Police were summoned to th place they described as a "bookie joint" by a resident living on the opposite side of Washington street, who saw the gunmen enter the establishment and line up the patrons.

When Sergt. Harold Brown and a police detail attempted to break down the front door, the bandits fled to the rear of the building. In desperation they leaped through the second floor window and tried to slide down telephone poles.

Their bodies hurtled to the pavement as the deady fire from Lichtenfeld's sawed-off shotgun took effect after the bandits had emptied their revolvers wildly and futilely.

Hyattsville Drops Disorderly Case Against Werber

It's no crime to use profanity in a police station, Judge George B. Merrick ruled yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court, and dismissed a disorderly conduct charge against Bill Werber, College Heights (Md.) major league baseball star.

Werber had been charged with "using loud and profane language in a police station" by Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the county police force, last Monday in a heated argument.

The argument started after Werber had paid a $10 fine on a minor speeding charge placed against him by Brown on November 14.

Angered by the ball player's invitation to come around and see him some time when he was not in uniform, Brown swore to the warrant charging disorderly conduct.

Turkey for Hibernator.

Watertown, Wis., Nov. 25 (AP).—Friends of Arthur (Turkey) Gehrke bustled about his Main street tavern today, cooking a Thanksgiving dinner for the North country hibernator, who has been abed more than a week. Turkey will sit up long enough to eat heartily of the bird which gave him his famous nickname. The tavernkeeper has been spending his winters in bed for more than 20 years.

4 Are Injured As Suburban Bus Overturns

Coach Skids From Road in Nearby Virginia; Brakes Failed, Driver Says.

Four passengers were injured yesterday when a bus of the Washington-Virginia-Maryland Coach Co. skidded from the road and overturned at Wilson boulevard and Military road, in Arlington, Va.

Edward Bowling, driver of the bus, reported his brakes failed to hold as he descended a hill through heavy traffic bound for Washington. There were 22 passengers on the bus when it overturned.

The injured were Ewell M. Woolfe, 39, of Clarendon; Abraham Tobias, of Arlington; Miss Leona Black, of Clarendon, and L. L. Stone, of Maryfield, Va. Woolfe, the most seriously injured, was treated at Georgetown Hospital for a bruised back and hip. Others escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The passengers clambered out of the bus on ladders lowered to them by Capt. F. M. Edward, No. 28 Engine Co., who witnessed the accident. A detachment of troops from Fort Myer were called out to aid in untangling the traffic jam which followed the accident.

Drive Predicted By Farm Group To Revive AAA

Production Control Laws Already Are Drafted, Reports Declare.

By the Associated Press.

Proposals for new legislation to accomplish production-control aims of AAA and accompanying acts were said in informed quarters yesterday to be already drafted in tentative form by one of the powerful farm organizations.

At the same time forecasts were freely made at the Department of Agriculture that the Administration would recommend to Congress reenactment of the Jones-Costigan sugar-control bill.

Lead in shaping production-control recommendations was said to have been taken by the American Farm Bureau Federation in line with repeated public declaratoins by its president, Edward A. O'Neal, that farmers never would be thoroughly satisfied with any agricultural program which did not provide effective guards against overproduction and low prices.

Belief the soil conservation program needs revision and strengthening was expressed by Secretary Wallace yesterday in a statement at Atlanta.

Wallace did not say what parts of the program he wanted changed but asserted, "My tour through the South convinces me farmers down here want something equally as strong as the Bankhead cotton control act."

France Seeks $687,000,000 For War Chest

Parliament Gets Request for Biggest Arms Fund in History.

By the United Press.

Paris (Thursday), Nov. 26.—The heaviest armaments budget ever laid before the French Parliament was submitted to the finance committee by the war department early today, calling for 14,746,357,840 francs (more than $687,000,000) for the army and air force.

France, with dictatorships across two of her borders and threatened with a third beyond the Pyrenees to the south, thus flung down a warning that she is joining the swift race of arms building that is putting Europe on a military footing rivaling even World War times.

Deputy Paul Bernier, who reported the war department's budget to the finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies, said France can go no further along the road of disarmament "without betraying the case of peace itself."

Explaining that he was offering the heaviest armaments budget ever proposed to a French Parliament, Bernier said that France "has done everything to avoid and delay this armament race."

The army budget totals 11,046,357,840 francs (about $515,497,000) and exceeds the 1936 budget by about 4,084,208,450 francs.

The air ministry asked 1,200,000,000 francs ($56,000,000) for "routine expenses," a 25 per cent increase over the 1936 budget, and 2,500,000,000 francs (about $116,000,000) for new equipment including fighting planes.

The air force building program under the new budget is double that of the 1936 budget.

The navy committee, in a report to the finance committee, demanded an increase in the number of its effectives, forecasting a record navy budget.

Aged Man Aids Wife In Repulsing Attacker

Greenup, Ky., Nov. 25 (AP).—A 67-year-old farm woman and her invalid husband, 16 years her senior, late today repulsed a former convict who entered their home 2 miles east of here, dragged the woman into the yard and attempted to assault her.

They battled in a snowstorm for 15 minutes.

Zacheriah Richards, 83, who hobbles about with a crutch, limped to the aid of his wife. When the attacker grappled with him, Mrs. Richards got hold of the crutch. She aimed two well-directed blows at the man's head, knocking him unconscious. When she ran for aid the man escaped. He was arrested later.

Adventists Set $3,405,437.38 In 1937 Budget

An appropriation of $3,405,437.38 for its work in 1937 was announced yesterday by the Foreign Mission Board of Seventh Day Adventists, with world headquarters in Takoma Park.

The principal appropriations include: China, $315,407.87; Inter-America, which includes the northern portion of South America, the Central American states, Mexico and the West Indies, $213,349.28; northern Europe, $106,003.30; South Africa, $226,299.55; South America, $241,155.89; southern Asia, including India and Ceylon, $294,961.51; southern Europe, $146,813.12; Far East, which includes Japan, Philippine Islands, Malay States, and French Indo-China, $249,098.90; foreign speaking peoples of North America, $79,251.23; administration, $307,090.96; miscellaneous work, $770,370.01; for the advancement of the church among North American colored people, $50,149.40; Canada, $31,305.42.

Because of unsettled money conditions, a loan of $121,000 was made of the Central European Division Conference in order to carry forward its foreign mission enterprises in mission fields included in its territory, including Arabia, Egypt, Palestine, the Netherlands East Indies, Turkey and Tanganika.

Three Are Missing After Train Crash

Buckner, Ark., Nov. 25 (AP).—The engineer, fireman and conductor of one train were reported missing after a southbound Cotton Belt freight train crashed into the rear of another on a siding here tonight.

One man was taken to a Stamps hospital in a serious condition.

J. B. Smith, Buckner resident, said two engines and several coaches were demolished and that "it is feared that the missing trainmen and others are under the wreckage."

98 out of 100 Women say...

"This Medicine Helps Me!"

By accurate record, 749,721 women out of 763,633 who report after taking the Vegetable Compound say that it helped them. If you are tired, run-down and nervous, give it a chance to help you, too. All druggists sell it.

Could Not Do Her Work

Mrs. Lillie Thompson of Bard, California is 47 years old. She was so nervous and rundown she could not do her housework. Had headaches and spent many days in bed. Much better since she took the Vegetable Compound.

Was Dizzy and Nervous

Evelyn Kelley is a threader in a lace mill at Pawtucket, Rhode Island. She found it very tiring work. She had nervous headaches and dizzy spells. Four bottles of the Vegetable Compound relieved all her troubles.

When Your Daughter Comes to Womanhood

Mrs. Maude Funkhauser of Worthington, Indiana was worried about her daughter Georgianna, age 17. She was pale and tired all the time. The Vegetable Compound gave her more pep. She is well and strong again now.

Feels Full of Pep Now

Velma Tracy of Greystone, Rhode Island is a domestic. She got weak and tired from so much hard work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave her new strength. Her nerves are 100% better and she has lots more pep.

Had Fainting Spells

Mildred Dickerman of Nebo, Illinois used to have such cramps that she often had to be carried home from school. The Vegetable Compound relieved her. She wishes she had known about it long before she did.

Tired, Worn Out, Had No Ambition

Mrs. Joseph Lefebvre of Summit Hill, Pennsylvania was all rundown and felt miserable. Since taking the Vegetable Compound she has gained in health and pep, has a good appetite and is enjoying life more than she has for years.

Good For Weak Women

Mrs. Betty Smith of Cincinnati, Ohio spent four months in bed after her baby was born. Was too weak to walk across the floor. Took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon up and doing her work.

For Hysterical Women

Mrs. Rose Zecka of West New York, New Jersey, was ill for months. Got down to 94 pounds and was ready to give up hope. Took the Vegetable Compound for three months. Appetite improved. Soon able to go back to work.

"All The Fun Was Gone Out of Life"

Says Mrs. Matushek of Chicago. She was nervous, had terrible headaches, was short-breathed and much swollen. The Vegetable Compound worked wonders in her case. She thinks it is a great medicine at Change of Life.

Get a Bottle NOW. It may be just what YOU NEED.

Bride-to-Be —By Vida Hurst

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern, 22, has become engaged to Philip Rhodes, 30, nephew of her employer, Francis Rhodes, rich paper manufacturer. Her engagement had come during the absence of her employer on a cruise for his health when she had stayed on in his home as secretary for Philip, an architect recently returned from Mexico City to San Francisco, who had agreed to live there and keep an eye on Francis Junior. The latter had made numerous efforts to make love to Becky, but she had repulsed him. However, he had succeeded in nearly alienating Philip's affections by establishing the assumption that Becky had been his girl. Finally, when it is clear that Becky will have nothing to do with him, he goes on a spree and, while drunk, marries Stubby Vinton, a heyden of his own set, but who is in love with him.

CHAPTER 17.

Francis Junior looked terrible. His eyes were bloodshot and his hands trembled.

"We were drunk," he said, avoiding Becky's eyes.

Stubby was not present. At home probably making an explanation of her own.

"It's a fine way to begin a marriage," Philip commented. "But, of course, that's up to you."

"I'd never have married her otherwise," Francis Junior admitted. "You both know that. I was drinking because I was so unhappy the way Becky has been treating me."

"You can cut that," Philip said tersely. "Becky has been as nice to you as the situation warranted. You had no right to hound her as you have. I suppose now you want the marriage annulled?"

"No, I don't." Francis surprised them by saying. "It's true I'd never have done it if I had known what I was doing, but at least I did it on my own and I'll stand by it."

"Good for you," Becky cried, while Philip's stern expression melted visibly.

"That's the most encouraging thing you've said so far," he granted.

Won't Let Her Down.

"Stubby's a good kid," Francis Junior continued. "And she's in love with me. She told me yesterday morning that she knew what she was doing and she was glad. It may seem strange to both of you, considering the opinion you have of me, but I've no intention of letting Stubby down."

Philip stretched out an approving hand.

"Now you're talking like a man. It may prove to be the smartest decision you've ever made."

His cousin grinned and it was astonishing what a difference it made in his bored, sulky face.

"I've got someone who believes in me," he said. "Someone who thinks I'm tops. What I mean is from now on there's somebody to work for who belongs strictly to me."

It may have been an awkward way of expressing it, but the underlying sincerity rang true.

"You've married the right girl," Becky assured him. "Stubby's going to make you a grand wife."

The telephone rang and she answered it to hear Stubby's clear, young voice. Confident now and vibrantly alive.

"Hello. Miss Stern! May I speak with Pick?"

Smiling, Becky transferred the telephone to him.

"They do?" he said. "Gee, that's great. I'll be right over."

Leaves With Dignity.

"Her parents have forgiven us," he stated with satisfaction. "She wouldn't let me go with her. Said she wanted to see them alone first, but everything's okay. Her father wants to talk things over with me."

He left, bristling with added dignity and the importance of being a married man.

"I honestly think it's going to be the best thing that ever happened to him," Philip said. "Aunt Molly has spoiled him. Responsibility is what he needs."

He looked at Becky sitting at the desk wearing her best black crepe with fresh gardenias pinned below her firm, little chin.

"Why am I wasting our time talking about them?" he asked.

"I don't know. Why are you?"

The intensity of his black-flecked, golden eyes made her feel weak. He held out his arms and she went to him.

"It is true then?" he asked in a low voice.

Unable to speak she lifted her lips to his.

There was, however, little time for lovemaking. In less than a month Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes would be home. Reserved as always about his private affairs Phillip did not wish to tell anyone but her parents about their engagement. It would be necessary to give three days' notice when they applied for their license. That would be time enough, he said, for anyone else to know their plans. Since he was just getting started in San Francisco they would not take time for a honeymoon until after the first of the year. Then they would take an ocean trip somewhere.

"Destination to be decided later," Philip promised. "All right?"

Becky nodded, her face aglow.

Searching.

"Of course. We'll probably change our minds a dozen times before then."

But since they were not going away they must choose an apartment and have it ready to move into.

"Fortunately you're working for me, so that we can declare a Roman holiday when desired," Philip informed her.

Which meant that every morning they transacted such business as was absolutely necessary, had lunch together and spent the afternoons searching for an apartment and furniture.

Philip had very definite ideas which Becky considered extravagant but delightful. The apartment they chose was on Telegraph Hill, in a new building with a roof garden outside the living room, built-in bookcases and a huge, white fireplace, with cream-colored, canvas walls. Two bedrooms and a bath in turquoise and yellow tile, a dining room and kitchen lined with cupboards and equipped with the latest electrical appliances.

"Mother will adore it," Becky thought, certain that a kitchen like this must break down any parent's resistance.

The woman, showing the apartment, a hard-faced blonde with falsely metallic hair, smiled sentimentally.

"No bride would have a nicer place to start her married life in," she said.

She studied the card Philip had given her with interest, saying coyly, "Seems to me that name is familiar to me. Have we met somewhere?"

"Not that I remember," Philip answered.

Although his attitude to Becky was tender and considerate, outsiders were unable to penetrate the armor of reserve he wore like a shield to protect him from both curiosity and malice. But, while neither of them cared for the manager of the building, the apartment had rented itself. Before they left a year's lease had been signed and two months' rent paid in advance. It made Becky feel as if their marriage was now an assured fact. And the days which followed added to her growing conviction that it was really going to happen.

They selected rugs and draperies. Chairs, tables and a desk. Bedroom sets and a dining table.

"Nothing cheap or faddy," Philip insisted. "We want furniture which will last a lifetime and can be handed down to our grandchildren. Not a lot of junk which will be out of date a couple of years from now."

Becky agreed with him about this, as she had everything else. She would rather have a few good things, she confessed, and add to them later. They bought silver and china and stocked the kitchen with the necessary pots and pans.

"I love everything in here," Becky cried patting the smart, little copper teakettle.

Philip even had a landscape gardener plant flowers and vines on the terraced roof.

But isn't it all terribly expensive?" Becky inquired.

He nodded.

"Yes, but it's money well spent. I'm drawing upon securities I had put away for my old age, but with you that period will be indefinitely postponed."

His generosity thrilled her. He could be, it seemed, as open-handed as he was close-mouthed. And the fact that, although he was not a wealthy man like his uncle, he was eager to give her only the best made her appreciate him more than ever.

The night they locked the door on the completely furnished apartment was, she thought, the happiest of her life.

THE POST'S New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

Royal Rearing

Returning voyagers brought this tale back from London. Princess Elizabeth, the granddaughter of Queen Mary, accompanied her on a shopping trip through the city. The Queen's car, which observes all traffic rules, stopped at a red light, long enough for a flower vender to toss a corsage into the car and explain: "Flowers for the little lady." . . . The youngster drew herself up haughtily, and stated: "But I am a princess." . . . "We all know that," Queen Mary told the little girl, "but we're trying to bring you up—to be a little lady."

TWO WEEKS before the dramatization of "It Can't Happen Here" was to open simultaneously in 50 cities, telegrams were dispatched to each unit, asking: "Are you ready to go on?" Replies were received from each unit, all answering: "Yes." The next day a check-up was made, and it was discovered that two of these units hadn't even received their scripts. The casts were ready to perform the play direct from the novel.

THE WILLIAM H. Vanderbilts were at the Cotton Club, and observed the three Harlem couples whirling through the Lindy Hop. Mrs. Vanderbilt turned to her husband, and said: "That reminds me, dear—are those planes of our fixed yet?" . . . Ted Husing, whose phone number was listed in the directory, received 37 calls last Tuesday. As a result, Ted had a private number assigned him and sent letters to his personal friends, notifying them of the change. The next day he received 39 calls.

PHIL SPITALNY'S press agent sent out a publicity release about Phil's all-girl band. The subject was "Women Are Easy to Manage." Spitalny couldn't manage his wife. They're separated!

ERNEST TRUEX received offers to appear in a London show and brought the proffered contracts to Herbert Marshall for advice. "You're my friend," Marshall shrugged, "but Ernest, you've been a star so much longer than I have. What do I know about these things that you don't know?" . . . "Oh, well," Truex replied. "Y'know—pounds, and things!" . . . Truex, incidentally, was a charter member of the Drop-Everything-Club. The other members were Philip Barry, Robert Benchley and Ralph Barton. At the first meeting, someone suggested plans for increasing the membership, and each was assigned to recommending five names. The names were recorded, and then discussed. "I'll tell you what," Benchley proposed. "This is such a perfect club now—what do you say we disband?" A vote was held, and the club, its perfection intact, immediately was disbanded.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Settin' Around.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 25.

The term "independent" as applied to studios and to stars has two quite contrary meanings. In the case of studios, it simply identifies companies which are not regarded as major producers (although one smart independent has titled itself "Major Pictures") and are not members of Will Hays's Association of Motion Picture Producers. But when the same word independent is applied to stars—well, you have heard about Katharine Hepburn, Constance Bennett and Margaret Sullavan, have you not? Out here in Hollywood we not only hear about them; we also hear them, even through our ear muffs!

KATHERINE HEPBURN.

After eight months' idleness following the breaking of his contract with Warner Brothers, Jimmy Cagney has returned to work for the newly formed Grand National Studios. All eyes are focused on this new company. Backed by Eastern capital, the studio promises to give veteran producers a stiff fight.

Cagney was shirtless on this set. He is a striking physical speciman, despite his dumpy height. Years in vaudeville with an adagio act in which he hoisted a dancing partner over his head developed his biceps amazingly. So bulging are his muscles, his coats must be specially cut.

I witnessed a scene which emphasized his strength. He had to lift another actor bodily over his head and carry him through a doorway. He played the scene, but beyond the door (out of camera range) his knees buckled and down both tumbled. The man he had lifted weighed 185 pounds.

At the Hal Roach studio, on the "Nobody's Baby" set, Rosina Lawrence told Patsy Kelly of her desire to go on the stage. "You stick to pictures," the Kelly advised. "If they throw things at you on the screen, at least you can't feel it!"

Jack Oakie overhauled me in front of the Brown Derby today to voice a complaint against Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount. "When Gary Cooper left Paramount to join Samuel Goldwyn, Zukor sued Goldwyn for $5,000,000," sputtered Oakie. "But when I left the company to join RKO, he didn't sue for 5 cents." I edged off a safe distance and replied that I had heard Zukor was ready to pay RKO a bonus for taking Jack off his hands. If my column fails to appear tomorrow, you will know that Oakie finally caught me.

Gladys Swarthout, Operatic Star of the Cinema, Will Be Week-End Visitor Here With Her Husband

Noted Diva, Star of "Rose of the Rancho," on Screen, to Spend Saturday With Local Celebrities; American Airlines Hold to "Gold Diggers" Schedules; Miss Cornell's New Play, "The Wingless Victory," at National, Is Work of Unimpeachable Integrity.

GLADYS SWARTHOUT, brilliant operatic star, who, like so many others of her chromatic calling, has devoted her talents to the cinema of late, will be a week-end visitor in the Capital. She will be accompanied by her husband, Frank Chapman.

BELL.

It is gathered from comparatively private advices that Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will arrive in Washington late Friday, will be luncheon guests of District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen at noon Saturday and later will devote at least a portion of the afternoon to interviews with the local drama desks.

Miss Swarthout was last seen on the local screen in the film version of "Rose of the Rancho," the elaborate picturization of the first stellar vehicle ever assigned Frances Starr—now Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington—under the distinguished aegis of the late David Belasco. In this subject, Miss Swarthout was costarred with John Boles, who since has been a visitor in this city as guest star at Loew's Capitol Theater—or was it still called the Fox when he was here?

Her next appearance on the silver sheets will be in "The Champagne Waltz," a gay and romantic musical subject that probably will play one of the Loew houses some time in January. In this picture, Miss Swarthout will sing four new melodies especially written for her. They are not of the operatic aria type, but the "down-to-earth" hit sort of thing that sweeps the country and the "hit parade" contests, once they get started.

In the cast with Miss Swarthout in the new picture will be a few of the lowlier tyros of the cinema, like Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Veloz and Yolande, Herman Bing, Vivienne Osborne, Frank Forrest, who has something of a voice himself, if you remember "The Big Broadcast of 1937," Benny Baker and a host of others. Tyros—oh, yeah?

It will be fun to talk with Miss Swarthout and really discover whether she and our old pal, John Boles, really were at loggerheads during the filming of "Rose of the Rancho," or not.

Personally, knowing John as I do, I somehow seem to doubt it.

So yesterday that big American Airlines flagship, known as the Warner Brothers' "Golden Plane," bearing the "Gold Diggers of 1937" entourage, to the number of about 24, altogether, climbed into the ether and swished the departing beauties on to Philadelphia, whence they flitter on to Boston and then come back to New York. This junket may, primarily be a celebration of the superior pulchritude of the Warners' starlets and chorus beauties, but it also is something in the nature of a demonstration of the complete capability of modern air flight to keep pace with exacting schedules and do an unconscionably fine job of transporting people where they want to go in the shortest time possible and with the greatest degree of comfort aviation has been able to evolve. I met some of the American Airlines people while the "Gold Diggers" crowd was in town and they seemed to me a particularly efficient lot of youngsters wrapped up in the romance and the excitement of their work. They are doing an uncommonly fine job in this transcontinental movie cruise by keeping abreast of every schedule that has been laid down, regardless of weather conditions or other natural impediments. I am constrained to believe that the airplane, like the motor car and the electric light, is here to stay!

There was, of course, a considerable divergence of opinion in Wednesday morning's press as to the merit of Katharine Cornell's new production of Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory," revealed for the first time on any stage in the National Theater on Tuesday night.

This column stands alone, perhaps, as the single unequivocal advocate of this latest venture of the theater's "first lady" as one of the best things she ever has contributed to the stage. "The Wingless Victory," needless to say, is not a perfect play. There may be moments when its pace is slightly retarded and others when an anticlimatic note may momentarily sound itself, but in the large view, the tragedy is written with unimpeachable integrity, with such directness, such strict adherence to its theme and motive that, it seems to me, there can be no carping against either author or actress in their fulfillment of a richly productive adventure in a new exploitation of an old thesis.

Nothing could more completely disarm those who accuse "The Wingless Victory" of a lack of originality, I should say, than Author Maxwell Anderson's frank admission that his inspiration harks back to Euripides and the tragedy of Medea and Jason. That should be confession enough that there was no obscure intention to shock modern theatergoers into total insensibility by a story of such pristine novelty as to crash consciousness as a complete innovation.

Mr. Anderson has taken a theme that is as old as the hills, couched it in the smooth-flowing cadences of blank verse and intrusted it to a cast that is incomparable in its ability to comprehend the author's every intent and fulfill it both visually and auricularly. Beyond this, I am at a loss to know what any drama may be expected to accomplish across the footlights.

• • • •

Johnny Perkins, that whale of a fellow, who has been mastering ceremonies at Loew's Capitol Theater all this week and did such an overwhelmingly fine job in the same capacity at the Variety Club's annual dinner dance last Saturday night, is being held over next week on F street as a tribute to his ability to move the mobs and mesmerize the multitudes. Master Perkins has been celebrated in this space before and probably will be again, but it might be worth adding that when it comes to wielding the old personality over assembled hordes, this young fellow has what it takes.

Principals of Drama of the Open

When "White Hunter," a new Twentieth Century Fox release, reveals itself upon the screen of Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, it will have Warner Baxter in the stellar role, supported by a distinguished cast, of which Gail Patrick, pictured with him above, is an important member. Others of note in the ensemble include June Lang and Alison Skipworth.

Metropolitan

"THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Michael Jacoby, suggested by Alfred Lord Tennyson, with screen play by Rowland Leigh, featuring Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland, supported by Henry Stephenson, Patrick Knowles, Nigel Bruce, Donald Crisp, David Niven, C. Henry Gordon, Robert Barrat, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Spring Byington, E. E. Clive, J. Carrol Naish and Scotty Beckett. Music by Max Steiner and Leo Forbstein. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Since David Wark Griffith, 'way back in the early 'teens, sent the fiery cross over the Southern countryside to gather the clansmen in what has for 20 years stood as the greatest directorial achievement, "The Birth of a Nation," the motion picture screen has not reflected so thrilling, dramatic, and completely overpowering a scene as that which marks the climax of "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

Even on paper the words of Tennyson send cold chills racing up and down the spinal column, but on the screen that valiant feat of the indomitable Six Hundred is galvanized into a reality which holds the spectator spellbound and gasping for breath.

As one who has steadfastly adhered to the belief that Mr. Griffith's picture was the greatest ever made, we find ourselves now dethroning our idol, at least to the extent of bestowing upon Director Michael Curtiz, Cameraman Sol Polito and Fred Jackman joint honors for the greatest single scene of its kind ever filmed.

Although all the action of the picture converges upon the climactic charge, it would be remiss not to mention, at least in passing, the work of Errol Flynn, as the English lancer; Patrick Knowles, as his brother officer; Olivia De Havilland, as the girl beloved by both, and C. Henry Gordon, as Surat Khan.

An admirable musical score makes the action all the more exciting.

Selected short subjects and issues of the Paramount and Universal News reels round out the program.

Operetta Will Be Revived as National Bill

'Naughty Marietta' Being Brought Back Next Week to Combat Ace Films.

At the National Theater next week, beginning with the usual Monday night performance, the attraction will be a distinguished revival of the Shubert production of Victor Herbert's operetta, "Naughty Marietta," in which Emma Trentini and Orville Harrold orignally sang the principal roles. In this revival, Ilse Marvenga and Robert Shafer have the foremost roles, supported by Violet Carlson, Harry K. Morton, Bartlett Simmons, Zella Russell, Dean Dickens, Gus Howard, Lee Beggs, Walter Armin and numerous others. There will be the customary Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

The current attraction on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of "Love on the Run," in which the principal roles are played by Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone. The picture opened on F street last midnight and will be completely reviewed in this space tomorrow. Short sound subjects and the new "News of the Day" complete the bill.

Irene Dunne, in the most ebullient comedy role she ever has had on the screen, will be the star of the new week's bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, for the week beginning tomorrow. "Theodora Goes Wild" is the title of her new vehicle—a Columbia Pictures production that presents its star surrounded by a supporting cast of the first rank, headed by Melvyn Douglas, Thomas Mitchell, Thurston Hall, Rosalind Keith, Spring Byington and Margaret McWade. On the stage, the bill will be headlined by Eddie Garr, impersonator extraordinary. Other acts will be presented by Roy Smeck, "wizard of the strings;" Virginia Bacon & Co., dancers, and The Danwells.

At the Little Theater, for the week beginning today, the attraction on the screen will be "Of Human Bondage," the screen version of the famous novel by W. Somerset Maugham, in which the principal roles are played by Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, supported by a cast of unique distinction. Short sound subjects and newsreel complete the bill.

"Roberta," a revival of the screen version of the celebrated Jerome Kern operetta, will be the major feature of the photoplay bill at the Rialto Theater, beginning today. Irene Dunne appears in the stellar role, supported by Randolph Scott, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers and a nonpareil cast.

Having been reviewed on these pages only a day or two ago, it seems unnecessary to remark that RKO-Keith's screen version of "Winterset," co-starring Burgess Meredith and Margo, continues on the screen at RKO-Keith's. It is supplemented by a notable list of short subjects and the Pathe News.

Beginning today at Loew's Columbia Theater, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy will renew their F street popularity in "Libeled Lady," one of the most diverting comedies of the season. The supporting cast is led by Walter Connolly. Short subjects and newsreel will complete the bill.

Grim Romance Of Limehouse Again on View

'Broken Blossoms' Returns Burke's Story to the Screen at Belasco.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"BROKEN BLOSSOMS." Twickenham Films picturization of Thomas Burke's story of "Chink and the Child" and the earlier D. W. Griffith silent film, adapted to the screen by Emlyn Williams, featuring Dolly Haas, Arthur Margetson, Basil Radford, C. V. France, Edith Sharpe, Ernest Jay, Emlyn Williams, Ernest Sefton, Donald Calthrop, Kenneth Villiers, Sam Wilkinson and Jerry Verno. Reviewed at the Belasco Theater Wednesday night.

Like the original David Wark Griffith production of this grim and relentless story of London's Limehouse, the present picturization of Thomas Burke's "Chink and the Child" is a shockingly frank and undisguised exposition of the depths to which human derelicts can sink.

There is, of course, a striking contrast between the brutality of the cheap, third-rate prizefighter, who heaps the most exquisite brutalities upon his motherless waif of a daughter and the delicate idealism, gentleness and kindliness of the youthful Chinaman under whose care she finally finds a brief flicker of happiness, but, in the main, the story is a sadistic and repugnant one that builds itself around the figure of a hulk of a man who wreaks his savagery upon a slip of a girl who can raise no defense against his violent assaults.

The most agreeable note in the picture is struck when Chen, the young Chinaman, throttles the pugilistic Burrows and leaves him dead in his tracks, the last feeble wriggle of resistance having oozed out of his carrion body. This is practically ecstasy incarnate for those with an ounce of human sympathy in their natures.

Is Vividly Realistic.

This new version of "Broken Blossoms" has been made with a peculiarly effective eye to the visualization of the most sinister aspects of the Limehouse district in London. There is no attempt to gloss over the crudities of a form of life that flourishes on humanity's dregs and finds its fullest expression in the imposition of acute physical suffering upon victims of a superior muscular strength they are not able successfully to combat.

The picture is vividly realistic, distressingly actual in its depiction of a fragile young girl's persecution and supremely brutal in its delineation of the character of Burrows, a bruiser with the bodily strength of a Hercules and a mustard seed for a heart.

The piece is admirably played by a British cast whose names mean little to American audiences. The role of Lucy, created in the Griffith silent production by Lillian Gish, is played with heart-wringing anguish by an ethereal young actress by the name of Dolly Haas. Miss Haas possesses a gift for compiling horror that may not be permitted to go unnoticed. Her poignance is the film's greatest claim to distinction.

Burrows Almost Too Good.

In the role of Burrows, the punch-drunk victim of drink and bestial brutality, Arthur Margetson does so fine a piece of work that one suspects he must be a little ashamed of it, lest audiences gain the impression that he really is like that. Emlyn Williams, a gifted young British actor, not unknown to the American stage, appears in the role of Chen, the Chink, originally played on this side by Richard Barthelmess, just before he became a star in his own right for Inspiration Pictures in Joseph Hergesheimer's mountaineer story of "Tolable David." Mr. Williams' part is the single one in the play that lifts it out of complete morbidity and breaths into it something of the warmth of human kindness and compassion.

The supplementary bill at the Belasco this holiday week—the new bill opened only last night, with a special pre-Thanksgiving gala premiere under the personal auspices of Mr. Matty Radin, operator of the chain of theater of which the Belasco forms an important part—is led by "The March of Time" and a new release of the Fox Movietone News.

Added short reels augment the variety of a program that boasts a grim but distinctly well-made audible version of a subject that was deemed a classic as a silent film.

Blackford, Aide Of Woodrum, Dies

Frank H. Blackford, secretary of Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, and a native of the District, died yesterday morning at Mount Alto Hospital after a lingering illness.

Blackford, who was 60, lived at Roanoke, Va. He had served as secretary to various members of Congress for 35 years, and for the last eight had held his present post, moving to Roanoke after his employment by the Virginia lawmaker.

Taken ill last July, Blackford was admitted to the veterans' hospital here in September, where he underwent an abdominal operation. He was subjected to a second major operation, from which he failed to rally, last Thursday.

Surviving Blackford are his wife, Mrs. Leola J. Blackford, and a sister, Mrs. Francis P. Hazleton of Washington, an employe of the General Accounting Office.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night, pending word from Mrs. Blackford, who has been in Los Angeles, Calif., for several months. Blackford was an Episcopalian and a Mason.

Strike Is Threatened By Mexican Seamen

Mexico City, Nov. 25 (AP).—Maritime workers further tangled Mexico's labor situation today with a threat to strike against "invasion of our activities" by the oil workers' syndicate which seeks a blanket labor contract for the industry—and has called a strike for this week-end.

Stevedores, seamen and dock workers joined in protesting asserted efforts to bring them under the proposed blanket contract and control "work which always has been in the hands of labor groups independent of the oil industry."

Post-Debs to Meet.

Miss Margaret Sampson will entertain the Post-Debs Bridge Club December 4.

University Women Hear Major Brown Discuss Police Boys' Club Activities

Capital Youth Responds Quickly to Overture of Friendship, He Says.

The American Association of University Women of the District of Columbia is taking a real interest in the welfare movement of the District of Columbia.

This is best demonstrated by arrangement of a series of dinner meetings with a speaker versed in welfare matters.

Last night the clubhouse was gay with Thanksgiving decorations and thronged with club members and their guests to hear Maj. Ernest W. Brown of the Metropolitan Police discuss the boys' clubs sponsored by the Metropolitan Police. Before the speech Maj. Brown was guest of honor at a dinner at which Mrs. Richard Hogue, president, presided.

The boys' club harmonica quartet, Edward Lincoln, Edward Sullivan, Ralph Showalter and Pete McKenna, played during the evening.

Maj. Brown told of the efforts of police to create a feeling of friendship and mutual co-operation between the members of the police force and the boys of Washington and the ready response of the boys to these overtures.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, introduced Maj. Brown.

Arts Club Has Annual Poetry Festival.

Many artists, poets, writers and musicians yesterday afternoon attended the Washington Poetry Festival in the Washington Arts Club. The subject of discussion was present-day trends in American poetry. A number of original poems were read as illustrative of these trends.

At the evening session Miss Esther Waldron, Miss Adelaide Borah, Miss Dorothy Lawrence and Charles Edward Russell gave readings from the works of American classical poets.

One of the features of the poetry festival will be the awarding of the Villanelle Prize in the contests conducted by the Blue Moon, Washington poetry magazine, edited by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler.

Edith Maxwell Gets Effects From Jail

Jonesville, Va., Nov. 24 (AP).—Edith Maxwell returned to the Jonesville Jail today for clothes and letters she left when released in September on bond after 14 months' imprisonment.

She declined to discuss her second trial for the killing of her father, set for December 9, other than to say "I surely hope I get a fair trial."

Judge Ezra T. Carter on Monday denied the efforts of her counsel to secure a change of venue and decreed that the retrial be conducted at Wise. The first jury which heard the evidence found the 22-year-old school teacher guilty of first-degree murder of Trigg Maxwell and sentenced her to 25 years in prison.

Miss Maxwell left here for Big Stone Gap to visit an aunt. She said she would return to Richmond tomorrow.

Inclosed find..... as a contribution to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund to be used by The Washington Post in her retrial.

MARY McCORMIC.

Miss McCormic Weds Lawyer; Third Husband

Opera Singer and Ex-Princess on Honeymoon With Homer Johannsen.

By the Associated Press.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Nov. 25 (AP).—Smiling happily, Mary McMormic, the Texas plains girl who became an opera star and a princess, began a brief honeymoon today with her fourth husband, Homer V. Johannsen, Chicago attorney.

They were married quietly in a 5-minute ceremony at Kansas City earlier in the day.

Miss McCormic said they would remain here "about a week," before hre husband returns to his law practice and she goes to California for a radio appearance.

"I will rejoin my husband in Chicago about the middle of December," she said. "That is where we will live."

"How long have I known my husband? Oh, about a year and a half."

The singer gave her age as 37, two years older than Johannsen, a graduate of Stanford University. It was his first marriage. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Johannsen, of Chicago. His father is a member of the Illinois board of industrial commissioners.

Prince Serge Mdivani was divorced by Miss McCormic in 1933. For a time thereafter there was a romantic speculation concerning her and Harry Bannister, former husband of Ann Harding.

The singer had been married twice before the Mdivani episode. Her first husband was Kenneth Joseph Rankin and her second was Chester A. McCormic.

Miss McCormic, reared in Little Rock, Ark., and Amarillo, Tex., made her debut in the Chicago Civic Opera in 1921 and was starred during the heyday of Samuel Insull, utilities magnate who sponsored the company.

Chesleys to See University Play

Castleman Chesley Takes Leading Role in Mask and Wig Show.

Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Chesley and Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Chesley are spending Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, jr., at their home in Larchmont, N. Y.

On their return, they will all stop in Philadelphia to see the forty-ninth annual production of the Mask and Wing Club of the University of Pennsylvania, "This Mad Whirl," in which Mr. Castleman Chesley has the leading role.

Football and the footlights have vied for Mr. Chesley's attention during his four years at the university, and he has distinguished himself equally in both. A senior who will be graduated in February, he has been on the football team for the past three years. He has also been "trouping" with the Mask and Wig for three seasons and is playing the lead in its annual production for the second year.

Mr. Chesley has a reputation in Philadelphia for a rare gift for singing and acting and so successful has he been, his classmates expect to see him turning seriously toward Hollywood when he has completed his course at the university.

Joseph Cantrell Dance Chairman

Gallinger's 'No. 1 Patient' Greets Thanksgiving Day With a Smile

Cheerful Lloyd Gooding Finds World a Good Place After All Despite Affliction; Many Others in Worse Fix, He Declares.

This Thanksgiving Day means as much to young Lloyd Gooding as it does to anyone else, despite the fact it will be just another 24 hours flat on his back.

"I'm thankful," says this 21-year-old Spartan whose sunny smile has illuminated the third floor of Gallinger Hospital since April 18, 1935, "that I'm alive.

"Besides, I'm thankful for the good treatment they give me and because I'm going to get a brace pretty soon."

That's Lloyd Gooding, giving thanks for the early prospects of a brace that will permit him to sit in a wheel chair when many another youth like himself thinks the millenium is near because his tickets for today's football game don't place him on the 50-yard line.

Not a professional Pollyanna but just a regular fellow who can "take it," Gooding is suffering from tuberculosis of the spine. Last spring he underwent an operation, when a piece of leg bone was grafted to his spine, and he has been lying on fracture boards ever since.

His ear-to-ear smile belies the fact that he has been in hard luck almost from the day of his birth. He was only a toddler when his mother, father and younger brother died in the influenza epidemic of 1918. That happened in Fauquier County, Va.

Grandma then took over the task of bringing him up but he was only 11 when she passed away. Relatives brought him to Washington, which has been his home ever since.

He had finished two years of high school and was helping make his board and keep by clerking in a store and pumping gasoline when he took sick in the spring of last year.

When they brought him to Gallinger, he was paralyzed from the waist down but his chin was high and his face bright with an indomitable smile.

By this time, though only 21 (his birthday was last Friday), he is No. 1 patient in length of residence. Many of the nurses and doctors think he is No. 1 all around.

Last Christmas, after he'd been eight months on his back, Gooding was lifted out of bed and told to try to take a few steps. It was no use. Back he went and he has not left his fracture boards since.

Chances are nil, according to physicians, that he'll ever make a complete recovery. He is getting along, they say, but even so he will be lucky to make a go of it on crutches when the time comes.

Just the same, Lloyd believes things might be lots worse and gives thanks accordingly.

"Heck," he said yesterday, surprised and flattered that he should be considered as the subject of an interview, "look around and you'll find many folks worse off than I am."

City Club Sponsors Tours to Mexico

Three Separate Trips Are Planned for Winter.

Mexico will be the destination of groups making the fourth of the series of tours sponsored by the travel section of the Women's City Club, of which Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley is president.

The tours of the travel section began with short trips to places of historic interest near the Capital; last season they went further afield, down into historic spots in Virginia and Maryland, and now the program will reach into really distant places.

There will be three separate tours, one each month, under the supervision of Mrs. Laura L. Waters, chairman of the travel section, who will accompany the first group to Mexico.

Others serving on the travel committee include Miss Jane B. Bassett, Mrs. Dorothy Butler, Mrs. Frederic I. Swift, Mrs. George C. Ruhland, Mrs. Eva Bullard, Miss Sarah K. Cushing, Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Mrs. George Perkins, Mrs. Edna J. Sheehy, Mrs. Custis R. Perry and Miss May Bell Raymond.

Caroline Schreiner To Wed Robert Gray

An engagement announcement of interest is that of Miss Caroline Davis Schreiner to Mr. Robert Meade Gray, son of Mrs. Oden Bowie Gray and the late Mr. Gray, made today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Schreiner.

Miss Schreiner attended George Washington University and is a member of the Chi Omega Fraternity.

Mr. Gray received his A. B. and LL. B. degrees from George Washington University and is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa and Phi Delta Phi fraternities. He is also a member of the Civitan Club of Washington and the District of Columbia Bar Association, and is at present practicing law here.

The wedding will take place early in February.

More Sponsors Listed For Benefit Concert

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend are among the additional patronesses for the benefit concert of the Columbia Hospital for Women to be given at the Textile Museum at 2330 S street on Thursday evening, December 3, at 8:30 o'clock. Mme. Alix Young Maruchess will play two unusual instruments, the viola and viola d'amore.

Other patronesses are Mrs. Stanley Thompson, Mrs. Francis M. Savage, Mrs. Florence Payne and Mrs. Robert S. Carroll, of Asheville, N. C. The concert is being given under the auspices of Miss Ele de Sayn, director of Concerts Intimes.

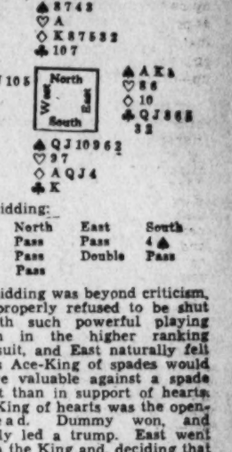
CHARLES H. GOREN ON CONTRACT

Free Insurance.

The adage "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" does not go nearly far enough in its application to contract, because in a great many hands there is no cure whatever after the ounce of prevention has been neglected.

In today's hand, the declarer lost a double vulnerable game contract by his failure to take out insurance that would have cost him absolutely nothing.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding was beyond criticism. South properly refused to be shut out with such powerful playing strength in the higher ranking major suit, and East naturally felt that his Ace-King of spades would be more valuable against a spade contract than in support of hearts.

The King of hearts was the opening lead. Dummy won, and promptly led a trump. East went up with the King and, deciding that his best defense was to try for a diamond ruff, returned his singleton diamond. From that time, declarer was playing a lost cause. He won with the diamond Ace and led another spade, but East won with the Ace and now shifted to the Queen of clubs. West smothered the King, and returned a diamond for East's ruff and setting trick.

The declarer should have seen that the one chance of losing his contract lay in the possibility of a diamond ruff. It would have cost him nothing whatsoever to have made at least an attempt to guard against such ruff by knocking out what might well be a vital entry in one of the defender's hands. Thus, his first play, after winning with the heart Ace, should have been a club to his singleton King. Had he done this, there would have been no defense. East never could have reached his partner's hand after getting rid of his singleton diamond.

Dinner for Debutante.

Mrs. Royal T. McKenna has issued invitations for a dinner December 18 at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Martha McKenna. Her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Edmonston, will entertain at a dinner before the First Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore, at which Miss McKenna will also be presented to society.

Miss Gloria Grosvenor Makes Debut in Society

Several Hundred Guests Attend Party for Popular Member of Younger Set; Suzanne Kappler Later Entertains Her at Dinner.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Several hundred guests from the Capital and nearby Maryland and Virginia yesterday afternoon attended the coming out party given by Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor for their youngest daughter, Miss Gloria Grosvenor, one of the popular debutantes of the season.

Their home at Wild Acres, their estate near Bethesda, Md., was decorated with a profusion of flowers including the many which had been sent Miss Grosvenor by friends.

Mrs. Grosvenor and her daughter received at the doorway of the drawing room. Mrs. Grosvenor was in a gown of blue velvet made with close-fitting sleeves and a skirt which touched the floor. Miss Grosvenor's frock was of peach color, brocaded in silver, made with a full, flaring skirt, and she carried a muff of gardenias and camelias, the shade of her dress.

A center bouquet of pink and yellow roses and heather decorated the tea table in the dining room.

Assisting Mrs. Grosvenor were her daughter, Mrs. Walter Kendall Myers, and Dr. Mabel Grosvenor, Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan; Mrs. Frederick V. Coville, Mrs. Charles Marsh, Mrs. Bessie Edson, Mrs. William Kinnan, Mrs. Marie Thorpe, Mrs. Oscar Westover, Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce, Mrs. Arthur McConville, Mrs. Kirk Hanson, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. George W. Hutchison, Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mrs. Charles J. Kappler, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Max Kauffman, Mrs. Max Hamilton, Mrs. Gertrude Blair, Miss Antoinette Greeley, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Arthur Grahame, Mrs. Lloyd Wilson and Mrs. Melville Grosvenor.

An orchestra played for dancing during the afternoon. Following the debut party, Miss Suzanne Kappler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Kappler, entertained in honor of Miss Grosvenor, with a dinner for 50 in the Shoreham.

The friends of the debutante who assisted in the afternoon were Miss Marie Therese de Laboulaye, daughter of the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, for whom Miss Grosvenor entertained at a luncheon earlier in the season; Miss Ethel Worthington, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Anne Grosvenor, the debutante's cousin, who is here from Vassar College for the Thanksgiving holidays; Miss Kappler, Miss Hebe Reynolds, who is making her bow tomorrow; Miss Eula Council, Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman, Miss Beverley Marshall, Miss Frances Humphrey, Miss Laura Johnson, and Miss Anne Dudley Flannery.

Miss Grosvenor, who is a granddaughter of the late Alexander Graham Bell, and whose father is president of the National Geographic Society, comes of a distinguished background on both her mother's and her father's side. She is a native Washingtonian and her parents are among the "cave-dwellers" of Capital society.

Adela Cocke, P. B. Winfree Are Married

Bride's Father Officiates at Church Ceremony in Chevy Chase.

The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiated at the wedding last evening at 8 o'clock of his daughter, Miss Adela Elizabeth Cocke, to Mr. Peyton Brown Winfree, jr., son of Mrs. Peyton Brown Winfree, of Lynchburg, Va., and the late Mr. Winfree. The ceremony took place in All Saint's Church in Chevy Chase, which was decorated for the occasion with palms, white chrysanthemums and white pompons.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William James Cocke. Her gown of slipper satin was made on Empire lines, with a long veil of Brussels lace which fell from a Mary Queen of Scots cap. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Aileen Havlin Harris, the maid of honor, wore a frock of fuschia taffeta made on empire lines and a taffeta visor cap. She carried Johanna Hill roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Louise Winfree, of Lynchburg, the bridegroom's sister; Miss Margaret Campbell, of Detroit; Miss Margaret Lloyd, of Montclair, N. J.; Miss Ruth Marlow and Miss Mary Agnes Young, of Washington, and Miss Mabel Waddell, of Middleburg, Va. They were gowned alike, in frocks of electric blue, and wore matching hats. Their flowers were bouquets of red roses.

Mr. Christopher Valentine Winfree, of Lynchburg, served as his brother's best man. The ushers were Mr. William Wilbur Winfree, another brother; Mr. Mosby Perrow, Mr. John Horner, Mr. John Caskie, Mr. Paul Whitehead and Mr. James O. Watts, jr., all of Lynchburg; Mr. Copeland Adams, of Blackston, Va.; Dr. George Craddock, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Clifton Woodrum and Mr. Kenneth Spencer, of Washington.

A reception at the parish hall of the church followed the ceremony.

The bride's mother wore a gown of beige lace with gold accessories and an orchid corsage, and the bridegroom's mother wore blue chiffon with a corsage of gardenias.

The bride wore as a going-away costume, a tweed suit in shades of brown, beige and green and a long coat trimmed in wolf. After a wedding trip the couple will reside in Lynchburg.

The bride attended the National Cathedral School for Girls and Sweetbriar College. Mr. Winfree attended Washington and Lee University.

Miss Kyle Married To A. H. Pritchard

Another of the Thanksgiving eve weddings was that of Miss Mary Louise Kyle, daughter of Mrs. Mabel Vaughan Mercer, to Mr. Aaron Hunter Pritchard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Octavus Coke Pritchard, of Hopewell, Va., which took place at 8 o'clock last evening. The ceremony was performed at the Washington Club, the Rev. William S. Abernethy officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her step-brother, Mr. James W. Mercer, wore a gown of ivory satin made with a long train, and her veil of illusion was held in place by a halo around her head. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley with a center of gardenias.

After a reception which followed the ceremony, Mr. Pritchard and his bride left for a wedding trip in the South. They will be at home after the middle of December at 4730 Brandywine street.

Frances Phillips Becomes Bride Of Mr. Hoffheins

The Congressional Country Club was the scene of the wedding at 8:30 last evening of Miss Frances Virginia Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Phillips, of Chevy Chase, to Mr. Francis Mervin Hoffheins, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hoffheins, of Washington. The Rev. Edward O. Clark performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Charles E. Wehler, of Frederick, Md., the bridegroom's cousin. The room in which the marriage took place was decorated with autumn leaves, palms and chrysanthemums.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory velvet made with deep sherring at the neck and dolman sleeves. Her long, full veil of illusion was held with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Her maid of honor was her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Owens, who wore a green velvet frock and carried bronze chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were the Misses Mary Lee Owens, another cousin; Mary Louise Parks, Priscilla Wrightson and Helene McLachlen.

Mr. William Ellenberger served as best man. The ushers were Mr. David Rouch, the bridegroom's cousin; Mr. Alfred Owens and Mr. Quincy Owens, cousins of the bride, and Mr. Marshall Homer.

A reception at the club followed the ceremony, and at its conclusion the young couple left for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a three-piece rust-colored suit trimmed with fur. On their return Mr. Hoffheins and his bride will reside at 2204 Fortieth street.

Thayers, Dukes Hosts at Dance

Two Majors, With Wives, Entertain at the Hop Hall in Ft. Myer.

Maj. and Mrs. Arthur P. Thayer and Maj. and Mrs. James T. Duke were hosts at a tea dance in the hop hall at Fort Myer yesterday from 5 until 7 p. m. Mrs. Thayer was wearing a black crepe gown fashioned with a net yoke, and Mrs. Duke was costumed in a silver lame tunic and black velvet skirt. They each had a gardenia corsage.

Among those who took their turn at the tea table were Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright; Mrs. John A. Crane, Mrs. John Milliken, Mrs. Gyles Merrill, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Mrs. Harry Stadler and Mrs. John H. Reed.

The guests included the officers and their ladies of the post and several members of the service, both of the younger and older sets of Washington. Among those from neighboring Army posts were Maj. and Mrs. Alexander B. McNabb and Capt. and Mrs. Homer Pettit, of Fort Belvoir, and Col. and Mrs. Joseph Swing and Maj. and Mrs. Herbert Earnest, of Fort Hoyle, Md.

Three Couples Celebrate Wedding Anniversaries

Six members of the young married set celebrated their three wedding anniversaries at a dinner party in the Shoreham last night, at which Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Birgfeld, of Battery Park, Md., were hosts. The guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Gillis, of Chevy Chase, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Merrill A. King and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Porrey.

Others in the company were Mr. and Mrs. Reginald W. Turnley, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dale and Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Merlich.

Mary M. Burton Wed to Minister

Marriage to the Rev. Wayne Wagenseller Is Held at St. James.

Miss Mary Mason Burton, daughter of Mr. Paul Gibson Burton, of Washington, and the late Mrs. Burton, was married yesterday at noon to the Rev. Wayne McVeagh Wagenseller, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Wagenseller, of Sunbury, Pa. The ceremony took place at St. James' Episcopal Church, the Rev. Frederick O. Musser, of Easton, Pa., officiating. A breakfast and reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Martha Burton, the maid of honor, who wore a red velvet frock and carried Joanna Hill roses.

Mr. Burton gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a white satin gown made with a train and long sleeves, and a veil of Mexican lace, a family heirloom, and carried lilies of the valley.

The ushers were Mr. Harry English, Mr. Maynard Lundgren, Mr. Philip Stone and Dr. G. Louis Weller.

After a wedding trip, Dr. Wagenseller and his bride will reside in Portage, Wis., where he will be rector of Grace Episcopal Church. Mrs. Wagenseller is a graduate of Holton Arms and has been identified with many church and social activities in the Capital.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Frank V. Burton, Miss Frances Burton and Mrs. James Wagenseller, all of Philadelphia; Dr. and Mrs. Oliver Huckel and Mr. and Mrs. O. Wentworth Huckel, of New York; Miss Nancy Haughton, of Exeter, N. H., and Mrs. Henry Runge, of Boston.

Italy-American Society Gives Party for Suvich

Envoy and Wife Guests at First Large Function Since Recent Arrival in Capital; Reception Opens Season for Host.

The Ambassador of Italy and Donna Matilde Suvich were guests of honor yesterday afternoon at a reception in the Mayflower by the Italy-America Society, the first large function given for them since their recent arrival in the Capital, and the opening affair of the season for the society.

Donna Matilde Suvich presented a charming picture in a costume of black, with a short Persian lamb jacket and a small hat of lamb with a little red crown, which fitted closely over her fair hair. Col. George Brinton McClellan, president of the society, and Miss Meta Evans, the secretary, presented the guests to her and the Ambassador.

The Rt. Rev. Monsigner Joseph Corrigan, D. D., of Catholic University, was among the guests, the reception being the first function he has attended since assuming the presidency of the institution. The Rt. Rev. D. J. O'Dwyer and the Rev. Dr. Francesco Lardone accompanied him.

Members of the staff of the Italian Embassy among the 200 guests included the Counselor and Marchioness Rossi Longhi, the Naval Attache and the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola, she in a black costume; the Air and Military Attache and Signora Livia Coppola, and the Secretary of Embassy and Countess Roberti, the latter in black with a small red hat.

Baroness von Below and Mrs. William Fitch Kelly were conversing about the recent election; Count Fumasoni Biondi was greeting friends among members of the society; Miss Janet Richards was discussing affairs at home and abroad with an interested group around her; Mrs. Arthur Wright and her daughter, Miss Mary Norris Wright, were accompanied by Mr. Robert Spafford and Mr. John Helm Pratt.

Among others present were Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Archibald Gracie, the Rev. William McBryde, Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter, Mrs. Norman Kane, Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, Miss Belle Gurney, Mrs. Henry Fitzhugh, Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti, Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Miss Cynthia Hill and Miss Margaret Gage.

Another function of the afternoon which drew members of Capital society was the first afternoon concert of the National Symphony's season, when the usual enthusiastic audience greeted Dr. Hans Kindler.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, one of the most ardent workers for the symphony, occupied her box, and across the way were the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood with a group of friends.

Mrs. Lawrence Groner was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Marion Shouse. Mrs. Burke Elbrick was present and others included Miss Moira Archbold, Miss Louise Chase Myers in a black frock with a mink coat, and Mr. James Simonds and Miss Mary Cootes, who was accompanied by Baron Serge Korff.

THE MERRY WHIRL
by MARYLYN

The Hartz home in Edgemoor Lane was a regular bower of flowers when daughter, Bette, made her bow to society. In the drawing room, in the hall and in the dining room were great clusters of gay blossoms. On the occasional tables, chow benches and along the mantel were many corsages—all gifts to the bud.

After the last guest had said good-by Bette gathered up her long white velvet train, bundled up in a wrap and, with her family and a score of admirers, left for Rod Kenner's supper party. The Kenner home, in Ingraham street, was a very cheery place to see on a chilly evening. A great comfortable, rambling place—it was blazing with lights and buzzing with chatter and laughter.

* * *

Rod, the ever-smiling host, was beside the door greeting his guests. In the drawing rooms Jim Wimsatt arranged himself sensibly on the floor just in front of the fireplace and its glowing embers. Perched precariously on one single chair and regarding the bold comfort of Jim were Mary Agnes Young, in pale blue; Windy Gale and Betty Galt, in deep red.

A newcomer to the group was somewhat dismayed when trying to figure out the Moran-Drury family. While the gentleman was talking to Dr. Pete Moran, Pete introduced him to his sister, Helen Drury, then whirling around he tapped Peggy Kyle on the shoulder and indicating Kitty Burke across the room (she has recently returned here with her husband and children), he added "and that's another sister." As he finished, his listener glanced questioningly around at the rest of us doubtless fully expecting him to continue and claim kin with us all.

* * * *

When the senior Hartz arrived, Mrs. Hartz, who is good natured and loves fun, allowed herself to be wound round with trailing vines and posies over and under the collar of her coat and really rivaled Bette, whose young shoulders should have been sagging from the weight of the orchids.

Then into the dining room, where a long floral piece of varicolored chrysanthemums, roses and ferns graced the center of the buffet table. At one end was a huge platter of slices of brown and golden turkey, while on the opposite end there was a platter equally heaped with pink ham. Mary Davison skillfully manned the stuffed celery, buttered peas and rolls, while Peggy Kyle and Neitah King attended to the remaining goodies, under the alert eyes of Janet Hartz, who will be making her bow a few years hence.

* * * *

These youngsters never seem to be worn out. When the evening had fled with its hours of merriment and coats and hats were being sought, Gloria Grosvenor, whose black velvet frock was becoming, and Tony Latona were endeavoring to inject some enthusiasm into their friends concerning a few hours of dancing somewhere. We didn't linger to see the final score, but judging from the expressions on the faces of Karl Peden and Beverly Carter the gadding probably continued far, far into the dawn.

Gertrude Eichner Wed to Mr. Poole

Miss Gertrude Amelia Eichner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Eichner, of Washington, was married at 6 o'clock last evening to Mr. Brereton Poole, son of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy A. Poole, of this city. The ceremony took place in Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, the Rev. Samuel T. Nicholas officiating.

The bride's only attendant was Mrs. Lester Eichner. Mr. Charles W. Poole was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Mr. LeRoy A. Poole, jr., another brother; Mr. George E. Miller, Mr. Gerard Heitmuller and Mr. John Poole.

After a wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Poole left for a wedding trip. On their return they will reside at 612 Lexington place.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Distressed Correspondent Believes "Worried" Was Mis-Advised; Says "Forget The Past."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was greatly distressed over the advice you gave to the young lady whose letter you answered in your column of November 21. Why should you take it on yourself to blast a possibly happy future and probably the only chance this girl will have to make good? If the telling would do any good I'd say tell all, but the man isn't telling all his previous experiences and I see no reason why the girl should do so.

• • • •

I know one similar instance where the question was put to a minister who was very devout and serious-minded. He advised the girl not to tell her prospective husband of her unfortunate experience because there was nothing she could do to undo the facts, and it would serve no purpose to shame herself before him and possibly ruin anything beautiful they might have in their lives.

• • • •

I hope you will contact this girl (I don't remember how she signed her name) and tell her under no conditions should she tell; that her life is in the future and to look toward the future and forget the unfortunate past. This is her only chance of happiness and I hate to see it taken from her by a disinterested person giving advice casually.

DISTRESSED.

DEAR DISTRESSED: The advice you challenge was not casually given. On the contrary, that problem had been on my mind for nearly a week and I had attacked its possible solution time and again, from every angle which suggested itself to me, before finally delivering the counsel I did. You seem to overlook the fact that that particular chapter in the young woman's past cannot be dismissed as over and done with, so long as her child lives. If you are a mother, you must realize that a mother's concern for her child lasts so long as life lasts for either of them; and an unmarried mother's love for her child is no less great than the married mother's; sometimes it is greater.

• • • •

If this girl should marry this man without telling him she is a mother, there is always the possibility she might learn of her child's serious illness, or of some other distressing circumstances affecting that child's life, and it would be inhuman and impossible for her not to wish to fly to the child's side at once. Whether she went or whether she stayed away, surely it would be obvious to one who loved her and who was intimately associated with her that she was laboring under agonizing mental stress. It would be obvious that she was keeping something back from her husband.

• • • •

I did not intend to convey the impression that every girl has an obligation in conscience to tell her fiance about her past. But in this particular case, it seems the only common-sense thing to do. You may recall her statement: "I cannot marry him with this secret on my mind. I have made up my mind to tell him I don't love him—though it breaks my heart—and give him the chance to find the sort of girl he deserves." I maintain this girl has a sporting chance to win by telling the truth, and everything to lose by telling a lie or attempting to perpetrate a lifelong deception.

• • • •

It is ridiculous to assert that this is her only chance of happiness. She may be the sort of girl who will always be attractive to men, and if she does not marry this man, she may find mutual love again. But what earthly good will it do her to love a man and win his love, if she feels she must always give him up because she cannot marry with this secret on her mind, and she is afraid to tell it? She might as well challenge fate immediately, in my opinion.

• • • •

The following letter, by the way, would indicate that all men are not so puritanical-minded as you are inclined to believe. M. H.

Advice for 'Worried.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wish to compliment you on your answer to "Worried," given in your column of November 21. It is, in my opinion, a masterpiece and one which might well be read and followed by any girls faced with a similar problem.

Ipersonally knew of a similar situation in which the girl asked my wife for advice. I was taken into the conference and we counseled her to do as you advised "Worried," with the exception that we suggested she write her story and mail it to the young man, as the subject would be too embarrassing for her to discuss with him in person.

• • • •

Likewise, we suggested that she tell the young man if he could not forgive, it would be best if they did not see each other again by intent and for him not to attempt to bring up the subject in future conversation, as she would be compelled to refuse to discuss it further.

• • • •

Thus she "saved her face" and also both their feelings. She was able to sit down and state the facts simply, without sentiment; and he was able to sit down alone and make his decision without being influenced by her presence.

I suggest that "Worried" follow this plan. In conclusion, I wish to say that the girl I mention has been married to the young man for some time now, and a happier, more devoted pair it would be difficult to find. I wish "Worried" and her fiance much happiness. Your truly,

PAST FIFTY.

Hazard of Letters.

DEAR PAST FIFTY: Thank you for this kindly, friendly letter. I hesitate to indorse your suggestion that "Worried" confess her secret to her fiance in letter form, however. There is always a chance that a letter may go astray, that it may accidentally come under alien eyes even after it has reached the addressee, or that the latter may be insensible of his responsibility for keeping the contents of such a letter entirely to himself and of destroying the manuscript immediately after reading it. Nevertheless, if "Worried" prefers the method you suggest, and is willing to risk the odd chance of having her story read by a wider audience than she intends, it is for her to choose.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

PATTERN 175

WHEN you'd a-shopping go, or down to call on a neighbor—be very sure you're as slim and trim as a frock can make you—or, says Claire Tilden, as trim as Pattern 175 can make you! For it's her knowledge of your needs that's responsible for those slimming lines, height-giving center panels, and pretty, scalloped surplice that literally detracts inches from too full a form. Give three cheers for the half-way sash that nips in the waist so smartly—and three more for the Complete Detailed Sewing Guide that enables you to run up this frock in only a few hours.

Pattern 175 is cut in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number. Send orders to The Washington Post, Pattern Department, 70 Fifth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Magnetic Personality

WHETHER your heart's desire is social success with many friends and frequent invitations, whether it's love and marriage or success in business, you must have personality to win.

First of all, you must acquire personal magnetism that will make every one glad to do whatever you ask.

Develop a sense of humor and learn to laugh at yourself and at your petty worries. Always be open-minded, well poised and quick to sense discomfort and uneasiness in others. Be considerate of others at all times.

Keep your mind alert and progressively in tune with what others are interested in. True culture is simply an understanding of the world with the ability to see the other person's point of view.

If you now lack friends—if you don't seem to be popular with the opposite sex—sit down and take stock of your social abilities. Be tactful. For tact is well up on the list of magnetic personality "musts."

Our new 40-page booklet, Improving Your Personality, shows you what personality is, how to increase yours into a magnetic personality, describes development of temperament, tact, emotion. Prepared by a modern psychologist who has studied and helped many, it may show you how to uncover your hidden charms and talents that you never knew you had.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Improving Your Personality," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Black and White for Mid-Season Glamour

Smartly alluring is the black evening gown at left, of a new velvety crepe (semidull rayon and dull acetate yarn). In dramatic contrast are the yoke and hem band of glittering sequins. Suede-like white crepe fashions the glamorous gown (right) with tiers of rhythmic fringe as the decorative medium.

Traditional Pastel Tints for Evening Wear Abandoned in Favor of All-Black or White

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

BLACK and white have always been considered smart for formal evening. The debutante ball Friday night, employing these two colors as a theme, will undoubtedly be the inspiration for many new and clever interpretations. Time was when black was considered ultra-sophisticated and made the wearer appear much older than she was. It is still sophisticated, but, with the aid of current styling, it is no longer classed as an "old color."

This season black is appearing in both daytime and evening frocks, especially fashioned to flatter either the debutante or her grandmother. School and college girls are abandoning the traditional pastel tints for evening and choosing either all-black or this color accented with brilliant tones. Dinner and cocktail dresses are appearing in shiny or dull black enlivened by bright trimmings; or jackets of glittering paillettes and dazzling brocades. The co-ed this winter chooses date dresses, those for shopping in town or college teas, in sleek but youthful styles, of black materials.

The same psychological changes have taken place in regard to all-white for formal evening. Heretofore, it was regarded as rather characterless, extremely youthful, and altogether without swank unless dramatized by exotic accessories. Noted designers have come to the aid of this pristine color and have not only created chic new methods of styling, but unusual materials, which in themselves are startling. This season, particularly because of the various period influences in fashion, numerous all-white gowns have appeared; also, smart evening coats in the same snowy color to accompany them.

Like all-black, this winter finds all-white an ageless color. It is being worn by the very young miss and the matron with equally good effect. Stiff satins, taffeta, velvet, unique laces, broadcloth and novelty silk crepes are among the high lights in the white fabric vogue. With lovely materials and special attention to line, the 1937 white evening ensembles are outstanding. White, as well as black, can be an excellent foil for glittering jewels; and this the season when jewelry is tops in accessory themes. White gardenias and black lacquered leaves in the coiffure would be appropriate to accent either a black or white ensemble.

Black and white merge smartly, and it is a splendid combination for the person who is averse to either wearing one of these colors alone, or who wants to effect a change of color scheme in the color scheme in the evening costume. Aside from combining black and white for the evening gown, white coats or capes atop black gowns are very effective. Reversed, the color theme is equally chic. White ermine is being used to trim black velvet evening gowns this winter; producing a youthful or sophisticated effect, according to the styling. Long white coats of stiff satin or broadcloth over sleek black evening gowns are also much noted in the present fashion picture.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 25.

IF NEW YORKERS have homes—and this is often open to question, no matter how high the monthly rental—today they are in them.

ALICE HUGHES.

I refer, of course, to those local citizens who have any connection, by birth or tradition, with the adjoining Nation, the United States of America. To several millions of our people who have been here for 20 years without troubling to learn much English, if any, this is simply another day when they don't go to work. But any localite who cherishes warm and blessed memories of the big family table in her small-town American home, with all the folks tucking their feet under it and the mountains of Thanksgiving grub into themselves, does the best she can with the bird and things, and gathers any kinfolk within reasonable distance to come and help put away the provender.

Yes, it's a home day, even here, and, as such, a great novelty to thousands who are caught up in the feverish gallop to nowhere which is such a startling phenomenon of Gotham life.

The Thanksgiving gathering instinct is amazingly strong. Perhaps I mentioned, last Thanksgiving, my friend Marion Stephenson's annual dinner for waifs and strays—all her bachelor boy and girl friends, and those couples separated by miles, or worse, from friend and kin. Often she feeds 25, and it's one of the year's gayest and most heart-warming parties. It's on again this afternoon.

• • • •

When this is printed I'll be back home in New England, where the feast was born, and my New York lean-to will be just another empty stone shelf on Murray Hill, like thousands of others. Happy day—and don't overdo it!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I saw Helena Rubinstein, the cosmetic baroness, lunching with one of the Bragiotti girls at Theodore's—Theodore of the Ritz. No. 1, last name Titze. La Rubinstein was wearing her famous three strands of black-and-white baroque pearls and each pearl is not only a prayer, like the old song says, but probably a year's pay for most of us. But then, she's fabulously rich from creams and such . . .

I think it is mighty nice of Princess Natalie Paley, don't you? I mean the fact that this slim blonde half-sister of the Grand Duchess Marie is going to let Lucien Lelong design her clothes, even after they are divorced. It shows a mighty fine spirit on "Natacha's" part—what the local —smartie crowd calls "thoroughly adult." An old-fashioned girl might have gone flouncing over to Schiap or Mainbocher . . .

• • • •

For weeks we fretted about what on earth was going to happen this winter to our hundreds of nice new "sunshine," or roofless, taxis. Now the head man tells me they are all going to have glass tops, so that we can get our quota of sunshine or moonshine, according to the hour and the mood . . .

Not everything in the style business is Dalmatian, for in spite of the horrors of war the ever-popular Spanish tradition persists this year. I saw a collection of 20 things from Anna Tappe a few days ago, and of the 10 dresses shown no less than four sported mantillas. I've seen a lot of mantillas in my nocturnal meanderings this season, and you must admit there IS something about the darned things—you know, balconies, and guitars, and those men! . . .

Young John Jacob Astor is getting smart about publicity—he and his young wife, the former "Tucky" French, sailed for Italy the other day with few words and no pictures. They left their 18-month-old son, Bill, at home. John J. thus missed, by 24 hours, the forty-fifth birthday party of his half-brother, Vincent Astor, who at present takes a tremendous interest in his Fifth avenue inn, the t. Regis. With an Astor running a hotel and the Rockefellers running night clubs and theaters, the world seems both topsy and turvy just now. What forever next?

Sign of the Times No. Million—One of the biggest men's tailoring houses reports tail-coats far outselling dinner jackets now, for the first time in many years. And that the house will sell over 2,000 opera hats between now and the year's end. "Dress up and spend" is the boys' motto this season. How would you like to hear 2,000 collapsible toppers all popping at once? My goodness!

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Thanksgiving in the Old Home.

The practice of setting apart feast days, holidays, saints' days and fast days has been followed by church and state from ancient times. It seemed perfectly natural, therefore, that the Governor of Plymouth Colony should designate a festival day or season in which all the people should return thanks, even though their blessings had not assumed huge porportions. But they had found a new land—far better than they knew—and it was typical of their pious instincts that thanks be given for food enough to carry them through the winter.

George Washington established by proclamation the observance of the day throughout the new republic; and Abraham Lincoln, in the darkest hours of the nation, designated the last Thursday in November. Our chief executives have followed his example.

We may doubt, occasionally, the efficacy of this national holiday as a health measure. In all too many instances it is a test of endurance with a plethora of food. But in its power of relaxation it is a saving grace unto the people. The very thought of reunited families, absent ones making long journeys to join the "home folks," strengthens the heart with a renewal of the "ties that bind." There is something about such gatherings—meetings of the clans—that revives our faith in the stability and permanence of the home; that brings peace, joy and contentment that endures for many a day.

What if grandmother does draw the long bow a bit when, after dinner—the nut bowl passing round—she tells about her grandfather who fought in the Revolution and helped wrest the colonies from the British. And then, perhaps, she will get a pair of old fire tongs that have come down to her from her grandmother and retell the story of Lafayette, who once visited the old home place and used this very pair to poke the fire. It may be true, but what if it isn't? It is a household tradition and kindles anew the fires of patriotism in the heart of each of her hearers.

Then she may display some old Sheffield plate, glass and pewter. After we have all examined and admired and learned the history of each artistic old bit, she will then turn to more substantial business and indicate just what table or chair or chest of drawers each one of us is to have—every piece a figurative Ark of the Covenant, keeping alive the memories of "ye olde dayes."

Of course every one chatters and some of the in-laws will tell about their families and their household gods. After a while the men will go off to another part of the house to smoke and talk business or golf or politics.

In the evening supper is served and some of the family leave for the train. Others stay overnight, and the day after finds the rambling old home deserted save for grandmother and her faithful daughter, Jane—who never married. Every one carried away a mounting admiration for those stalwart early settlers whose lives were dominated by frugality, rugged honesty and devotion to principle. There is something superlatively fine in old and stable institutions and things and people.

Early Planning For Christmas Buying Advised

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

ALREADY there is a premonition of Christmas in the air, and it is high time to begin to choose the children's presents. Let the grown-ups wait.

Of all seasons of the year, Christmas is the one that means most to the children, and especially to the little ones, who are so dependent upon gifts. Time and thought and often effort, therefore, should go into the planning of the youngsters' gifts.

Of course the first thing necessary is to find out what a child wants. Any child who can write enjoys writing a letter to Santa Claus, whether he believes in him or not.

Such letters are a convention for expressing one's needs and wishes, and often quite big boys and girls will laughingly continue the custom long after their belief in Santa Claus has gone.

It stands to reason that many of the wishes cannot be granted, but generally there is one major need around which the other gifts can center themselves. For example, Susy wants a doll-house. She would like skates, a camera, a hockey stick, some books and a doll as well, but the doll-house is uppermost in her mind, and she is just at the age to play with it.

If father is clever with tools he might start at once to construct the house. A doll-house made at home can, by the use of a little imagination, be far more satisfactory than one bought at the store.

Leaguers Promote Playwriting Craft

New York (AP).—The Junior League has gone seriously into this business of playwriting.

More than 4,000 of the association's 29,000 members are busy with plots, scripts and stage settings, Miss Agnes Grant announces. She is secretary of the children's theater department, Association of Junior Leagues of America.

Membership in the association is somewhat of a badge of social distinction for young women from coast to coast. The association was organized 35 years ago to give young women of society work to do in the social service field.

The theater movement is 15 years old, with emphasis laid on "bringing good theater to the children of elementary school age."

Big Audiences Attend Mission As Rallies End

Revival of Faith Is Theme of Visiting Preachers at Final Session.

In a rapid-fire finish, with two evangelists addressing overflow crowds in Constitution and Continental halls, the four-day National Preaching Mission here closed last night.

"The Conquest of Fear" was the subject of the Rev. E. Stanley Jones at both houses. He urged his listeners to be unafraid and unashamed of being practicing Christians.

Miss Muriel Lester, of London, the other speaker at both meetings, delivered addresses on "Thinking Like God." She exhorted the 6,500 Washington churchgoers and clerics who heard her to form concepts and principles more noble in inspiration.

Last night's climactic gathering attracted more worshipers than have ever listened to revival sermons in this city. Sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches, with many of the Capital's lay and church notables in attendance, the purpose of the mission is to bring about a reawakening of religious interest in the face of the agnosticisms of communism and fascism.

Goes to Raleigh Today.

The mission, with many of the great orators of the church en tour, has visited 20 American cities since September 13, and after a very successful series of revivals here moves on today to Raleigh, N. C. The tour concludes after meetings in Philadelphia, Boston and New York.

"I believe a Christian should have a conquest of fear," Dr. Jones, noted evangelist from India, declared. "Fear has no real place in a Christian's life. Many fears come from unconfessed sins. These are driven underground, where they fester.

"Do not try to forget them. Bring them up and out. If you cannot get release by praying to God alone, then tell the basis of your difficulty to some trusted friend.

Security State Duty.

"In regard to fears with reference to old age and insecurity, I believe that society has a duty to alleviate those fears by collective action."

Throughout the numerous meetings of the mission, the theory that Christianity must break away from mystical religion and bring solace and actual help to mankind if it is to survive, has been stressed by speakers.

Like Dr. Jones, Miss Lester, noted social worker in London slums, appealed for a readjustment of economic differences if hope is to be sincerely offered the common man. She said:

"God has filled the world with plenty of every good thing. The economists keep explaining to us that there is enough stored away in our earth of raw materials for food, clothing, shelter and fuel to satisfy the whole human race.

New Thought Held Needed.

"Let us begin to think like God. Let us refuse to accept traditional inherited customs just because they were good enough for other generations. Let us inquire if they are in line with the thought of God!"

Religion is at the cross-roads in America, speakers during the four-day conclave emphasized. They have pointed to the virtual abandonment of faith under government leadership in Russia, Germany, Spain, Mexico and other countries.

They have pointed to the wide exodus from the church in this country and have come to the conclusion that the church was losing because it did not give its former members anything real in answer to their needs.

A new and personal religion, with the church attempting to aid the poor through reform, not charity, has been the doctrine which the touring "missionaries" have been trying to inculcate in thousands of brethren of the pulpit throughout the land.

Lindbergh Lands At Liverpool Field

London, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Worldwide fears for the safety of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, unreported for nearly 30 hours after taking off from a Dublin (Ireland) airdrome, were dispelled today with an announcement that he had landed near Liverpool.

The British air ministry said there was no information as to whether Lindbergh made a forced landing at Sealands' Royal Air Force airdrome, in Cheshire, because of bad weather or whether he dropped off at the small military airdrome en route to some unannounced destination. He landed at 4 p. m. yesterday.

The flier was reported tonight to have arrived at his home in Seven Oaks, Kent, but members of the Lindbergh household refused to confirm his arrival.

Plane Quits Baltimore On First Hop to West

Baltimore, Nov. 25 (AP).—The unheralded departure of a Transcontinental and Western Air Lines plane from Baltimore today forged this city's first air link with the West.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson announced completion of plans for shuttle service to Pittsburgh shortly before the plane left Baltimore for its maiden trip. The plane, City of Baltimore, will be christened Sunday by Mrs. William H. Shehan, daughter of the mayor.

Under present plans, the Baltimore-Pittsburgh plane will leave at 12:25 p. m. daily.

Entertainer Loses Suit for $100,000

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 25 (AP).—A jury, 23 minutes after it retired, returned a verdict for the defendant in the $100,000 suit of Morris Humphrey, of New York, former night club entertainer, against Mrs. Gertrude Whiting, wealthy Holyoke widow.

Humphrey claimed Mrs. Whiting broke her contract to pay him $100 weekly for life in return for studying music under her guidance.

WPA Dismissals

From 260 to 270 WPA employes here in Washington are to receive dismissal notices by December 15, Dallas Dort, project control division supervisor, revealed yesterday.

This figure includes about 120 persons who received notices November 15. The others are to be given notices effective November 30 and December 15. All WPA divisions here in Washington are included, with no concentration of dismissals in any particular unit, Dort said.

The dismissals are part of the general tightening up of the administrative staff predicted in this column several weeks ago by Assistant Administrator Corrington Gill (Gill, incidentally, is expected out of the hospital in two or three weeks).

Dort wouldn't say how long this "tightening up" will continue, but indications are it will run along for a couple of months anyway. Emerson Ross, head of the Division of Social Research, said about 10 or 12 had been let out in his unit this month and that he expected a similar monthly turnover to continue "for a while."

As projects are completed, Ross said, those engaged in the work will be let out. There are two projects in his division, he said, slated to be completed by the first of the year. One is a field project employing five persons; the second involves about 15 persons now here in Washington. Employes of the latter project, Ross said, were hired on a temporary basis until December 15 or January 1 and will be let out shortly after the first of the year.

The date of the mass protest meeting being planned by the WPA unionists has not yet been settled, but definitely will take place some time next week.

Probably by his time it's too late to offer our expert fishing advice but last reports from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., had Arthur Walsh, assistant administrator of the FHA, in the thick of the fish battle of his life.

Gene Nixon, who is vacationing with Walsh, dropped Pete Yoder, of FHA, a note yesterday saying: 'Art hooked into a sailfish two days ago and has been fighting it ever since. We have been giving him his groceries as if he were a pole sitter and are sure the fish will be a record breaker if and when he lands it. If his good right arm is ever free again and if it is ever any good again when free, he says he will gladly attend to your little note."

If our Lauderdale, Fla., correspondent doesn't lose the use of his right arm, we promise to furnish our readers daily bulletins on the great battle of Walsh vs. Sailfish.

Sir Walter Raleigh

Arthur H. Kent's promotion to be assistant general counsel of the Treasury Department recalls a story of a recent experience of his with Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador.

A few weeks ago Lindsay, wanting some information on internal revenue laws, paid Kent a visit. Kent was out of his office, but when he returned a few minutes later was informed by his messenger that "Sir Walter Raleigh is waiting to see you."

Kent laughed and showed Sir Ronald in, being careful not to mention the incident. But good stories have a way of traveling about and a few days later Kent's secretary informed him that a "Sir Walter Raleigh is on the phone." It was Lindsay.

Civil Service Commissioner White's talk at the first of Labor Lodge No. 12's civil service forums was rather informative. Not only did White reveal the commission intends to ask the Budget Bureau for funds to create an improved transfer agency for all dismissed civil service employes, but he definitely confirmed reports that the President wants the extension of civil service to employes in those emergency agencies that are to be made permanent through non-competitive examinations.

The significance of White's remark that the administrative officer's recommendation will be required before employes are given the non-competitive exam seemed lost on most of those present.

Postals

The new A. F. G. E. constitution is out. As we've insisted all along the proposal to change the provision requiring the executive council to instruct all lodges to affiliate with the Central Labor Union by substituting the word "encourage" for "instruct," was not approved. . . . The suggestion for a Government Union Athletic League of all A. F. G. E. lodges in the city will be brought up at tomorrow night's meeting of the District department. . . . Announcement will also be made of the dissolution of the Sick Benefit Association and of the more attractive group insurance plan put forward by the District and Federal Employes Association.

Otto Praeger, who leaves the maritime commission staff, where he has served as special expert, on Monday, is going to California to raise oranges. For almost three years Praeger has been operating a 30-acre orange grove in Florida. . . . Elizabeth Lewis and Dean Snyder, of the United States Employment Service, are honeymooning in the Bermudas. . . . Issue No. 1 of the Farm Credit Club's new monthly came out yesterday. Morley Urges U.S. to Define 'Aggressors'

Our Failure to Brand Guilty State Called Incitement to War.

Strife Now Is Between Social Systems, Editor Says in Kensington.

World peace cannot be accomplished by hating war or by "a policy of neutrality which gives definite encouragement to a potential aggressor," Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, declared last night in a talk before the Kensington (Md.) Chamber of Commerce.

"When a country of the size and wealth and resources of the United States serve notice in advance that it sees no difference between an aggressor and his victim we are definitely encouraging those nations which have heretofore been partly restrained by the threat of collective action from pursuing the plans of their war offices," Morley asserted.

Warning our attempts to keep out of a world war are indirectly hastening such a catastrophe, he advised that we concern ourselves less with causes of war and more with essential conditions of peace.

"Social Systems Clash."

Terming Spain "a colonial battlefield in which rival imperial systems, facism and communism, are fighting desperately for complete supremacy," Morley said events there showed warmaking has ceased to be solely a matter of national policy and "is now tending to be an auxiliary of conflicting social systems which are not bound by national frontiers."

Failure of the League of Nations to restrain Italian aggresion in Ethiopia was, The Post editor said, a victory of the so-called authoritarian state over the democratic form of government.

Morley said Italian success had encouraged both Italy and Germany to disregard international law in assisting Spanish Fascists and now in coming directly to support of the rebels. The implications of the League failure, he declared, "signify a trend toward complete international anarchy, in which might alone makes right."

Says League Must Choose.

At present, the speaker said, the league, caught between the rise of dictatorships and the decline of democracy, must align itself with either the dictatorial nations or the democratic powers or else "become a pusillanimous instrument caught between the upper and nether millstones of these great conflicting forces." "At present," he added, "it is in the latter position."

Analyzing chances the United States will be able to keep itself free from a possible world conflict, Morley said:

"With a full consciousness that these are tragic words, I confess to a fear that it may now be too late for the United States to give constructive assistance in the salvation of Western civilization."

The present problem Morley sees as boiling down to whether Germany can become a member of the "satisfied" group of nations, among whom he classed both Japan and Italy, without resorting to war.

Prospects Held Dark.

Prospects for this solution cannot be called rosy, he said, but war can be avoided if Germany can meet her vital economic heeds through co-operative international action.

Morley was introduced to the meeting held at Kensington Elementary School by Representative David J. Lewis, Clevelan, president of the chamber, presided.

At the chamber's business session it was voted to urge the Montgomery County School Board to take immediate action in final selection and purchase of ground for the proposed new junior high school so that the new building may be ready for occupancy by September of next year.

A resolution was adopted asking the county commissioners to build a sidewalk along Connecticut avenue from Chevy Chase Lake to North Chevy Chase instead of reducing the speed/limit along the road as had been proposed Danger to pedestrians from rapidly moving traffic was the reason given for the request.

Snooty Penguins Turn High-Hat; Their 'Tuxedos' Snub Zoo Crowd

The penguins chose dinner jackets but human guests came informally—to the opening of the Zoo's birdhouse yesterday.

Six guys in tuxedos made the premiere crowd at the Zoo's bird house feel somewhat flustered yesterday.

Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, had said nothing about attire when he issued a number of oral invitations to a preview of the bird house addition. Everyone thought it was to be a very informal affair.

So imagine their embarrassment, particularly the male guests, on discovering dinner jackets in evidence.

Director Mann, though, was quick in coming to the rescue.

"Don't mind those uppity persons," he reassured the informally clad visitors, self-conscious in their street clothes. "They're only penguins and they never take off their tuxedos."

Sure enough they were penguins and jackass penguins at that. Not for more than a year has the Zoo had any of these South Pole comedians. Difficult to keep in captivity for any great length of time, these waddlers will enjoy every convenience conducive to long life—refrigerated quarters, wading pool and the proper diet.

Today, when the bird house addition is opened to the public, visitors will see not only the penguins for the first time but also a pair of snake birds from Florida, a covey of African whydahs, some Asiatic quail, a half dozen Cuban thrushes, 40 Australian finches and a pair of crowned pigeons.

The anhinga, or snake bird, has a neck that coils like a serpent's and is an expert underwater swimmer. The finches from "down under" might have flown through a rainbow for they are colored red, yellow, green and brown.

The whydah is the most industrious of the new tenants, being a weaver bird, and the crowned pigeons are the vainest. While flashlight bulbs were popping and guests were skipping excitedly from bird to bird and cage to cage, these snooty cousins of the flock in Lafayette Square did nothing but gaze at each other's feathery diadems in mutual admiration.

Before long the bird house will have a dodo and a moa. Not in the flesh, of course, but in frescoes to be painted over the entrances. The dodo and the moa have been extinct for several hundred years.

Old Race Horse Is Killed by Car In Montgomery

Single Fly's Bolt 3 Years Ago on Race Signal Fatal to Mistress.

Single Fly, veteran race horse, whose response to a signal she had learned to obey on the track brought fatal injuries to her young mistress almost three years ago, met violent death last night.

The mare, once winner of the steeplechase at the Montgomery County Charity Show, died a short time after she ran into an automobile driven by Arthur Heil, of Spencerville, Md., on the Colesville pike, near Edgemoor.

Property of Francis Kirk, of Sandy Spring, Single Fly figured unwittingly in one of the most poignant tragedies in the annals of Montgomery County.

Miss Corinne Kirk, 13-year-old niece of Kirk, who was fond of Single Fly and her speed was riding her on a stretch of country road in December, 1933. The horse stumbled slightly and Miss Kirk, daughter of Mahlon Kirk 4th, member of one of the country's oldest families, slid to Single Fly's neck.

To Single Fly that meant going down the stretch and winning a race. So she sprinted away, finally throwing the girl, who died two weeks later of her injuries.

No one blamed Single Fly for the accident. Single Fly continued to graze in the pastures and grow older. Then, last night, somehow or other she strayed to the highway, where, it is believed, the headlights of the automobile blinded her.

The impact which brought death to Single Fly crushed the front of Heil's automobile and bruised him severely.

Van Duzer Cautions Motorists Against Delay in Getting Tags

Traffic Department Is Staffed at Present to Turn Out Only 5,000 a Day With Time Remaining Short.

Warning to motorists that they might be without tags on New Year's Day, if they do not apply for their 1937 licenses immediately, was made yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Mr. Van Duzer says the present staff in the Traffic Department cannot issue more than 5,000 tags a day. At this rate to the end of the year, Van Duzer said, several hundred drivers will not be driving.

Tags will be issued over the counter at the Ford Building, November 30. They cannot be placed on cars until December 15.

Meanwhile, Van Duzer said that each set of tags will contain a sticker with the slogan "Rely on your brakes instead of your horn." The stickers are distributed in an effort to reduce the noises of the city, it was said.

Meantime, inquests were scheduled to be held at the District Morgue tomorrow in two traffic fatalities that occurred this week. Two motorists will appear at the hearings.

Parker Tyler, 38, of 1802 Fifth street northwest, is at liberty under $300 bond to appear in the death of Emil Maul, 64, of 513 Rittenhouse street northwest, who died in Emergency Hospital Tuesday. Maul was struck at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Carlinous B. Cliff, 25, of 150 T street northeast, will appear before the coroner's jury in the death of an unidentified colored woman who was struck at Sixth and M streets northwest. The woman died in Gallinger Hospital Monday.

Yocum Drowning Held an Accident

Montgomery County authorities last night issued a certificate of accidental death by drowning following an autopsy on the body of George A. Locum, 20, Washington hotel auditor, missing since he left home Sunday for a hike along the towpath of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.

The body was found at noon yesterday in a feeder ditch near Brookmont, Md., by Louis A. Smith who lives nearby and who Tuesday found the young man's hat floating in the canal. The body had lodged against a log several feet below the surface.

George A. Yocum, 20, Washington his son at the Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Besides his parents, Yocum is survived by two sisters, Sister Frances Marie of the Sisters of St. Francis Convent, Towson, Md., who formerly was Florence Yocum, a well known Washington singer, and Mrs. Margaret Cahill, of Washington.

Mrs. Richardson Succumbs at 91

After an illness of seven months which followed a fall on May 7, Mrs. Jennie Forrest Richardson died at her home at Stoneleigh Court yesterday. She was 91.

She was born in Norfolk, Va., on October 15, 1845, the daughter of Samuel Forrest, of the United States Navy, and Anna Maria Henderson. Her grandfather was Dr. Thomas Henderson, of the United States Army, closely connected with old Georgetown, and her great grandfather, Commodore Thomas Truxtun, so her early years were closely associated with Washington.

She was married in 1865 to Dr. Charles Taylor Richardson, Confederate officer.

Surviving her are two daughters, Misses Nannie Forrest and Mary Eskridge Richardson, of Washington; three sons, Forrest and Alexander Richardson, of Omaha, Nebr., and John Beale Richardson, of New York City; three grandchildren, Mrs. Samuel A. Scoville, of New York; Miss Virginia Richardson and Charles Forrest Richardson, of Omaha; one sister, Mrs. J. M. Macfarland, of Los Angeles. Among her many nephews and nieces are Miss Emily Truxtun Rutherford, of Baltimore, and Forrest Rutherford, of this city.

The funeral services which will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Hart of St. John's Church of Washington will be held at her old church in Charles Town, W. Va., tomorrow. Burial will be in the churchyard cemetery.

Last of 20-Mule Borax Teams To Make Farewell Trip Today

The 20-mule team, famous contemporary of the pony express, will make its farewell appearance today on the other side of the continent.

Re-enacting a commonplace event of 50 years ago, the last of the borax teams will pull up today at Furnace Creek, in California's Death Valley, take a bow and retire. Details of the ceremony were announced here yesterday by the National Park Service.

Between 1880 and 1889 practically all of the borax used commercially in this country was brought out by this picturesque method. The wagon trail was from the Harmony Borax Works, near Furnace Creek, through Death Valley to Wingate Pass, past Granite Falls to the railhead at Mojave.

Today's finale reverses the trip but traverses the same distance.

Aaron Winters and his Spanish-American wife, Rosie, discovered the borax deposits in the scorching marshes near their shanty in 1860. Eighteen years later Jimmy Dayton perished on the trail with his entire team of 20 mules. He was buried where he died, a day's journey from Furnace Creek.

Beside Dayton lies Shorty Harris, his comrade, who died with his boots off in 1934 at the age of 78. The inscription on the bronze monument says:

"Bury me beside Jim Dayton, in the valley we loved. Above me write, 'Here lies Shorty Harris, a single blanket Jackass Prospector.' Epitaph requested by Shorty (Frank) Harris, beloved gold hunter 1856-1934. Here James Dayton perished in 1898. To these trail makers whose courage matched the dangers of the land, this bit of earth is dedicated forever."

More than half of Death Valley, now a national monument and a tourist mecca, is covered by a saline or alkaline marsh. In some places borates predominate, in others the surface is common salt. Altogether, the bed is 40 miles long and 2 to 5 miles wide.

Thieves Purloin Truck Containing 18 Turks, Fixings

The meanie who shot Santa Claus has a Thanksgiving rival, police learned last night.

William Harris, of the 700 block of Kenyon street northwest, driver for the LaSalle Market, told authorities someone stole his truck full of turkeys, dressed and plucked and ready for the holiday table, as he was delivering a gobbler to a customer in the 1800 block of G street northwest.

There were 18 turkeys in the truck, together with the "fixin's," and innumerable other groceries.

Mrs. Mary E. Epperson Dies at 76 in Missouri

Word was received here yesterday of the death in Macon, Mo., of Mrs. Mary E. Epperson, 76.

Mrs. Epperson is survived by five children, Mrs. Edwin W. Pritchett, Washington; Mont and Guy Epperson, Macon; Mrs. Carl Muff, Macon, and J. Lloyd Epperson, Hurdland, Mo. She also leaves five grandchildren.

Parking Lots To Be Taxed After March 1

Garages Are Included in Commissioners' Decision.

Fees Ranging From $10 to $25 to Be Paid by Operators.

All operators of parking lots or garages with storage space for more than four automobiles will be required to pay annual license fees beginning March 1 under regulations adopted yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The regulations are the outgrowth of a prolonged inquiry by a special committee headed by Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel.

On the assumption that the average motor vehicle will be allowed 160 square feet for storage space including room for aisles, etc., the committee fixed the license fees as follows:

Fee From $10 to $25.

Four thousand square feet or less, accommodating a maximum of 25 vehicles, $10. Where area is less than 500 feet, no license will be required.

From 4,000 to 16,000 square feet, maximum of 100 vehicles, $15.

More than 16,000 square feet and in excess of 100 vehicles, $25.

All applications for license must be approved by the fire marshal and must be accompanied by an occupany permit showing compliance with zoning regulations.

Licensed premises shall be open to inspection during business hours by agents of the District government, including the police.

Operators of parking lots will be subject to loss of license if they remove a vehicle from the premises without consent of the owner or place it on public property.

Must Make Losses Good.

"Continuous complaints" of failure of parking lot owners to pay judgments in connection with thefts or damages to parked cars will result in the revocation of licenses.

Thomas said the committee had investigated the possibility of requiring parking lot and garage operators to carry liability insurance for the protection of their patrons but had found the Commissioners have no authority to make such a requirement.

Legislation to create such authority may be introduced in the next Congress although Thomas said the committee is not preparing any bill.

Stores Prepared Now for Christmas

Early Christmas shoppers will find Washington merchants equipped to meet their demands earlier this year than ever before, it was announced yesterday by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

When local stores open tomorrow, the association said, they will be in complete readiness to meet every need of the Chrsitmas shopper. The early opening is the result of concerted action by Washington merchants.

All of the larger and most of the smaller shops are now working on plans for elaborate Christmas windows which will be unveiled within the next few days.

Dr. Holmes Speaks To Luncheon Clubs

A message of world peace and good will was delivered to the joint Rotary-Kiwanis meeting at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday by Dr. Harry N. Holmes, of New York, guest speaker and field secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

He was introduced by Dr. Arthur P. Wilson, pastor of the Columbia Heights Christian Church.

President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving message on the promotion of world peace and international friendship will have the approval of Rotary and Kiwanis everywhere, Dr. Holmes asserted.

Alton P. White, 64, Produce Man, Dies

Alton P. White, 64, of 516 Twelfth street southeast, retired proprietor of the Farmers Produce Market, at Center Market, died late yesterday at Sibley Hospital following a brief illness.

Surviving White are his wife, Mrs. Maggie White, and three sons, Malcolm H., Almont F., and Alton C. White.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete late last night, but White will be buried in Congressional Cemetery.

$10,000 Damage Award Against Singer's Estate

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 25 (AP).—A jury in Circuit Court this afternoon returned a verdict of $10,000 damages against the estate of Grace M. Kerns, Norfolk singer, who was killed in an automobile accident last September, finding in favor of the estate of Howard J. Kerns, jr., a nephew of Miss Kerns, who also lost his life in the accident.

The verdict absolved the Peninsula Transit Corporation, one of whose buses was involved in the accident, of any blame in connection with the deaths. A motion for a new trial was continued by Judge Allan R. Hanckel.

Store Teeth Fail City's Greatest Turkey Fancier

New Set Worked Fine for Barber—Until Eve of Annual Feast.

Probably no man in Washington loves turkey more than Jack Gillespie, a barber at Fourteenth street and the Avenue.

For months he has been counting on an orgy of drumsticks, white meat, stuffing and all. Ever since last summer he's had his eye on a tom turkey which resided near Marlboro.

He watched the turkey grow bigger and bigger. About six weeks ago, he decided to have his teeth put in good shape for a feast on this bird Thanksgiving.

A dentist told him his incisors, molars, etc., were much in need of repair and, in fact, should all be extracted. "Fine," thought Mr. Gillespie, "I'll have them out and get a nice strong set of store teeth for the feast." The dentist said his gums would heal in time.

Last Sunday Gillespie bought the turkey. It weighed 22 pounds dressed—"a whopper," the purchaser said yesterday. "He had a chest on him as big as mine." Gums and new teeth were working great.

But then the worst, as such things will, came to the worst. The store teeth began to hurt. For the past two days Gillespie has been taking milk and soup through a straw.

He will eat no turkey today. Twenty-two pounds of prime meat will be pecked at by his wife and two sons at 942 O street northwest, who really don't appreciate turkey at all, compared to Barber Gillespie.

"I may be able to eat a croquet by Sunday," he moaned yesterday, "but I'm afraid all I'll get out of that roast turkey is the smell."

Yuletide Queen To Be Crowned After Parade

Columbia Heights Group to Usher in Season Tomorrow Night.

The opening of the Yuletide season and of Santa Claus Lane, the 15-block shopping area in Columbia Heights, will be marked in that section tomorrow night with a parade which will culminate in the Arcade Ballroom with the coronation of the seasonal queen, Miss Betty Jane Hahn.

Miss Hahn, chosen for the regal office at a meeting of the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association Tuesday night, will ride in the parade on a float, surrounded by her court and eight maids of honor.

Lights along Santa Claus Lane will be illuminated at 7:45 p. m. Tuesday by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. The parade will start 15 minutes later.

More than 1,100 persons, 12 bands and countless floats and costumed marching units are expected to assemble at Fourteenth street and Spring road northwest to take part in the procession. Parade officials in an information booth there will assign participants places in the line of march.

The parade will move down Fourteenth street to Fairmont street, after which the coronation ceremonies will be held at the Arcade Ballroom, Fourteenth and Park road northwest.

Sarah Pratt Dies At D. C. Residence

Mrs. Sarah Van Derlip Pratt, 83, died unexpectedly yesterday in her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel.

A resident of Washington for the past nine years, Mrs. Pratt was a native of Dansville, N. Y., and a daughter of the late Judge Van Derlip. She was the widow of Edwards Herrick Pratt, and spent her married life in Fredonia, N. Y., where she was active in social, civic and church affairs.

Surviving Mrs. Pratt is a daughter, Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, of 65 Observatory Circle northwest. Funeral services will be held at Mrs. Atwood's residence tomorrow at 3 p. m., followed by burial in Dansville, N. Y.

Social Science Hall at G. W. Is Dedicated

Marvin Says Research Should 'Implement Government.'

Rallies Also Mark First Day of Home-Coming for University.

To try to separate interpretation of social sciences from the supporting life of which "they are an explanation," would be suicidal to true university endeavor, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, asserted late yesterday afternoon at dedication of the institution's new social science hall on G street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets.

"This hall, which houses the social sciences, likewise is the temporary home of the George Washington University School of Government," said Dr. Marvin.

"The juxtaposition is an appropriate and significant one, for it is the interpretation of the social sciences which implements government, making it intelligent, dynamic and purposeful.

Part of Home-coming.

"It is through increased knowledge in the field of the social sciences that we may expect to arrive at our goal of social reconstruction through democratic methods in our self-governing society."

The dedication was a dramatic part of the first day of the university's two-day home-coming celebration.

Following Dr. Marvin's address, the cornerstone was placed by Theodore Williams Noyes, publisher of the Evening Star and a member of the Board of Trustees of the university.

Traffic in the vicinity was closed for the ceremonies, held at 5 p. m. Presiding was Elmer Louis Kayser, university marshal.

Alumni, Student Rallies.

Rallies by students and alumni of the university in the university yard marked beginning of the homecoming. Speakers at these rallies included Dr. William C. Ruediger, university provost; Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and home-coming chairman, and Head Football Coach Jim Pixlee.

They welcomed the "old grads" and urged both student body and alumni to prepare for "a real battle" in the George Washington-West Virginia football game today.

Visiting alumni were entertained at tea in Strong Hall, the university's new dormitory, from 4 p. m. until 6 p. m.

Ex-Convict Named In Local Holdup

Harry E. Blackwell, 34, former convict, last night was identified by two of his victims as the robber with the blue steel revolver who held up their cleaning shops last Saturday night.

At police line-up appeared Edith M. Sandiland, of 301 S street northeast, and Lillian Jenkins, of 814 Fourteenth street northwest. Both young women, who manage separate establishments, identified Blackwell.

A third victim, Robert Sutton, who operates a filling station at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, could not positively identify the prisoner.

"I know him, though," said Blackwell nonchalantly, "I held him up."

Blackwell, who was arrested Monday, is held under $20,000 bond.

Graduates of Trinity Gather Here Saturday

Graduates of Trinity College from all sections of the Nation will gather here Saturday and Sunday for a two-day conference of the Alumnae Association.

The program will include a banquet Saturday evening and a luncheon Saturday afternoon at the college. There will be a Sunday afternoon tea. Principal speakers will include Michael MacWhite, Minister of the Irish Free State; the Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., of Georgetown University; Miss Florence T. Judge, national president of the alumnae, and Miss Jane M. Hoey, director of Federal grants to States under the social security act.

Rabbi Metz Will Speak Tomorrow on Scripture

Rabbi Solomon Metz will continue his series of Bible discussions with a sermon on "The Struggle Within" at services at Adas Israel Synagogue, at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

At the social hour following the services, L. S. Turover, chess champion and vice presdent of the Jewish Community Center, will lead an open forum discussion with a talk on "Old World Jewry in Transition." Turover recently returned from a trip to Europe. Charles Pilzer will preside at the meeting.

All Washington Churches Will Hold Elaborate Ceremonies for Thanksgiving Today

Special Masses, Union Services Scheduled for Holiday Here

Roper to Speak at the Northeast Congregations' Rites; St. Patrick's to Celebrate Pan American Mass; Jewish Ceremonies Announced.

Thousands of Washington churchmen of every denomination and creed will join in observance of Thanksgiving today. Special masses are planned in Catholic churches. Protestant churches in every section of the city will conduct union services. Still other services are announced by Jewish congregations.

Arthur Tyrer, Long-Time U.S. Employe, Dies

Was Assistant Director of Marine Inspection and Navigation Unit.

Arthur J. Tyrer, 68, assistant director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation of the Commerce Department, died at Emergency Hospital yesterday after a long illness.

Mr. Tyrer had been in the Government service for 34 years, having entered in 1902 as a clerk in the Bureau of Navigation, then a Treasury Department unit. He transferred to the Postoffice Department in the same year and in 1903 went to the newly created Department of Commerce and Labor, where he was employed in the office of the Secretary.

In 1904 he again went to the Bureau of Navigation as a clerk. After several promotions, he was named Deputy Commissioner of Navigation in 1909, serving in that position until June 21, 1927, when he was appointed Commissioner of Navigation.

Upon the merger of the Bureau of Navigation and the Steamboat Inspection Service in 1932, Mr. Tyrer was made assistant director of the consolidated bureau, later officially designated as the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

A native of Albert Lea, Minn., Capital. He was unmarried and Mr. Tyrer later lived in Tacoma, Washington, before coming to the leaves no close relatives. He lived here at 1901 Columbia road northwest.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Chambers' undertaking establishment. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Bloom Says Nation Has Broad Powers

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), New York, said in a broadcast last night that the Government's constitutional powers "to promote the general welfare" go far beyond unemployment relief and flood and drought control.

"This provision (of the Constitution) has a far wider sweep than latter-day commentators accord it," he contended.

"They seem to think the Government has limited powers in promoting the general welfare. They speak of relief of unemployment, flood control and drought control as examples of provisions for the general welfare."

Thanksgiving To Mix Jollity, ReverenceHere

Brilliant, Crisp Weather Is Promised; Throngs of Visitors Expected.

day at the office, as usual." Similar activities are anticipated by other members of the Cabinet and Government leaders.

At his press conference yesterday, Secretary of Commerce Roper, in a Thanksgiving statement, said:

"Seldom have the American people been more justified in entering wholeheatedly into the spirit of Thanksgiving than this year. The season is one of retrospection as well as gratitude."

At 3 p. m. today abundant supplis of edibles will be distributed in basket form to needy Washingtonians at the Central Union Mission. The baskets, containing roast beef, three kinds of vegetables, fruit, coffee and sweets, will be given out by E. H. DeGroot, jr., president of the mission's board of directors.

Restaurant to Feed 100.

During the afternoon 100 needy men will be fed at Jenner's restaurant in the Investment Building. An additional 750 will be taken care of at the mission.

Inmates of the District Reformatory and the workhouse at Occoquan, Va., will fare better than those at the District Jail. Menus of the several departments of welfare agencies showed turkey dinners will be served at all except two of the principal institutions. Prisoners at the jail will be served roast pork, and apples and roast chicken will be served at the Temporary Home for Union Ex-Soldiers, Sailors and Marines.

Chicken and apple pie will replace the traditional turkey and pumpkin pie at the Municipal Lodging House, Henry A. Koch, superintendent, told the Board of Public Welfare.

The menu: Mashed potatoes, chicken, creamed peas, gravy, bread, apple pie and coffee.

Approximately 1,200 men and women will be fed at the Volunteers of America, 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. In addition to serving families at the relief station, the volunteers will distribute dinners at their Alexandria station.

To Aid 300 Children.

Three hundred children will receive their Thanksgiving dinner at the American Rescue Workers' headquarters, 413 Fourth street northwest.

The Red Cross Gray Ladies will celebrate Thanksgiving Day in their memorial chapel at Walter Reed Hospital by burning their last mortgage note on the new building. Mrs. Henry Rea, of Pittsburgh, founder of the Gray Ladies, will lead the program.

William H. Kay, president of the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division of Veterans, announced special exercises at the outfit's headquarters.

A portion of the day's jovial side will come with George Washington University's "home-coming" celebration. Receptions, rallies and a football game with West Virginia are scheduled.

At 8:30 p. m. a Thanksgiving musicale will feature a program at the Mayflower Hotel.

The day also will see formal opening of the thirtieth annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals. Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President will open the drive officially in a radio address from Hyde Park at 10:30 a. m.

A. P. Zappone Is Dead; Served Long for U. S.

Was Retired Accounts Chief of Agriculture Bureau; Rites Tomorrow.

Almerico J. Zappone, 74, retired Agriculture Department chief of accounts and disbursements, died yesterday at his home 2222 First street northwest, after a long illness.

Mr. Zappone was born in Washington and educated in the local public schools. In 1880 he enlisted in the United States Army Signal Corps and served as private, corporal and sergeant until 1888, when he became a civilian employe of the corps, which then performed the meteorological work for the Government.

With the transfer of the Signal Corps functions to the Department of Agriculture in 1891, Mr. Zappone became an employe of the newly created Weather Bureau, later being promoted to chief of stations and accounts.

Retired in 1932.

He served in that capacity until 1905, when he was appointed chief of accounts and disbursements and departmental disbursing officer. This position he occupied until he retired from the service November 30, 1932.

In 1907 Mr. Zappone served on the Keep committee, President Theodore Roosevelt's committee on grades and salaries in executive departments, and in 1911 was designated by President Taft to represent the Department of Agriculture on the President's commission on economy and efficiency.

Was Chief 27 Years.

During the 27 years he was chief disbursing officer of the department, Mr. Zappone spent more than $2,100,000,000 of Federal funds.

He was a charter member of the Washington Golf and Country Club and had served as its treasurer and vice president. For many years he sang in the St. Patrick's Church Choir and the Choral Society.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Annie Virginia Zappone and a sister, Miss Jessie Zappone.

Funeral services will be held at Gawler's undertaking establishment at 11 a. m. Friday. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Four Fighting Senate Inquiry Haled to Court

Pittsburgh Firm Officials Under Indictment in Espionage Case.

Continuing the search into the tangled background of industrial espionage in the United States, the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday had four officials of the Railway Audit and Inspection Co. of Pittsburgh haled into court there by a United States marshal.

The four men, W. W. Groves, W. B. Groves, James C. Boyer and James E. Blair, had been indicted in the United States District Court here for failure to appear and produce records for the use of the LaFollette-Thomas committee's investigators.

United States Commissioner Roger Knox held the four in custody in Pittsburgh. They immediately filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus.

Hearings on the petition were scheduled for December 7, and the defendants were released on $$1,000 bond.

They have been reported seeking to avoid trial on charges of contumacy for their refusal to appear at committee hearings which have produced a series of startling revelations of strike-breaking methods and industrial espionage.

The committee will announce within a day or two when the January sessions will be held.

On the Air Today

While the listener reflects over the grand victuals served at the family table it is rather interesting to note the kind of Thanksgiving Day in store for Rudy Vallee and Kate Smith, sparring this season for listening audience at 8 Thursday nights.

Vallee takes the prize for all-around activity. His day's schedle includes five appearances at a Broadway theater, rehearsals and a broadcast for afternoon and night, and dance music in a Broadway night club until 3 a. m.

Just rehearsals and her show were enough for Kate. She isn't even planning a dinner in her day. Instead she has arranged for the feast on Friday—with her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Smith; her sister, Helene, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Hanby—at Golf Club Manor, Va.

On the whole, Thanksgiving Day is "justh another day" for most of radio's Thursday stars. Here's the menu:

Carl Hoff—and orchestra, starred in "Morning Matinee," WOL, at 9 a. m. Also members of the Broadway "Swing Your Lady" cast in a sketch.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Opens Christmas Seal campaign, WMAL, 10:05 a. m.

'Courtship of Miles Standish"—Dramatization is special holiday feature of WRC, at 2. Script and original music by Wells Hively.

Larry Kelley—Yale football end, heads guests in Vallee "Varieties," WRC, at 8. Also Francis Lederer, France Faye, Howard and Shelton, and Elizabeth Day, monologist.

Lanny Ross—Introduces his new song, "Swimming Againsht the Tide," in "Show Boat," WRC, at 9. Also Helen Jepson.

Town Hall—Subject: "What Does the Public Want in Music?" with Mme. Olga Samaroff-Stokowski, Albert Stoessel, Frank Black, Prof. William Lyon Phelps and Fred Waring, WMAL, at 9:30.

Bing Crosby—Presents Ricardo Cortez, Rochelle Hudson, Lotte Lehman, WRC, at 10.

Mischa Elman—Shares "Then and Now" honors with Coe Glade, opera contralto, WJSV, at 10.

• • • •

Gordon Hittenmark has taken up his campaign for dolls for needy children again this year. Last season he assembled dozens of them . . . WOL announces at this early hour it will carry the annual East-West grid contest New Year's Day . . . Army-Navy will be found on the football schedules this afternoon—with a local game at WJSV. However, if you must have the Pennsylvania-Cornell game, you might shop around for it as Ted Husing is doing it for C. B. S. . . . Paul Whiteman is to be replaced in January by other talent. It looks as though Tim and Irene might get the assignment. Shep Fields is definitely to be used for orchestral background.

• • • •

Rumors now have the "Good Will Court" going off the air at the end of the first 13-week contract. Not due to a failure of the program by any means—but to opposition of bar associations. These reports apparently refer to the N. B. C. presentation. However, in the interests of consistency, it seems that the original Intercity-WOL hour will be sacrificed along with the newer N. B. C. series.

• • • •

James J. Braddock is expected to sign a contract to do a 52-week series of programs with a pointed appeal to children . . . Gladys Swarthout also will be heard regularly on the networks beginning next month. . . . Henry Burbig again has been auditioned for a regular series. Burbig was one of the earliest dispensers of nonsense in radio.

J. F. Harman, Silver Trade Pioneer, Dies

Native Virginian's Father Helped Build B. & O. Railroad.

By the Associated Press.

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 25.—John Frelinghuysen Harman, 92, known in New York as the "dean of the silver trade," died today at his home. He was a member of the board of directors of Handy & Harman, an internationally known firm of precious metal dealers which he helped establish in 1867.

Born May 1, 1844, in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, Harman descended from a German family which settled in Maryland before the Revolutionary War. His father, John M. Harman, helped to build the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and was superintendent of the section at Harper's Ferry in 1859, when John Brown made his famous raid there.

Harman's watchman on the bridge across the Potomac was the first man shot by Brown's followers in the raid and the incident is recorded in Stephen Vincent Benet's narrative poem, "John Brown's Body."

Mr. Harman was graduated from Washington and Jefferson College in 1865 and soon after went to work in a New York specie house. Two years later he became associated with Parker Handy in the silver bullion business.

In 1874, he married Amelia Gray, of New York. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, all of Plainfield.

Colonials Are Rated 7-to-5 Favorites Over West Virginia Today

Record G. W. Campaign Is At Stake

20,000 Expected to See Homecoming Game at Stadium.

Colonials Face Big Task of Stopping Moan's Aerial Attack.

George Washington's Colonials take the field at Griffith Stadium today as the 7-to-5 favorite to complete their most successful football season in the institution's history.

To achieve that end the Colonials face the task of throttling the forward-passing efforts of the picturesquely named Kelly Moan and the play of his West Virginia University teammates.

Smarting under two successive defeats and aiming to salvage a bit of prestige out of a discouraging season, West Virginia's Mountaineers are a desperate underdog, presenting in Kelly the most deadly passer in the East.

Before a Home-Coming Day crowd expected to reach 20,000, George Washington will be bidding not only for its most triumphant football campaign, but for the No. 1 ranking among District colleges.

The 26-to-0 defeat dealt West Virginia by Georgetown is the gauge by which the Colonials are being measured in the local ranking. But George Washington is willing to accept victory by any score and, if successful in that, is willing, then, to let its season record speak for its claims.

Moan Not Only Ace.

West Virginia, however, will not rely wholly on Moan's bullet-like passes, for its ace has a supporting cast just as dangerous with a ball tucked under its respective arms. Sam Audia, 190-pound fullback, is one of the best line-plungers to matriculate at the school in recent years, and always can be counted on for those extra yards that mean first downs and sometimes touchdowns.

Dave Isaac, Clem Carder, and Harold (Zip) Lorenz will keep George Washington on its collective toes throughout the afternoon, and it will not be surprising if any one of them gets away for a touchdown run.

Nor will the Colonials have an easy time with the Mountaineer line, reckoned one of the East's best. Featuring Babe Barna, expert pass catcher and a superlative defensive man at left end, the line is one of the best ever developed at the Morgantown institution. Pittsburgh made only 11 first downs through it, while West Virginia collected 10 of its own, and is the only team credited with scoring on power plays.

Wide Open Game Seen.

But George Washington has no idea of lying down and playing dead for the visitors, but expects to place an alert and very much alive team on the field. Joey Kaufman, the team's No. 1 triple-threater, will not appear in the starting line-up, but is expected to have an important role in the proceedings. The backfield will be comprised of Jenkins, quarterback; Reeves and Kavalier, halves; and Turner fullback. Coach Jim Pixlee figures this quarter packs enough power to blast West Virginia's vaunted line.

This George Washington line, incidentally, will be in a good position to prove its class against the Mountaineers, and undoubtedly will. Unlike the G. W. lines of old, the seven manning the front line trenches today are of the aggressive type, taking a couple of yards when the foe yields an inch. In Ray Hanken the team has one of the best ends in this vicinity and from stem to stem the mules are a well balanced, spirited lot.

A wide open game is a foregone conclusion, inasmuch as West Virginia relies on Moan's passing for a majority of its gains, while the downtown eleven is not loath to go into the air. It promises to be the most attractive game played at Griffith Stadium this season, and win, lose or draw, both teams are going to earn their turkey dinners.

W.-L. High Held Favorite Over G.W. Today

Several thousand football fans are expected to throng the Ballston Stadium of Washington and Lee High School today to watch the annual game between the "Little Generals" and George Washington High of Alexandria. The Ballston team is favored by comparative records.

The opening kick-off is scheduled for 10 o'clock, and the weather man has promised to do his best.

Over a period of six years covered by the only available records of the two schools, George Washington has won five games. W. and L. got off to a flying start with an 18-0 victory but has bowed since then by scores of 6-0, 14-7, 20-0, 12-7 and 12-9.

Besides victory, the teams covet possession of "the old oaken bucket" put into competition for the first time last year and which is now resting with the Alexandrians.

Nebraska Team Vote Favors Pitt as Foe

Players, in Unanimous Ballot, Differ With Student Paper.

By the Associated Press.

North Platte Nebr., Nov. 25.—The University of Nebraska football team voted unanimously today to continue athletic relations with Pittsburgh. The action followed a student paper editorial demanding Pitt be dropped in favor of a "cleaner" foe.

Just before the Cornhuskers' special train to Portland, Oreg., reached North Platte, a ballot was given each of the 30 players aboard, this question being asked: "Do you favor continuing relations with Pittsburgh?"

Sam Francis, star fullback and candidate for All-American honors, enlarged on his vote of approval by saying he had been misquoted recently.

"I didn't say that I thought Nebraska should quit playing Pitt," he said. "I think this game adds prestige to the Nebraska schedule. We are always a better football team after playing contests against such rugged opposition as Pitt offers."

Notre Dame Drills Indoors for Trojans

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 25 (AP).—Notre Dame's football forces had to move indoors today as they continued practice for the game with Southern California at Los Angeles December 5.

Building a defense against Trojan passes, Coach Elmer Layden ran off a series of plays to illustrate the work he wants done.

Games Today Will Reveal Bowl Foes

5 of the 6 Given Chance Face Final Big Tests; L. S. U. Doesn't.

Huskie-Wash. St. Game Will Decide Coast's Representative.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 25.—The road to the Rose Bowl is strewn with thorns, appropriately enough, but tomorrow's Thanksgiving Day football slate may end all conjecture as to the rivals in Pasadena's annual New Year's Day gridiron classic.

Five of the six teams granted even an outside chance of gaining the two Rose Bowl assignments—Washington, Washington State, Alabama, Fordham and Pittsburgh—will meet their final important tests of the regular campaign. The sixth, Louisiana State, will wait until Saturday for its traditional finale with Tulane.

Almost certainly the Far Western Rose Bowl representative will be selected at Seattle, where Washington and Washington State square off in the game that will decide the Pacific Coast Conference championship.

Should Washington's Huskies, beaten only by Minnesota, win or tie tomorrow's crucial engagement, they can be considered Rose Bowl certainties. The Huskies, tied by Stanford, but victorious otherwise in five conference games, will capture the conference title outright under those circumstances.

State Could Mix Things.

A victory for Washington State, however, would toss a monkey wrench into the situation. The Cougars lost one Conference game to Oregon State, tied another with Southern California, but won its other four league assignments. A victory tomorrow would enable them to finish in a tie for first place with the Huskies.

A poll of the eight Conference members then would be necessary to determine the championship and the Rose Bowl nominee.

Meanwhile Alabama's Crimson Tide, held to a scoreless draw by Tennessee, but otherwise unchecked, will seek to keep alive its Rose Bowl chances by trimming Vanderbilt decisively before a crowd of 24,000 at Birmingham. Assuming a victory tomorrow, some football observers believe Alabama is sure to get the Rose Bowl bid if Washington is the Far Western selection. They base this prediction on the close friendship between Coach Jimmy Phelan, of Washington, and Coach Frank Thomas, of Alabama, both Notre Dame products.

Pitt, Rams Out.

Neither Pitt nor Fordham is conceded more than a bare chance of receiving a bid to Pasadena, but both Eastern powers will be out to keep that outside hope alive. Fordham, shocked by a 7-7 draw with Georgia last week, plays New York University before 60,000 in the Yankee Stadium, while Pitt meets its city rival, tough Carnegie Tech, before 25,000 in Pitt Stadium.

Some 50,000 will parade into Franklin Field at Philadelphia to watch the annual Thanksgiving Day duel between Penn and Cornell. Penn, rated by some critics the third strongest team in the East, will be favored, but the Quakers will need to watch out. Cornell's sophomore array, although beaten frequently, is dangerous at all times.

Otherwise, the Eastern slate will bring together Brown and Colgate, Temple and Bucknell and George Washington and West Virginia.

In the South where the firing will be heaviest, Duke will seek clear title to the Southern Conference championship in a clash with North Carolina State's Wolfpack, a disappointment this season. Other conference games pit Washington and Lee against Maryland, Furman against Clemson, Virginia against North Carolina, Viriginia Military against Virginia Polytech, Davidson against Wake Forest and Richmond against William and Mary. Tennessee's vastly improved Volunteers face their ancient foes, Kentucky's Wildcats in the only Southeastern Conference engagement other than Alabama's test with Vanderbilt.

Missouri, heading back toward the top under Don Faurot, climaxes a successful Big Six campaign against Kansas while the Southwest Conference race continues with Texas entertaining Texas A. and M. at Austin. Arkansas, co-leader of the Southwest with Texas Christian, plays Tulsa, a non-conference rival.

Bowie Groom Ejected; Armed Guards Posted

Moon Side's Handler Ousted in Sponging as New Case Is Discovered When Troubadora Coughs One Up in Workout.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 25.—The second case of sponging detected within a week, the ejection of a groom from the grounds and the installation of armed guards at the stables combined to give the Bowie racing plant a high-tension atmosphere tonight.

Advised by the trainer of Troubadora, 2-year-old filly owned by H. Rozier Dulaney, of Upperille, Va., that the horse had coughed up a sponge this morning, track officials took sweeping action.

A patrol of guards was ordered to oversee the stables today and tonight, particularly the stalls in which candidates for tomorrow's Thanksgiving Day Handicap are quartered. Nominees for later stake races are also under guard.

In another order, the track stewards took action against Joe (Red) Dougherty, groom of Moon Side, the favorite in last Saturday's handicap, which had been tampered with during Friday night. Dougherty was not charged with the sponging, but was ordered from the grounds for his laxity.

Groom Negligent.

The report of the stewards follows:

"Joe (Red) Dougherty, groom of Moon Side, sponged during the night of November 20, was negligent in the care and protection of his charge. Dougherty failed to satisfactorily explain certain discrepancies in his testimony and previously had groomed two separate horses that were stimulated and caught through the saliva test.

"Although the evidence in the Moon Side case is circumstantial, Dougherty's association with the saliva cases makes him undesirable in the opinion of the stewards, and they have notified the association that they think it advisable to exclude him from the grounds."

The placing of the guards is not a publicity stunt. General Manager Joseph Boyle decided not to gamble with the rumors that a gang of "race fixers" is determined to operate here. Only persons employed by the stables and owners and trainers will be allowed near the barns after sundown. A general warning was issued that anyone approaching a stable at night will do so at his own risk.

A special guard will be maintained in front of the stall of Roman Soldier, winner of three Maryland stakes this fall and probable odds-on favorite for the Bryan and O'Hara. The 4-year-old, which finished second in the 1934 Kentucky

Jay Berwanger Calls Huffman Best Back

Indiana U. Star Is Rated Prize Back of 1936; Francis Is Second.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—John Jacob (Jay) Berwanger, who a year ago basked in the light of All-America football glory, picked Indiana University's Vernon Huffman today as the prize back of 1936.

The husky from Dubuque, Iowa, the University of Chicago's "one-man" football team of 1933-34-35, cast his vote for the talented Hoosier, after a moment of hesitation. He made his choice between Huffman and another Middle Western star, Southpaw Sam Francis, of Nebraska.

"Of all the backs I've seen this fall," he said between accepting a telephoned invitation to address a group of high school football players and reading a telegram inviting him somewhere else for the same purpose, "I'd take Huffman.

Huffman Better Runner.

"They both did just about everything a back could do, but Huffman's running gives him the edge with me," he said. "Francis was a powerful ball carrier through the line, but Huffman was likely to get away anytime for a long, scoring run. Indiana had a real attack while he was in there, but not much without him."

Berwanger, still a "triple-threat" with his jobs as sports writer, assistant coach at his alma mater and employe of a manufacturing firm, said passing up a large piece of professional football money had caused him no regrets.

"I'd like to have found out how well I could have gone against professional competition, and the money was attractive," he said seriously. "But I thought I'd better get right into something permanent."

"I haven't lacked for exercise, either," he laughed. "My coaching job gave me a chance to do some ball carrying, and writing about football games has been no cinch.

"In fact, I have been so busy that I am wasting away. I've lost 10 pounds since last fall—I'm clear down to 185 now."

60,000 to See Rams Battle New York U.

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Fordham's Rams, their Rose Bowl hopes shattered by Georgia, hope to rebound as a strong candidate for a place in the New Year's classic tomorrow by committing mass homicide with their city rivals, New York University's Violets, as victims.

Although only a few fans gave the Violets even an outside chance of scorning an upset, upward of 60,000 fans were expected to watch the eighteenth annual football battle at Yankee Stadium. Last year, as the Rams walloped the Violets, 21 to 0, 66,606 fans looked on.

The Violets, defeated this season by Ohio State, North Carolina and Carnegie Tech and tied by Georgetown, hoped to score an upset victory through the air over the twice tied but unbeaten Rams.

Villanova Declines Santa Clara Contest

Phaildelphia, Nov. 25 (AP).—Coach Maurice (Clipper) Smith said today Villanova College has declined an invitation to meet Santa Clara in a postseason game at San Francisco December 20.

Villanova on Monday accepted an invitation to play Auburn University at Havana, Cuba, on New Year's Day.

Smith formerly coached at Santa Clara.

Maryland 8-5 Choice Over Generals

W. & L. Can Clinch 2d Place in Southern Loop With a Win.

Game at Baltimore Set for 2:30; Terps All in Good Condition.

A couple of old and respected Southern Conference rivals will furnish Baltimore's Thanksgiving football festivities today, when Maryland and Washington and Lee try conclusions on the Municipal Stadium gridiron. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Although defeated in its last two engagements, Maryland will enter the fray an 8 to 5 favorite, but Washington and Lee has too much at stake to be dismissed lightly. Trailing the conference-leading Duke Blue Devils at this stage, the Generals can clinch second place by a victory over the Terrapins. A Maryland victory will assure it of a place in the upper bracket of teams, but losses to North Carolina and V. M. I. preclude any possibility of a higher ranking for Dobson's men.

Tenth Game of Series.

This will be the tenth and rubber game of the series. Last year's game, played in a quagmire at College Park, resulted in a scoreless tie, the first of the rivalry.

The Generals have had an up-and-down season, mostly down, but won their last two games, over V. P. I. and William and Mary, and still may be in the winning mood. But Maryland will be in no peaceful frame of mind after being nosed out by Georgetown and Guckeyson, Gormley, Ellinger, Meade, Headley, et al. will be in high gear and ready to roll.

Maryland emerged from the Georgetown game in fine physical condition although somewhat exhausted, and two days of rest have put them back on edge. The line-up will be the same as that which started last Saturday's game.

Talent in Line-up.

Washington and Lee will present a number of talented men in its line-up, including Capt. Duane Berry, guard; Bob Spessard, giant end; on Dunlap, former Central High School boy who calls signals; Wilton Sample, 200-pound bullback; Carson and Craft, halfbacks, and Dick Sysmanski, burly tackle. All have made their marks in Southern football.

This game shares State-wide attention with the Western Maryland-Mount St. Mary's fracas at Westminster. The Terrors rule favorites over the Mount because of greater man-power, but Mount St. Mary's always has a few extra guns for its neighboring rival. Western Maryland has not lost a game in this old series since 1923 when the Mount scored a 3-0 victory.

Trojan-U.C.L.A. Game to Draw 103,000

Southern Cal. Is Favored in Grudge Battle at Los Angeles Today.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.—A record Thanksgiving throng of 103,000 football fans is expected to jam into Memorial Stadium tomorrow to watch Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles settle a cross-town grudge.

For two teams that have been pretty well bumped around this season, the U. C. L. A. Bruins with three defeats and the Trojans, beaten twice and tied once, they should find a generous measure of consolation in their Thanksgiving Day battle.

No title is involved, and the possibility of a Rose Bowl appearance for the winner faded several weeks ago, but the teams have a spirited, local issue to decide, and there'll be a tremendous throng sitting in on the verdict.

Both Will Get $100,000.

Not to be overlooked is the fact that both schools will draw something like $100,000 apiece for their efforts, which should atone in a way for the glory and the $70,000 or so they would carry away in a Rose Bowl game, where only 85,000 people can attend.

All the pregame enthusiasm may seem odd to an outsider who isn't aware of the rabid followers behind Coach William H. ("Bill") Spaulding and his Bruins, and Howard Jones and his Trojan warriors, and the keen interest in football here.

The teams have met but twice, in 1929 and 1930, when the Bruins were mere Cubs newly admitted into big time Coast circles. U. S. C. won the first, 76 to 0; the second, 52 to 0.

Since then the Bruins have come up. They finished in a tie last year for the Conference title while S. C. was third from the bottom. This year the Trojans have a better record and are slight favorites.

Carolina Netmen Win Over Virginia by 9-0

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 25 (AP). Paged by John Foreman, Gordon Robinson and Carlton Rood, North Carolina's tennis team registered a clean sweep over Virginia here today, 9 to 0.

Hornsby Signed As Browns' Pilot

New Owners Boost His Pay to $20,000 a Year.

St. Louis, Nov. 25 (AP).—Donald Barnes, new president of the St. Louis Browns baseball club, announced tonight the new owners had formally signed Rogers Hornsby to manage the Browns for two years.

Under the former club ownership, that of the Phil Ball estate, Hornsby's contract had two more years to run at $18,000 a season and a 25 per cent share of any profits.

The new owners, it was said canceled the profit clause and instead, as previously agreed, allotted Hornsby a cash settlement which will be spread out so as to boost Hornsby's salary to $20,000 a year.

Tsk, Tsk; Oh This Wild Younger Generation

Richmond, Va., Nov. 25 (AP).—Richmond's Spiders, exuberantly confident of victory over William and Mary's Indians tomorrow, rushed through their last practice session of the season today and then carried Assistant Coach Ross Crane from the field and gave him a ducking—uniform and all—under the cold shower as a demonstration of "good, clean fun."

Determined Navy Team Leaves Today for Game With Army

'Stop Meyer' Strategy Is Dropped

Wiser MiddiesDon'tPlan to Permit Repetition of '35 Blunder.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 25.—Indicative of the spirit of calm determination with which the Navy approaches the Army game this year, is the fact that Bancroft Hall is not, as it usually has been at this season, plastered inside and out with slogans which exhort the team to stop the Army's outstanding back or backs.

Last year, one could not take a half-dozen steps around the Naval Academy without being confronted with a sign big or little, which called upon the Navy team to "stop Meyer." Consequently, the Navy players were impressed with the fact that was the only thing they had to do, and before they found themselves, Grove, not Meyer, had scored two touchdowns.

This year, the team and the rest of the Navy contingent knows that it cannot concentrate on any one back, but that it will have a lot of good Army backs to stop and they must be ready to stop them all.

Line-up Named.

Still, the signs of the near approach of another service school game are at hand. One big sign runs across the front of Bancroft Hall, where the midshipmen live, and it says "ring the bell." The reference is to the old Japanese bell rung only when the Navy defeats the Army, and which has rung only after one football game in the past 15 years. Another sign is that Tecumseh, the giver of good luck, is adorned with brilliant war paint and still another was that the midshipmen practiced this afternoon the movements they will execute in the stadium Saturday.

The team practiced in secret this afternoon and will have its last home grounds practice tomorrow afternoon. At 6:30 in the evening, the squad of 40 will leave for the area of operations. It will stop until the game at the Valley Forge Military Academy. Friday afternoon there will be a little practice in the Municipal Stadium.

The Navy still declines to pledge itself to a specific starting line-up, though this has been given out as the first choice team: Left end, Soucek; left tackle, Ferrara; left guard, Dubois; center, Miller; right guard, Morrell (captain); right tackle, Hessel; right end, Pike; quarterback, Case; left half, Ingram; right half, Antrim; fullback, Schmidt.

Navy Pep Rally Fails to Screen Well

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Head Coach Tom Hamilton is telling the regiment of Midshipmen that the Middies will not fail against Army Saturday, but the photographer's version of the pep rally is hardly complimentary. The Midshipman on the right who is seemingly displaying great disinterest, is Rivers Morrell, varsity guard and captain.

Cadets Scrimmage, Listen to Speeches

By the Associated Press.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Coach Gar Davidson gave Army's football offense and defense a general overhauling today as he put the finishing touches on most of the preparatory work for the Navy game Saturday.

For the second straight day he broke precedent by running his charges through a lengthy scrimmage the week preceding the traditional service clash, and then wound up with a short tackling drill, in which plebe gridmen served as volunteer running targets.

The entire squad was entertained afterward at a big "beat Navy" rally in Washington Hall. Maj. Gen. L. D. Kromer, Army coach of 35 years ago, keynoted the affair with an expression of confidence in the current West Pointers.

The squad heard the same thing, also, from their present coaches, and then some of them told the cheering cadets the team is ready for the kick-off.

In today's workout it was indicated Davidson may not start Monk Meyer, his backfield ace, against Navy, but even if he does not answer the kick-off it was considered unlikely he would be kept long on the sidelines, once the action gets under way.

Sanico Duckpin League Play Is Monday

Green Bag Coffee Leading Opponents; La Bille Tops Individuals.

A rivalry in league competition second to none exists when the 26-team Sanico Duckpin League goes into action each Monday night at the Convention Hall alleys and the emporium, adequately equipped with the facilities to cozily handle the large group of pinmen, fairly rings with the enthusiastic roars of the contestants.

The Green Bag Coffee team is showing its heels to all opponents, setting the pace with 33 wins against 7 losses, followed closely by at least six teams bunched for runner-up honors.

Billy LaBille, of the Office team, tops the individual average race with 116-29, with Frank Orelskey, of Bakery, right behind him with 115-22. Team honors are shared by Equipment and Sanico Bakery, the former having a 638 game and the latter a 1,668 set.

Ross Held 3 to 1 Favorite Over Jannazzo

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 25.—Champion Barney Ross and Izzy Jannazzo finished training today for their 15-round welterweight title fight in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

It will be Ross' first defense of the crown he regained from Jimmy McLarnin in May, 1935. The Chicagoan is a 3-to-1 favorite. Little or no Jannazzo money has shown up in the Broadway spots.

At Ferndale Ross, apparently as good as ever, stepped through a snappy drill, then hung up the gloves until he climbs into the ring with the East Sider.

Barney is boxing well, his timing is perfect and his footwork left nothing to be desired. Managers Sam Pian and Art Winch said they are entirely satisfied with his physical condition.

Jannazzo took his last workout in a New York gym. He'll do no more than limber up tomorrow. Ross will do a bit of road work, then loaf until time to motor to New York to weigh in at noon Friday.

Both boys have agreed to give Ceferina Garcia, Los Angeles Filipino, a title shot within 60 days, if returned the victor Friday.

John Henry Lewis, just back from England, where he beat Len Harvey, will engage in a couple of over-the-weight matches before turning to England to defend his light heavyweight title against Jock McAvoy, the British champion.

London promoters have guaranteed the Arizona Negro $20,000—just what he got for trouncing Harvey—to tackle McAvoy, whom he defeated in a title bout last March in Madison Square Garden.

Jewish Court League Opens Series Sunday

The Jewish Inter-Club Council Basketball League, composed of eleven teams, will open its schedule Sunday with a series of four games, the first of which will get under way at 4 p. m. in the Community Center gym.

Ben Ourisman, president of the board of directors of the Jewish Community Center, will toss up the first ball in the game between the Amicus and Brandies fives, which will open the activities of the loop.

Other games match the A. Z. A's with the Astor quint; A. Z. A. Alumni and the Olympians; and the Phi Sigma Fraternity with the Chidekals. The league will operate on successive Sundays and, after the first date, starting games will be listed for 2 p. m.

Rock Creek Horse Show Is Sunday

Boys and girls of the Rock Creek Riding Club will compete in eight classes at the Junior Horse Show, to be held at the club ring on Beach drive in the Maryland extension of Rock Creek Park Sunday. The show will start at 2 p. m.

Classes will include mounting and dismounting at various gaits, jumping over a course of five obstacles, including brush, gate, bar, logs and a 12-foot water jump.

Judges will be Mildred Elliott, head of the school of equitation at Converse College; Ilse Bahnemann and Elizabeth Cullen.

Southeastern Loop May Get 'Plan' Foes

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Nov. 25.—Amendments providing for an increase in the membership of the Southeastern Conference and new proposals regarding entrance requirements for athletes are scheduled for discussion at the annual meeting in December.

President John J. Tigert has proposed the new entrance requirements. Their nature was not disclosed, but conference sources indicated they are not designed to affect the plan of open subsidization adopted by the conference a year ago.

Two amendments providing for an increase in membership have been proposed for consideration by the executive committee at Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 11-12.

Drastic Rules Up.

Membership of the conference, fixed at a maximum of 13 institutions, may be increased by a three-fourths vote at the annual meeting. No institutions were named in the amendments, but certain schools in Virginia and North Carolina have opposed the "Graham plan" outlawing subsidization in the Southern Conference.

A proposal also will be made to require that all member institutions play at least five football games within the Southeastern Conference.

Drastic rules regarding pre-season football practice for prospective freshmen will be proposed, along with an attempt by at least two member institutions to increase the number of freshman games from two to four.

Tigers Choice Over Crippled American U.

American University's football team, victors in only two out of six games this season, left last night for Farmville, Va., to engage Hampden-Sydney College, its traditional rival, in a Thanksgiving Day battle at Death Valley.

The Eagles will enter the game strictly the underdogs, but hope to give a creditable account of themselves. Against Johns Hopkins, which bowed to Walter Young's charges by a 13-6 count, the Eagles flashed some of their finest offensive and defensive play of the season.

Hampden-Sydney defeated American U., 14-12, last season. The Tigers are much stronger than last season.

Still hampered by injuries, Coach Young will start a number of untried players. One of these is Jim Spratt, a big 6-foot tackle, who for four years has been a member of the scrub team, but never has played varsity ball. Coach Young will honor him with a starting berth, inasmuch as Spratt is a senior.

Heading the Tiger attack will be Limpy White, quarterback, who was prominent in his team's victory over Swarthmore and William and Mary.

Columbia Drilling On Stanford Plays

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Lou Little's Columbia gridmen went through another intensive practice session today for their forthcoming intersectional duel with their 1934 Rose Bowl victim, Stanford.

For the second straight day the squad went through a dummy scrimmage against the Stanford type of defense and then concentrated on stopping the Indians' offense in a scrimmage against the second and third stringers.

Sid Luckman, the sophomore passing star, was still walking with a perceptible limp, but was counted on to start in the game Saturday.

Groom Is Ejected In Sponging Case

Derby, also will be closely watched during his workouts.

In recent years there have been several attempts to "get to" horses at this track in order to slow or eliminate favorites so that a betting coupe could be made. Last Friday night, a sponge was inserted in the nose of Moon Side, favorite for the feature the next day. However, the sponge was discovered in a morning workout before damage had been done. Moon Side came out to win the race, leading from start to finish.

Formidable Field.

This track offers a fitting holiday program tomorrow. As usual, the Thanksgiving Handicap is the feature. The $2,500 added test is over the mile and sixteenth route and is for horses of all ages. A small but formidable field of six has been named. Walter M. Jeffords' Jean Bart, carrying top weight of 122 pounds, is the likely favorite. Aneroid, winner of a recent sprint, must carry 119 pounds over the longer route. C. V. Whitney will be represented by Piccolo, assigned 112 pounds. The Wheatley Stable's Reminding, Shandon Farm's Lamont, and former Jockey Frank Coltiletti's Sandy Boot round out the field.

The secondary feature is The Mayor H. W. Jackson Trophy Purse, named for Baltimore's first official, who will view the running from the judges' stand. This is a juvenile event at 6 furlongs. Only six are named and they are fairly evenly matched. Golden Era, Clingendael and My Elsie are scheduled to draw the chief play.

Limit fields of 12 are assured for the other five events. Special track policemen have been assigned to assist in handling the heavy traffic expected.

Post time for the first race is 1:30 p. m. with the daily double closing 15 minutes earlier.

Rosslyn Drubs R.E.A. in Pin Loop Match

Lucky Strike and National Beer Wage Battle for Second Position.

The Rosslyn Girls, champions of the Ladies District League, again exerted their supremacy over their opposition last night by swamping the R. E. A. Cleaners three games. Lucy Rose and Blanche Wootten advanced the pennant-bound victors with a 137-game and 354 set, respectively.

With first place far out of reach, Lucky Strike and National Beer, with 15 wins and 9 losses apiece, are waging a bitter fight for runner-up honors. Capt. Lorraine Gulli had a hot hand in Lucky Strike's clean sweep over R. E. A. Cleaners, rolling games of 122, 134 and 143 for a brilliant 399 total, and Marjorie Smith, with a 320 set, enabled National Beer to whitewash Georgetown. Lucky Strike's victory resulted from a 613 game and total pinfall of 1,699.

Edith Orpin led Convention Hall's odd-game decision over Highway Engineering and Ida Weinberg featured Temple's two wins over Arcadia with a 119 game and 335 set.

Capital duckpinnists are eagerly awaiting the rolling of the Ida Simmons Sweepstakes which will be rolled this Saturday at the Norfolk Health Center alleys, with all eyes turned toward the prestage and rich cash awards to be gained by a victory over the Nation's foremost pinwomen.

The stakes consists of ten games, the first five which will be rolled at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the last five at 8 in the evening.

At least 20 of the city's leading bowlers are planning to participate.

Lucille Young, one of the few two title winners in a national tournament, will represent Joe Blanken's Restaurant in the Ida Simmons Stakes. Blanken took an active interest in sponsoring duckpin teams a few years back and intends to renew his former interest by putting a girls team in the national tournament.

General Land Office with three victories over HOLC No. 1, replaced Commerce at the top of the Lucky Strike Ladies League . . . Phil Bobys with Julie Singer and Nick Rinaldi added to its line-up advanced their lead to six games in the Recreation League by swamping Marlboro Hotel. Joe Freschi shot a 401 set . . . George Beyer featured the rolling in the Dynamite League, shooting a 135 game and 365 set for the Analysts.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Monk Meyer, who has been running wild on the gridiron for West Point for three years now, couldn't make the Central High School team in 1928 . . . when his father, an Army officer, was detailed here . . . the Central coach scanned young Meyer and his 125 pounds and dispatched him to the school's lightweight team when he reported for practice . . . cocky then, as now, Meyer quit the squad in disgust and told the coach he was losing a great football player.

POVICH.

That Georgetown-Maryland football rivalry is an affair of honor . . . since the two colleges resumed relations three years ago, there has been no semblance of a written contract covering the games . . . arrangements for the division of the receipts are made verbally and the host school's accounting of the money is unquestioned . . . which is a refreshing note in these days of high-pressure football . . . and brings to mind that West Virginia University was recently sued by rival colleges for payment of guarantees promised but never fulfilled.

Unless George Washington defeats West Virginia today by more than the 28-to-0 margin by which Georgetown beat the Mountaineers, the debate over the respective merits of G. W. and Georgetown will continue to rage . . . by comparative scores of games played to date, I can show you on one hand that Georgetown is 60 points better than G. W. . . . and on the other hand that G. W. is 60 points better than Georgetown . . . the comparative-score method is about as logical as beating your head against the radiator.

This department was most unceremoniously reminded of its mistake in picking Maryland to beat Georgetown last Saturday . . . by an unidentified Georgetown man who phoned at the delightful hour of 4 a. m. Sunday morning . . . a transcript of the conversation: "Hello, Mister Povich?" . . . Yeah, so what?" "Hope I didn't wake you up. Just wanted to know the score of the Georgetown-Maryland game. Certainly hope I didn't wake you up. G'by."

Out of the past: Charley Buell, who led Harvard to victory over Yale in 1921 by running back a punt for a touchdown late in the game, is considered the Crimson's brainiest quarterback . . . Yale ends, down under the kick, never laid a hand on Buell . . . who had lulled 'em into false security by making fair catches on every previous Yale punt . . . The late Knute Rockne ranked George Gipp as the greatest football player of all time, but had a high respect for Jim Thorpe . . . Rockne declared that in one professional game in which he faced Thorpe, the big Indian hit him harder than he was ever hit all during his college days at Notre Dame.

President Curley Byrd, of Maryland, meant no offense to Coach Frank Dobson when he declared in an address at the Eastern High School football dinner that he would rather have been Maryland's coach than Maryland's president last Saturday afternoon . . . when the Maryland team was passing with a 6-to-0 lead and waiting until fourth down to punt while deep in its own territory . . . when Byrd engaged Dobson as coach at Maryland, he declared that Dobson was the absolute best coach in the East . . . and that Dobson's Richmond University teams were the best-drilled small-college teams in the South.

Early in November, Coach Jimmy Phelan, of the University of Washington, wrote Coach Frank Thomas, of Alabama, a letter expressing the hope that Alabama would finish its season unbeaten . . . because Washington would represent the Pacific Coast in the Rose Bowl and he wanted to invite Alabama as the Eastern contender . . . they are a cinch to be the two Rose Bowl teams if Washington knocks over Washington State Saturday and if Alabama is not tripped up by Vanderbilt today.

Post Scripts . . . .

Maynard Daniels, the District Golden Gloves heavyweight champion, has become the best-dressed fighter in local rings . . . the officers of the Fifth Marine Reserves, under whose banner Daniels pushes punches, chipped in and told him to buy the very best set of ring togs he could find . . . the ensemble is scarlet, trimmed with gold and yellow . . . and there is a large Marine Corps emblem splashed on the back of the bathrobe . . . Twelve members of the North Carolina squad, which plays Virginia at Charlottesville today, are letter men . . 32 members—or two-thirds of the squad—are from North Carolina . . . and 18 are sophomores . . . Jimmy Dunn is the latest film player to take up fight managing . . . he pulls the strings on a pug named Solly Lapera, from New Rochelle, N. Y., Dunn's home town . . . Tommy Armour and Bobby Cruickshank, eliminated in the early rounds of the P. G. A. tournament at Pinehurst, stuck around till the finish . . . in the hope of seeing Jimmy Thomson, one of the finalists, win . . . Thomson is from their bailiwick, in North Berwick, Scotland, and both Armour and Cruickshank took a great interest in him when he was just knee-high to a niblick.

Col. Rayner Lectures At Fencing Meeting

Col. Howard M. Rayner, former Olympic fencing star, was the principal speaker at a fencing lecture conducted yesterday at the home of Maj. E. L. Dyer, 2957 Newark street.

Players from the Y. M. C. A. fencing team, coached by Maj. Dyer, and Gunston Hall were present.

Others who attended included Col. and Mrs. Edwin Emerson, Commander E. W. Broadbent, Capt. S. L. Conner, Hon. W. N. Hood, of the British Embassy; Dr. Fitz Ermath, Ralph McCabe and Lieut. A. A. Burke, of the United States Navy.

Maj. Dyer has requested managers of fencing teams interested in matches with the Y. M. C. A. to communicate with him at Emerson 3884.

Buffalo Beats Lambertine in Bout Here

Baby Kid Chocolate Is Victor Over Billy Cross in Arena Fight.

Eugene Buffalo, always a good boxer and last night greatly improved even over his previous form, completely outclassed dangerous and willing Lambertine Williams to take a ten-round decision at Turner's Arena.

A slim crowd of fewer than 400 people witnessed the bout, which was as good a fight as one could ask for from bell to bell. The Baltimore welterweight, a knockout artist, strove mightily to apply a sleep-producing wallop, but was unable to land a single solid blow on the elusive Buffalo's person.

Pacing himself beautifully against Williams, the Philadelphia boxer carried the fight to Lambertine in every round. His concerted attack prevented Williams from getting set to really peg away with the same type of punch that has scored so many knockouts and when he deemed it wise to retreat, he did it so adroitly that Williams often was left swinging at the empty air.

Billy Cross, promising young welterweight, was forced to resign in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-round semifinal against Baby Kid Chocolate. Cross broke his right wrist after 2 minutes and 30 seconds of the fifth. Both boxers had been on the floor more times than a carpet and the bout was about even-stephen at the finish.

Johnny Johnson won a six-round decision from Kid Howie in another preliminary. In a brace of fours, Jimmy Glascoe outpointed Joe Knight and Kid Green won on a second-round technical knockout from Kid Diego.

Cross-Country Run Today to Draw 30

Thirty runners will answer the gun in the third annual National Capital 10,000-meter cross-country run today. The runners will start and finish at the Rock Creek Golf Course. The starting time is 10 a. m.

Bill Agee, the Baltimore veteran, will attempt to break the course record of 37 minutes 5 seconds, set by J. Sanders, of the Department of Agriculture, last year.

Eighteen youngsters will start in the junior division. The outstanding competitors in this event are the Sullivan brothers, Melvin and Cleveland, of the Washington Boys' Club. Each of the brothers has won a practice race.

The junior race will be one lap of the 10,000-meter course, or 2 miles 145 yards. Today will mark the inauguration of the junior race.

The entries:

John Leisz, George Shorb, B. G. Chitwood, Bus Nicholson, J. Griggs, M. Coven, J. Looney, W. Souder, Myles Loushrin, Jack Risdon, H. Clark, Washington Track and Field; W. Agee, C. Miller, Jr., D. Heinicke, F. Dengas, P. Jachelski, J. Morson, W. Smith, Stonewall Democratic Club, Baltimore, Md.; Lieut. R. Bauer, New York Athletic Club, New York City; Dr. G. Lieberman, Passon A. A., Philadelphia, Pa.; Chick Maguire, Police Boys Club, No. 5; C. Sholtes, C. Scharpf, J. Driscoll, J. Lyman, A. Warminski, O. Johnson, G. Brown, F. Lewis, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.; J. Spear, Washington Track and Field.

Junior Division—2 miles 40 yards.

C. Callahan, T. Nutwell, D. Acton, D. Nail, J. Dean, S. Whittington, L. Marsh, W. Walker, Police Boys Club, No. 5; M. Sullivan, C. Sullivan, A. Mack, Washington Boys Club; T. Temes, Bullock to Meet On Gevinson Program

Joe Temes, recent conquerer of Billy Bullock, has been paired with Ray Ingram, No. 1 lightweight challenger in the District, in a six-round preliminary to the Lou Gevinson-Al Shaeffer bout at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

The Gevinson bout, which will mark Lou's professional debut, is scheduled for six rounds also, in deference to Lou's unfamiliarity with the longer distance bouts.

Three other six-round contests and a four-round curtain-raiser will be announced later.

Today's Story: Hunting of the Bird

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 25.—In the midst of our argument with the butcher over the weight and price of a Thanksgiving turkey, in barged Ralph McGill, the old turkey hunter from Jaw-Juh.

"Why, you granite canyon native," roared Mr. McGill, "so you buy those birds on the hoof up here. We hunt for 'em down in Georgia where everything's peaches and turkey."

It's almost as hard to out-talk Turkey Hunter McGill as it is to outwrite him, so we snatched one of his big cigars and listened to him talk turkey.

"You don't sleep much the night before a turkey hunt," he began, "because you're off in the greatest dawn with a million birds singing and hopping in the trees, marching silently through forest trail with a gun on your shoulder and the dew sprinkling your face from the bushes as you go by them.

"Silently each hunter is dropped out of line at a motion of the leader's hand. Some 60 yards away you can see the man next to you. You are terribly alone. The stillness is so emphatic it seems the whole world must be still and that nowhere bands are playing, children shouting or boiler factories operating.

"As the pulse begins to beat, you hear the leader's faint whistle. You know the beaters are moving forward, all in a line, and that the noise they make will make the turkeys get up and fly. You slip the safety off your gun. And you wait. And then comes a voice, crying in the wilderness, long and drawn out, saying: 'Mark 'em, mark 'em.' It means the turkeys are flying—turkey dinners weighing 18 or 20 pounds apiece.

"You look up. There up above one of them is hurtling out of the trees, flying high and at racing speed. And you know it's yours. You try to remember to lead, you catch the body and swing the gun out ahead and pull the trigger. The explosion roars in your ears and you all but yell out as you see the turkey collapse and plummet through limbs of trees and strike the earth with a thud.

"You remember that a wounded one—and these wild ones are strong and durable—may try to run away. So you turn and start yelling and running, your breath all gone. You land in a thicket of brambles that tear your face and clothes, and you hear the leader laughing and saying: 'Go on back, you've got this one, you can get another.'

"Ah," mused Turkey Hunter McGill, "and you never hunted turkey."

Then he told us the story of old Hook, the laziest turkey hunter in Jaw-Juh.

Old Hook started out to walk up a turkey but soon he lay down for a nap beside a log. His clothes were too large for him and they hung on a pair of faded old suspenders. As he opened his eyes he saw a large, wild gobbler feeding near him. Old Hook flung out his hand and grabbed the gobbler by the leg.

It was a bit difficult because a wild turkey's wings can all but knock down a man, but old Hook had him at last. He knew he couldn't get him back to the house alive—and there was his gun.

After considerable thought, old Hook managed to tie the turkey to a small bush with his suspenders. He got back his breath, his gun, stepped back a few paces, fired, and then looked.

What he saw sickened old Hook. There was his turkey racing off through the woods. He wore a part of old Hook's suspenders. The charge had missed the gobbler and cut the suspenders in two just near the small bush.

"Somewhere in south Georgia," drawled Turkey Hunter McGill, "there's the only turkey in the world which wears suspenders."

Gunwale and Tragedian Finish in Dead Heat at Bowie Track

Marching Home Victor in What May Be Her Last Race.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 25.—For the first time during the fall season, two horses finished in a dead heat for first money in the sixth event of today's racing card.

B. F. Christmas' Tragedian and Mrs. A. Chandler's Gunwale could not be separated by the judges after they consulted the photo negative and backers of both horses participated in the pay-off.

Tragedian paid a $7.10 mutuel, while Gunwale, the favorite brought his backers a $4.30 mutuel.

Tragedian and Gunwale were forward factors from the beginning of the mile and a sixteenth test, but it was not until the middle of the stretch that they began their even-Stephen battle.

Marching Home Wins.

The Middleburg Stable's Marching Home, a sprightly daughter of John P. Grier, ran what is said to be the final race of her career, and turned in a smashing victory. She is scheduled to be shipped to the Virginia farm for breeding purposes tomorrow.

Ridden by Jockey Nick Wall, Marching Home bounded over the finish line a length and a quarter in front of the Brandywine Stable's Turkey Run, with Beth Bon, representing the Bomar Stable, third five lengths away. Only six competed in the 6-furlong sprint called the Wetipquin Handicap.

A Thanksgiving Eve crowd of 8,000 witnessed the sport conducted under ideal conditions.

Happy Knot, notorious as a quick beginner, stepped out in front at the start. Marching Home was next with Beth Bon third. Happy Knot managed to open daylight on Marching Home at the far turn, but it was evident that Jockey Wall was saving his mount.

Just before the stretch was reached, Happy Knot dropped back and Marching Home took up the pace-setting burden. Wall then went into some serious riding and it is well that he did for Turkey Run came from far back to make a determined bid in the closing stages. Marching Home paid $8.60.

The daily double brought a return of $110.60 to those who coupled Blacksod with Happy Road.

Blacksod, a daughter of Boot to Boot and a juvenile that has had much hard luck this fall, sprinted out of the maiden ranks in the first race of the day. The filly was capably handled by Jockey Bobby Root and paid a $17 mutuel. She shook off Working Girl at the far turn and then had to be kept to a drive to withstand the closing rush of the favored Harvesting. Third money went to Fair Albion.

Portden Pays $16.60.

Portden, at a $16.60 mutuel, showed a return to best form in the second race. The ancient son of The Porter fought all the way with Epitapth and had a neck margin over his rival at the end. Jockey L. Coffman did a splendid job of riding on the winner. Parity was third in the field of 11.

The Shandon Farm added another winning purse to its string in the third race when Jockey Jackie Westrope rode Happy Road to a neck decision over Emily Jane, a field horse. Bib came from far back to be third in the field of 11. Happy Road was always close and when shaken up closed with good speed to hold the filly safe.

The Barncastle Farm's Molasses Bob upset the talent in the fourth race, taking a photographic decision from Rollicker, a field horse. Jockey Eddie De Camillis rode the winner, which paid a $22 mutuel. Molasses Bob was in the middle of the pack for 5 furlongs and came around with good speed to take what appeared to be a decisive lead. However, Rollicker came with a belated dash at the end, but barely missed the verdict.

The final race went to Credulous, paying an $8.10 mutuel. Zempla was second.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACKSOD, $17.00, $3.90, $2.90; HARVESTING, $2.30, $2.20; FAIR ALBION, $3.30.

BLACKSOD, off alertly, disposed of WORKING GIRL leaving the backstretch, was hard ridden through the stretch and was tiring at the end. HARVESTING was off in the first flight and had no excuses. FAIR ALBION worked his way to contention gradually from a slow beginning and was going willingly at the end. TEDSIM could not threaten. WORKING GIRL went up on the inside to take command soon after the break and tired badly thereafter.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:05. Winner, E. Kane's b. h. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PORTDEN, $16.60, $6.70, $4.10; EPITAPH, $3.20, $2.70; PARITY, $11.60.

PORTDEN pressed the pace of EPITAPH while being rated, rallied to strong hand riding in the stretch and closed with excellent courage to hold sway to the end. EPITAPH had good speed from the beginning and fought it out willingly. PARITY came around on outside of field entering the stretch and closed gamely. AUNT FLOR gained some ground in the late stages. LOLOMA tired from early usage. BABY SWEEP came from far back. STAND BY had early speed.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:33½. Winner Shandon Farms' b. g. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY ROAD, $10.90, $6.10, $6.20; EMILY JANE (field), $20.90, $11.40; BIB, $10.70.

HAPPY ROAD, forwardly placed from the beginning and raised while holding position, was put to drive in the early stretch and closed with good courage under mild pressure. EMILY JANE moved up with a rush on the swing for the stretch and fought it out willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. BIB came from far back and closed resolutely. JIM CORN was badly bumped at the first turn, gained with a sharp move in the early stretch and then tired. SORCERESS, quickest to begin, set the pace under hustling tactics and tired. OVERLAP went evenly, but could not threaten. The others were outrun.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $110.60.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. The White Hunter. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:06. Winner, Brancastle Farms' b. c. (2), by Challenger II—Molasses Jane. Trained by R. Roberts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOLASSES BOB, $22.00, $15.10, $8.10; ROLLICKER (field), $16.80, $8.00; HARRY'S DREAM, $4.10.

MOLASSES BOB, steadied along on the outside to the far turn, improved his position gradually, disposed of HARRY'S DREAM at the eighth pole and barely lasted ahead of ROLLICKER. The latter, off last, came to the extreme outside in the stretch and closed with a belated rush that just missed. HARRY'S DREAM ran CLARION CALL and COMPANY into defeat and was tiring gradually at the end. SWIFT FLASH showed an excellent effort. UVALDE had a rough trip. YOUNG AGNES moved up at the far turn and then dropped out of it. COMPANY and CLARION CALL tired from battling for the pace.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:33½. Off at 3:36½. Winner, Middleburg Stable's ch. f. (4), by John P. Grier—Warrior Lass. Trained by M. Brady. Value to winner, $758; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 3-5, 1:13 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARCHING HOME, $8.60, $4.90, $3.30; TURKEY RUN, $7.00, $4.40; BETH BON, $3.60.

MARCHING HOME, off well, took command from HAPPY KNOT approaching the final bend, drew out and had to be kept to hard drive to hold TURKEY RUN safe. TURKEY RUN, slow to break, came sharply on the swing for the stretch and closed with good courage. BETH BON went evenly within striking distance, but could not threaten. STOCKS and EVERGOLD were outrun throughout. HAPPY KNOT stopped badly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02½. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. A. Chandler's b. g. (4), by Constitution—Castilla, and B. F. Christmas' b. g. (3), by Claptrap—Lady Glassen. Trained by F. L. Moore and B. F. Christmas. Value to winner, $425, $425; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25, 0:50, 1:16 2-5, 1:43 3-5, 1:51 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—†TRAGEDIAN, $7.10, $3.10, $4.90; †GUNWALE, $4.30, $4.80, $4.20. MISS TIPTOE, $6.80.

TRAGEDIAN, in the thick of contention from the start, ran BALLY BAY into defeat, rallied willingly when placed to drive and appeared to have been up. GUNWALE, in close quarters to the backstretch, was steered wide entering the stretch and fought it out willingly. MISS TIPTOE came with good speed on the swing for the stretch and hung. BALLY BAY tired after setting the pace. POOP DECK had a rough trip. ITALIAN HARRY closed some ground in the stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:37½. Winner, E. K. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREDULOUS, $8.10, $4.20, $3.20; ZEMBLA, $3.90, $3.30; MANNERLY, $4.30.

CREDULOUS, sent to the front in the sprint to the final turn, shook off challenges from MANNERLY, SUN ABBOT and DEPARTED and had enough left to hold ZEMBLA safe in the final drive. ZEMBLA, a trailer for a quarter, came around field to gain sharply in the early stretch, but was hanging at the finish. MANNERLY went forwardly throughout and showed a good effort. DEPARTED moved up to force the pace of CREDULOUS and then tired gradually. LUCKY TURN went evenly. DOUBLE FINESSE tired.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 25.

Dear Al:

The camera gave the decision to two inside horses today. However, neither of the finishes was close. However, the dead heat on the sixth looked like a victory for Tragedian. Uvalde was claimed again today. That's the fourth time the Prince Pal gelding has changed hands this fall. If you want to play the daily double tomorrow, give yourself at least an hour to get to the track. Bowie offers a good program today and hopes to play host to a 20,000 crowd. The trainer of the winning horse and the jockey will be presented with gold watches following the running of the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap here on Saturday. In addition, the winning owner will get a trophy. Ira Hanford and Jackie Westrope are battling for the riding honors at this meeting. The dead heat slowed down the program and the final race today was run in the twilight, many being unable to follow their choices. Happy Road, winner of the third race, was a star in Florida last winter. The Nash brothers, of Chicago, are having a good time watching their Shandon Farm horses win.

BILL.

First race—Kenty won a race at Havre de Grace and was disqualified. Tomorrow appears to be the day for this one to officially leave the maiden ranks. Has worked briskly and needs only the right ride. Gala Dame showed a fair effort last out and is dangerous. Perfect Devil for the show. Rouge et Noir is far down the list but belongs high if allowed to start.

Second race—My Surprise drew the right money last out but something went amiss. Has plenty of speed and may have better luck this time. Joyride looms as the one to beat. Princess Athene and Patsey Begone hold some chance.

Third race—Jim John, after being given a rest, had an outing the other day. Gave indications of a return to best form and I'm going to string along in anticipation of a good price. Miss Twinkle won her last and is dangerous. Busby and Googles both failed as tips last out.

Fourth race—Clingendaal and Golden Era are a close fit in this field. Both have good works and fine races to recommend them. Careful Miss hasn't run back to that smashing maiden victory and will be hard to beat if she does.

Fifth race—Aneroid, winner of a sprint earlier in the week, appeared capable of running two miles in that race. Tomorrow, he tackles better company and must carry 119 pounds. However, I'm going to string along. Jean Bart and Piccolo for the place and show awards.

Sixth race—Caught ran a bad race last out but previous to that the son of Sting turned in a brilliant. With the right handling this fellow should score. Chatmoss and Silent for the place and show.

Seventh race—Mad Frump and Ironbound, both coming off good races, promise to battle it out for the main award in this field. Cynwyd, a good one in New England, could be turned loose.

Best bet—Aneroid.

1—Arlow, Kenty, Miss Mared.
2—Joyride, Aradin' Home, Masked Gal.
3—Pencader, Mariolet, Busby.
4—Careful Miss, Grisz, Golden Era, Clingendaal.
—Aneroid, Jean Bart, Lemont.
6—Reminding, Caught, Chatmoss.
7—Strophe, Tack, Mad Frump.
Best bet—Joyride.

Steel Activity Increases With Price Advance

Heavy Volume of Buying Likely to Continue Through Next Month.

New York, Nov. 25.—"Price advances of $1 to $4 a ton on semi-finished and finished steel and $1 a ton on pig iron, which had been expected by buyers, were announced on Monday and Tuesday of this week and were preceded by an increased volume of anticipatory buying, resulting in a slight bulge in steel-plant operations in some districts and an average for the country as a whole of 74½ per cent, up a half point from last week, says Iron Age in its weekly summary today. The review adds:

"Indications point to a heavy volume of steel buying within the next few days that will sustain ingot output at its present rate, or higher, until the end of December.

"The official announcement of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, which initiated the steel-price advances, was issued late Monday and was followed Tuesday by statements that other steel companies would adopt the same quotations. Buyers are given only until the last day of November to enter orders at present prices for December shipment, the new prices for first quarter going into effect December 1. In pig iron the price advances take effect immediately.

"It is the intention of the steel mills to take only as much business at current prices as can be rolled and shipped during December, but it is quite possible that the volume of buying may necessitate the carryover of some of the lower-priced tonnage into January. However, the higher operating costs of the steel companies will make them more exacting in restricting purchases than they usually have been at the time of a price advance.

"The principal price advances are as follows: Forging quality semi-finished, $1; re-rolling quality, $2; alloy billets, $4; bars, shapes, plates and sheet piling, $3; cold-finished steel bars, $4; hot-rolled strip, tin-mill black plate and all grades of sheets, except vitreous enameling, $4; vitreous enameling, $3; rails, from $36.375 to $39; tie plates, $2; wire rods, $3; bright wire, $2; spring wire, $3; nails, $4, and other wire products, $2 to $4.

N. Y. Central Orders 100 Locomotives

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad Co. announced today it had placed orders for 100 locomotives, to cost approximately $8,600,000, and for rails and accessories running to an additional $5,500,000.

Fifty of the locomotives will be built by the American Locomotive Co. and the others, of a new type for use on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railway, by the Lima Locomotive Works.

Profit-Taking Checks Rise In Wheat Price

July Touches 1.05¾, New High Record for This Season.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—In a recurrence of uneasiness regarding European war talk, together with bigger export sales by Canada, wheat values displayed notable strength at times today.

Dust storms over parts of the domestic winter crop belt hoisted July wheat temporarily to a new high price record for the season, $1.05¾. Profit-taking then, however, led to 1¼ cents reaction in the July delivery, whereas December and May retained part of an advance of about a cent.

Chicago wheat futures closed irregular, ⅜ off to ½ up, compared with yesterday's finish. December 117⅝@117¾, May 115⅝@115¾, July 104⅝@104¾, corn at ⅛ decline to ⅜ advance, December 105⅛@105¼, May new 99½@99⅝, July new 95¼@95⅜, oats ½ lower to ¼ higher, December 45@45⅛, and rye ⅛@½ down, December 95. Provisions results were unchanged to a bulge of 20 cents.

Paris Bourse Weak As War Fears Grow

Paris, Nov. 25 (AP).—Tension between Germany and Russia and the increasing gravity of developments arising from the Spanish civil war were reflected today in the bourse, where international issues receded sharply.

After partial recovery from Monday's weak market another wave of selling pushed down government bonds and bank stocks. Some recovery was noted at the close.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Closing Stock Prices Are Irregularly Lower; Government Bonds Lag; Dividend Tide Rises.

New York, Nov. 25.—Stocks continued irregular and trading volume was lessened by the holiday preparations, but the tone was fairly good and numerous stocks rose 1 to 3 points, but late selling brought losses for a majority. Bonds were somewhat unsettled, with a tendency toward weakness in the Government list. December wheat closed a quarter of a cent higher at 117⅝ cents a busnel.

The most that can be said on the news side so far as security prices were concerned, is that the extra, special, and arrearage dividend payments show no sign of slackening. The nearer approach to the time when corporation directors can estimate with any degree of certainty the earnings for the year hastens the climax of such declarations, for all are disbursements designed to relieve corporations from paying the penalty tax on undistributed profits.

Although the $7 a share declared yesterday by the United States Steel Corporation directors on the cumulative preferred shares was in no sense an extra, since accumulations on the stock will amount to $9.25, the payment was equally inspired by the tax law. It might have been that the Steel Corporation would have found it more advantageous to its shareholders to have paid off the arrears, accumulated during the depression, with additional stock; but after the passage of the tax law to have done so would have severely penalized stockholders.

Steel Preferred.

Last month a beginning was made toward reducing the corporation's obligation to the preferred shareholders, and at the time it was hinted that the remainder of earnings for the year would be paid out. It may therefore be assumed that the $7 a share just voted for the preferred is the amount which the directors feel the corporation will earn and which otherwise would be subject to the undistributed profits tax this year. The amount, incidentally, is somewhat better than generally anticipated, so that the corporation has been doing better in the past two months than outsiders had supposed.

So large an organization as the United States Steel Corporation needs a great deal of cash, and the heavy outlay about to be made indicates two things. In the first place the directors apparently are confident that the cash needs in the early portion of next year can be met from current operations. In other words, the board has made a prediction that next year will begin with a high rate of business activity. In the second place, if the intake should fall off or if unexpectedly heavy demands for cash should arise, the corporation's credit is good enough for it to borrow at short term from the banks for a low rate—probably not to exceed 2 per cent and maybe at 1½ per cent.

Penalty Rates.

To have the undisputed profits cash and pay the heavy penalty tax on it would work out a much higher rate. As usually calculated, the equivalent rate for the use of money so retained would mount up to perhaps 10 per cent, a penalty rate, indeed, for U. S. Steel in these days of low money rates. While the steel affair must be regarded as a bullish development and is heartening all around, it should not blind any one to the inherent dangers of the surplus profits tax.

Given another attack of hard times, probably the strong corporations, and certainly the weaker ones, would find it no easy matter either to obtain long-term capital from stockholders now receiving higher dividends or to find banks to carry them on short term. Just as the financial day is now filled with hurrah news of higher dividends, the time may come when it will seem as though all corporations have simultaneously been forced to suspend dividends and perhaps interest payments as well, because the treasuries have been kept cleaned out of cash.

Some brokers reported foreign banking on balance in stocks, but dollars were a little lower in terms of sterling and francs. Low-priced shares were the most popular, stocks selling at under 20 a share making up the dozen most active issues. However, some of the preferred stocks made the widest gains. United States Steel preferred opened about 2 points higher at the best price ever reached. Cuban shares continued active and strong. Alleghany issues recovered 1 to 2 points.

Good-sized fractions were lost by the majority of stocks in the motor, steel, rail, chemical, mining and store sections, although the mail orders were higher. Montgomery Ward was stimulated by its extra payment and stock plan. Utilities and foods were firm. Amusements were easier.

Stocks to rise sharply were Amerada, American & Foreign Power preferreds, the locomotives, Consolidation Coal, Virginia Iron, Gulf States Steel, Market Street Railway, Nickel Plate, U. S. Gypsum and U. S. Freight.

Price Disparities.

The list of price disparities, mostly among securities of companies in process of reorganization, is a large one and some are difficult to understand even though it is true that short selling and margin restrictions make it difficult for the arbitrageurs and others to put the market to rights. One reader calls attention to Munson Steamship 6½ per cent debentures which sold last week at 15-16 on the curb and at the same time the secured 6 per cent bonds sold over the counter at 18-20. He asserts that all preliminary plans give the secured 6 per cents at least twice the valuation of the debentures. American Writing Paper securities also present a weird picture, as do those of Botany Mills. Activity in Warner Quinlan also seems to be based largely on a lack of information and a disregard of probabilities.

Deflation.

Deflation in stock exchange membership values continues. A sale was arranged today at a drop of $7,000 to $95,000, the lowest since the spring of last year. Numerous sales recently show the desire of some brokers to escape the restrictions on professional trading about to be laid on by the SEC. Those remaining are wondering how the damage can be repaired. It will be difficult to bring in larger public trading if margin requirements are again lifted and higher commission rates, while in theory effective in a monopoly business, might reduce trading—unless stocks were split by the wholesale.

Seat Brings $95,000, Low Price for Year

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—The value of stock exchange seats today fell to a new low for 1936 with the arrangement of a transfer at $95,000, down $5,000 from the previous sale which matched the year's minimum of $100,000 set last May. The high for the year was $174,000, last February.

Stock exchange circles have attributed the sale of seats on a declining market to fears among the members that the program proposed by the Securities and Exchange Commission for segregating broker-dealer functions, if adopted, may adversely affect stock exchange membership earning power.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Nov. 25 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Demand for domestic wool continued very persistent today. The turnover, however, was moderate because offers were restricted.
Twelve months Texas wools of average character brought 1.00@1.02 scoured basis. Bulk French combing ⅛ blood territory wools moved at 96@98 cents. Combing ¾ blood territory wools were in demand at 92@94 cents and 82@85 was readily obtainable on combing ¼ blood territory wools.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 25.—The stock market closed weak as selling pressure continued, although some of the industrial issues recovered from the low levels of the day. Steel and tobacco shares were exceptionally weak, in the early dealings and oils and mining issues also lost considerable ground. Home rails held steady, but the transatlantic section sold lower.
Paris—Prices for securities were mixed at the close of the bourse. Rentes were in better demand, but finished the day with losses of nearly one franc. Canadian Pacific declined 14 francs and Royal Dutch reacted 26 francs to 4,469 francs.
Liverpool—A better demand prevailed for foreign wheat and rains were reported in some section of the Argentina belt. Futures closed ¼d to 1⅛d higher. Cotton futures closed 3 to 6 points lower, fluctuations and trading were very narrow, with trade buying absorbing light hedging.

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics — By Bob Zuppke, Famous Football Coach.

WELL BUD, THIS IS THE NIGHT I REALLY GO TO THE PRESIDENTS HOME FOR DINNER!
FINE, NED—I'LL JUST TAG ALONG IF YOU DON'T MIND
BUT YOU CAN'T—YOU WEREN'T INVITED—AND YOU DON'T KNOW THEM!
WHAT OF IT? I'LL TELL THEM YOU DRAGGED ME ALONG AGAINST MY WILL

I BELIEVE YOU WOULD, AT THAT OF COURSE I WILL—TAKE IT EASY—I'M GETTING READY
I WARN YOU, BUD—I'LL SWEAR I DON'T KNOW YOU
I'LL GET IN IF I HAVE TO PRY OPEN A WINDOW!

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE — By Martha Orr

HEY, HOW COME YER NOT WORKIN' TODAY, MARY?
IT'S THANKSGIVING, BILL. DON'T TELL ME YOU'VE FORGOTTEN ANY HOLIDAY THAT MEANS A BIG DINNER.
GEE, GUESS I DID. BUT, OH BOY, I HOPE MY NAME'S ON PART OF WHATEVER THAT IS I SMELL COOKIN'.
BELIEVE IT OR NOT, IT'S TURKEY-
GOSH, I WISHT MARY WOULDN'T BE SO FREE WITH HER INVITATIONS. THAT TURKEY WONT GO FAR.
HERE'S DAD FLICK AND SLIM. COME RIGHT IN.
HOW'S THAT, BILL? BIG ENOUGH TO SATISFY YOU?
HUH? OH SURE, IT'S PLENTY FOR ME MARY, BUT WHAT ARE THE REST OF YUH GONNA EAT?
HEY!
MARTHA ORR

JOE PALOOKA — A Cinch — By Ham Fisher

BONG
AS JOE COMES OUT OF HIS CORNER HIS PLAN IS TO AVOID DANGER, AND AT THE SAME TIME TO INSTILL FALSE CONFIDENCE IN DROPPER
AND THE CROWD LAUGHS AS THE DUKE APPARENTLY MAKES MIKE BEAN MISS SEVERAL WILD SWINGS---
-- JOE IS BEING VERY CAREFUL OF HIS NOSE WITH THE PUTTY INSIDE-DROPPER, WHILE IN A CLINCH TRIES TO MASH THE SCHNOZ WITH HIS OPEN GLOVE-- BUT A QUICK SOLID SMASH-- WHATTA YA THINK OF 'IM?
HE'S A SUCKER FER ME ANY TIME I'M READY—JUST LIKE I FIGURED.
--IN HIS RIBS BRINGS THE HAND DOWN TO PROTECT HIMSELF. THE BELL RINGS---- IT WAS DROPPER'S ROUND BY A MILE.

THE GUMPS — Diamonds Are Trumps — By Clifford McBride

HE'S BUSY JUST NOW—IF YOU WILL WAIT—PERHAPS—
11-26
WAIT? THAT'S ALL I'VE BEEN DOING AROUND HERE—HE'S HARDER TO SEE THAN TEN BANK PRESIDENTS!
WHY SHOULDN'T HE BE? HE'S MORE IMPORTANT THAN TEN BANK PRESIDENTS! MAYBE I CAN HELP YOU—HAVE YOU YOUR BUSINESS CARD?
SHOW HIM THIS AN' TELL HIM THERE'S MORE WHERE IT CAME FROM OOH! A DIAMOND!
